Azana Abandons Madrid, Reaches Catalan Capital

Defenders Prepare for Bitter Resistance; Foe Is 16 Miles Away.

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Spain, Oct. 19.—President Manuel Azana of Spain arrived in Barcelona tonight from Madrid.

Reports Azana and other government leaders had made preparations to flee Madrid have been increasingly recurrent of late as the insurgent armies pressed closer to the capital.

There was no official explanation of Azana's arrival in the coastal city.

Azana was accompanied by three cabinet ministers. They were Mariano Ruiz Furns, minister of justice; Jose Gibral Pereira, minister without portfolio, and Manuel Irujo, also minister without portfolio.

Giral Pereira has been called the "strong man" of Azana's regime.

Transfer Unconfirmed.

Authorities at Barcelona would not confirm a report that Azana's arrival was the first step in the transfer of his government from Fascist-encircled Madrid to Barcelona.

Azana arrived at 8:10 p. m. and was greeted by Luis Companys, head of the Catalan government, and members of his staff.

Gen. Masquelet formerly was minister of war in both the Lerroux and Azana cabinets.

A small crowd of citizens recognized the president when he alighted from a car in front of Company's palace where he will stay.

"Long live Azana!" they cried.

An official statement issued shortly after his arrival said only that "the president has come to Barcelona to show his gratitude for the valiant fight which Catalonia is making on behalf of liberty."

Cab Army Mobilized.

Madrid, Oct. 19 (AP).—The sorely pressed government defenders of Madrid tonight mobilized a "taxicab army" similar to that employed by the French in the first battle of the Marne.

At the front, the routed government militia fell back on Torrejon de la Calzada, only 16 miles from Madrid.

Every available man or boy who could aim a rifle was pressed into service as the government utilized every resource at its command in a last effort to stem the Fascist advance.

Three thousand taxis were lined up with drivers assigned to each in the event it is necessary to augment the lorries and double-decked buses now being used for troop transport.

The war ministry ceased denials of the imminence of the rebel advance, and diverted its efforts to impressing the populace with the

Portugal to Strengthen Army, Dictator Says

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Portuguese army will be rearmed and strengthened in the near future, Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar announced tonight.

Speaking at cavalry maneuvers near this capital, the "strong man" of Portugal asserted:

"The army cannot be a group of civil servants in uniform."

Hitler Appoints Goering Leader In Trade Drive

By the United Press.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today elevated Gen. Herman Wilhelm Goering, former war ace, to his second in command by granting him sweeping powers to carry out a four-year plan for economic rehabilitation.

Hitler's decree, dated October 18 at Berchtesgarten, entitles Goering to promulgate binding decrees necessary for the task. He is entitled to question and give orders to all official departments, including the highest government departments as well as the Nazi party and affiliated organizations.

The appointment was considered a victory for conservative circles. The delegation of such sweeping power, making the rotund general unquestionably the second strongest figure in the Reich, suggests that the plan envisages the strictest coordination of all forces of the state and party to make Germany independent of the world.

After Hitler's assumption of power in 1933, Goering organized the German police and carried on a ruthless campaign against communism. He organized the air ministry and is largely responsible for Germany's present high rank as an air power.

Count to Meet Hitler.

Rome, Oct. 19 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, entrained for Berlin tonight for conferences with Chancellor Hitler and Germany's foreign minister, Konstantin von Neurath.

Senator Couzens Suffers a Relapse

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP).—Senator James Couzens had suffered a "slight relapse" and was in a serious condition in Harper Hospital, his physician, Dr. Hugo Freund, said tonight. His condition was reported as not critical, however.

Senator Couzens, who was defeated for the Republican nomination after he issued a strong indorsement of President Roosevelt, was taken to the hospital for a "general examination" two weeks ago. He was suffering a back strain. The Senator left his sick bed to dine with President Roosevelt last Thursday.

Dr. Freund said his condition had become complicated by a euremic condition.

School Board Loses Verdict In Kemp Case

Court Says Non-Resident Children of U. S. Aids Must Be Taught.

5 Days Granted for New Answer to Suit; Appeal Held Probable.

District public schools must not be closed to children living outside the Capital if their parents are Government employes stationed here, Justice Jennings Bailey ruled yesterday in District Court.

His decision, handed down in the case of 11-year-old Lois Kemp, daughter of a Public Works Administration official, was received with consternation by Board of Education members, worried over congestion in the junior and senior high schools.

Lois lives in Clarendon, Va. Her father, John S. Kemp, is assistant disbursing officer of the PWA. Last June the girl was graduated from Fillmore Grade School in Georgetown. When she applied last month for admittance to Gordon Junior High, she was rejected on the grounds the school was overcrowded and could not accommodate nonresidents.

Kemp asked the court for a writ of mandamus to compel Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schols, to admit Lois. Yesterday, climaxing a month's legal tilting between Kemp's lawyer, Robert E. Lynch, and the Corporation Counsel's Office, Justice Bailey sustained a demurrer filed by Lynch and thus gave the first round of the bitterly fought battle to the Clarendon schoolgirl.

Board Meets Tomorrow.

The Board of Education will meet tomorrow and it is virtually certain the latest development in the nonresident problem, for years a thorn in the board's side, will be discussed.

Justice Bailey gave Vernon West, chief assitant corporation counsel, who presented the District's case, five days in which to prepare and submit an amended answer to the suit. During this period, and probably longer, the mandamus writ will be held in abeyance, which means the Kemp girl will remain barred from Gordon. She is studying under a Washington tutor.

Hundreds of children who, like Lois, have fathers or mothers working here but living in nearby Maryland or Virginia, will be affected by the ultimate outcome of the legal controversy.

West said he will file an amended answer within the five-day limit, but admitted he does not expect it to alter the decision. He asserted he will carry the fight to the Court of Appeals—unless the Board of Education should decide to withdraw from further action—and the new arguments will be used in connection with the appeal.

"I will show," he declared, "that the Board of Education has consistently urged Congress to make adequate appropriations for the schools. It is because of overcrowding resulting from lack of funds that it was found necessary to restrict the number of nonresident children."

Mrs. Doyle Critical.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, also stressed the schools' "niggardly appropriations."

"The problem of looking out for our children," she said, "will be a matter of appropriations. It is up to the Bureau of the Budget and Congress. Our greatest single worry is the size of our classes.

"The long years when we haven't had enough money for our District children because of niggardly appropriations will be brought to the attention of those persons responsible because of the acuteness of the problem brought about by this court action."

Henry Gilligan, board vice president and a lawyer, said the verdict will aggravate a congestion problem already critical, but added, however, that it was the only proper one which could be handed down.

The issue centered around inter-

Ambassador Rosso Will Marry Mrs. Bunker, Is Capital Rumor

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. F. WILKINSON BUNKER.

Wedding to Take Place in Moscow as Soon as Washington Divorcee Becomes Naturalized Citizen of Italy, Reports Say.

Augusto Rosso, former Italian Ambassador to the United States, shortly will marry Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker, Chicago, Denver and Washington divorcee, it was rumored in Capital society and diplomatic circles yesterday.

Mrs. Bunker, the rumors were, will depart soon for Moscow, where Signor Rosso now is representing Mussolini's government.

Said Mrs. Bunker yesterday:

"I have no statement to make except that it is an unconfirmed rumor. I was as much surprised at published reports as anyone in Washington."

According to reports, the marriage will take place in Moscow as soon as Mrs. Bunker becomes a naturalized citizen of Italy. Naturalization proceedings, it is understood, are formally under way.

Mrs. Bunker, attractive blue-eyed brunette, one of the city's most popular society matrons, is the mother of a son and a daughter.

Last August she sailed for Italy aboard the Conte di Savoia when Signor Rosso returned to his native country. She was accompanied by Mrs. C. R. Enos, of Denver, Colo. After traveling through Italy and visiting in Rome, Mrs. Bunker returned here earlier in the month.

Townsend Bloc Loses Hope for Congress Rule

By Felix Bruner.

The latest claims of the Townsend old-age pension movement revealed yesterday that it had no hope of electing a majority of the members of either the House or the Senate.

A special "victory edition" of the Townsend Weekly, published yesterday, lists the names of 200 candidates for the House of Representatives who, according to that publication, have indorsed the plan. The candidates, some of them incumbents, are seeking office in 38 States. Their names appear on Republican, Democratic and Union Party tickets.

Meanwhile, the United Press, in a copyrighted story, said that Representative John M. Tolan (Democrat), California, a member of the House committee investigating the Townsend Plan, had signed a minority report charging that the inquiry was political and not a basis for legislation. Representative Clare Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, also refused to sign the majority report. He is a candidate for reelection, and he informed the committeee that if defeated it will be

Edward Vetoes Simpson Affair 'Gag' on Press

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Oct. 19.—King Edward toured his Sandringham country estate today and his American friend, Mrs. Ernest Simpson, inspected her new home at 16 Cumberland terrace, outwardly ignoring the tempest in court circles caused by the former Baltimore belle's suit for divorce.

It was learned, however, that privately the King is showing keen interest in American press treatment of the case and that he has been consulted about "gagging" British newspapers when the divorce petition is heard at Ipswich next week.

The King vetoed the suggestion when his secretaries asked whether he wished to send confidential messages to editors of newspapers and news agencies requesting them to ignore or minimize the case when it comes to trial. Explaining his decision, a source close to Buckingham Palace told the United Press:

"The King opposed appealing to the press to suppress news of the divorce suit when it is heard in court, because otherwise the impression might be conveyed that his majesty is involved in Mrs. Simpson's private affairs."

Vessel Capsizes With 250 Aboard; Many Lives Lost

By the United Press.

Amsterdam (Tuesday), Oct. 20. Reports from Batavia, Java, today said the passenger steamer Vanderwyck capsized in the Dutch East Indies with heavy loss of life.

One of seven airplanes which flew over the sinking ship reported many persons were struggling in the water off the village of Tandjong Pakis, on the north coast of Java.

The Vanderwyck carried 250 passengers.

Liner Goes Aground.

Liverpool (Tuesday), Oct. 20 (U.P.). The Cunard White Star liner Lancastria, with 600 passengers aboard, went aground in the River Mersey early today while returning from a Mediterranean cruise. The vessel was reported in no danger and no effort was made to remove passengers. Efforts to refloat her will be made at flood tide this afternoon.

3 High Court Victories Won By New Deal

Ruling on Relief, Social Security, NIRA Laws Denied by Justices.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration won procedural victories yesterday in three cases involving New Deal laws, as the United States Supreme Court denied two appeals for review, and refused permission for a third challenge to be filed.

The justices refused to pass on controversies affecting the securities act of 1933, the national industrial recovery act and the 1935 emergency relief act.

An unexpected request for the court to consider constitutionality of the social security act, basing the test on a pending review of the New York State unemployment insurance law, was made shortly after the court convened.

Edward F. McClennen, Boston attorney and former law partner of Justice Louis Brandeis, asked permission to file a brief questioning the far-flung social security law as "a friend of the court" for the State of Vermont.

Justices at first took his request under advisement. Later in the evening they denied the petition, apparently after discussion in chambers, but gave no explanation of their action.

The court earlier denied a second attempt by J. Edward Jones, New York securities dealer, to get a ruling on constitutionality of the so-called "truth in securities act." In the former attempt, the court ruled merely that the Securities and Exchange Commission could not compel Jones to testify on a proposed securities issue which had been withdrawn.

Immediate review of PWA authority to make loans and grants for construction of publicly owned electrical systems also was denied by the court. The Alabama Power Co. and the Texas Utility Co. challenging PWA grants to eight Alabama and Texas towns, wanted their cases argued with a similar suit brought by the Duke Power Co., which the court has agreed to hear.

Almost identical issues are involved in the Duke suit, which questions a $2,832,000 PWA loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for a power plant at Buzzard Roost. The Duke suit, charging the PWA-financed plants will destroy existing private systems, will be heard November 9.

Upholds New Dealers.

In declining to hear either the securities act case, or the Alabama Power and Texas Utility Co. suits, the Supreme Court in effect upheld the contentions of New Deal attorneys, that no constitutional question was at stake in the former, and that the utility company suit should first go to the court of appeals. But the court's action was purely procedural. Merits of the legislation were not involved.

In support of his motion for a social security act ruling, McClennen made an oral statement to the court, requesting permission to file his brief. He was closely questioned by Chief Justice Hughes, who pointed out that attorneys in the New York litigation said the Federal law was not affected.

Opposed to the broader challenge, John J. Bennett, jr., New York Attorney General, later filed a statement saying the New York case "involves only the validity of the New York State unemployment insurance act under the Constitution of the United States and in no manner involves a consideration of the federal social security act as do other State statutes which are dependent upon the Federal act for their operation and effectiveness."

Assails Congress' Powers.

Seeking to tie the social security act test to the New York case, McClennen in his written petition argued the Federal law is beyond the powers of Congress, "and that the acts of the States passed within the scheme thereof are beyond the powers of the respective legislatures."

He cited 16 State acts approved by the Social Security Board, 13 of which he said are dependent on continued operation of the social security act, and denied social security taxes are truly "excises." He said they are "not uniform throughout the United States" and are "capricious."

"A vast number of employers of eight or more in industry throughout the country are in the peril of being obligated to pay enormous sums of money before the end of January, 1937, unless certain by the

New Deal Trade Policy a Menace, Landon Charges

Nominee Asks Roosevelt if He Intends to Seek Permanent NRA.

Cites Son's Stand For Legality Move

'Economic Nationalism' Is World Peace Threat, Kansan Asserts.

Text of Gov. Landon's address —Page 11.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Landon Special, en route to Los Angeles, Oct. 19.—Gov. Alf M. Landon led his Presidential campaign down the Pacific slope tonight, promising "to do all in our power" to revive foreign trade and contending New Deal policies of "economic nationalism" are "dangerous to America and to world peace."

At the same time he called on President Roosevelt to say whether he intended to "perpetuate the NRA willy-nilly." He referred to the recent speech in which James Roosevelt was quoted as saying that "as an individual" he saw no other alternative but to seek a constitutional amendment to make the act effective.

Speeding toward Los Angeles, the nominee said the Roosevelt Administration had "fumbled" its 1933 opportunity at the London Economic Conference to break the trend of economic isolation "which has been spreading over the world and may shortly transform economic warfare into actual hostilities."

"We Republicans," he said in an address at Albuquerque, N. Mex., "will so conduct the reciprocal trade negotiations as to reopen foreign trade channels in such a way as not to penalize the American farmer or the industrial producer and workman. This can be done, and it will be done once I am elected."

Renews Pledge of Freedom.

The Kansan coupled his attack on New Deal farm and tariff policies, with a pledge that "once I am elected President the American idea of a constitutional government of personal freedom will be preserved, come what will."

"Men and women who live their lives in the wide open spaces—on the plains and in the hills—particularly resent regimentation and dictation from Washington," Landon declared.

"As the campaign progresses it is becoming more and more clear that it is a clash of two ideas of government. The one, that politicians know best what is good for you and should run your lives out here in New Mexico from a swivel chair in a Washington bureau. The other, that you are still capable of self-government.

"The first is the theory of many countries of the Old Word, as well as our opponents in this campaign; the other is the American way."

Landon's reiteration that the issue presented by the campaign was between the New Deal and "the American way" was expected by aids to provide the foundation of his national broadcast address tomorrow night at Los Angeles.

5,000 Hear Speech.

Before a crowd estimated at 5,000 by Police Chief Pat O'Grady, Landon said "livestock and sheep men of the Southwest have specially good reasons to object to the policies of this Administration.

"In the first nine months of this year," he said through loud speakers on his rear platform, "More than 20,000 Mexican cattle have been imported into the Southwest.

"We Republicans have no quarrel with the doctrine of reciprocity, which is Republican in its origin, but in the language of our platform 'we condemn the secret negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties without public hearing or legislative approval.' * * *

"What I object to primarily are the concessions of this Administration to nations which can send us little but farm products. The concessions from abroad have benefited, if at all, only our industrial producers. * * * Our industrial produceers can adjust their affairs to existing conditions more readily than the farmers."

Landon said his "primary duty" would be to restore foreign markets so that farmers, with unrestricted production, could have a "full crop at fair price."

"Until the nations of the world are convinced that world peace rests upon the revival and expansion of international exchange of the products of the various nations of the world," he said, "there can be

Politics in Brief.

Gov. Landon yesterday attacked the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement policy while on his way to Los Angeles to deliver a major address tonight. He called on the President to say whether Mr. Roosevelt intended to "perpetuate NRA."

President Roosevelt prepared to depart tonight for a campaign tour of New England, in which he will deliver half a dozen or more talks.

The Federal Communications Commission said it would investigate complaints of radio interruption on Senator Vandenberg's "debate" with the President's recorded voice last Saturday night. Vandenberg speaks again tonight.

G. O. P. Chairman John Hamilton charged in a sworn statement that the corrupt practices act had been violated by solicitation of some $300,000 from corporations for the Democratic convention book.

Townsend forces revealed in their publication that only 200 candidates for the House and 13 for the Senate have indorsed their plan, removing any possibility of their controlling Congress.

Administration 'Forced' Gifts, Hamilton Says

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee alleged in a sworn statement today that the corrupt practices act was violated in what he said was a solicitation of more than $300,000 from corporations for the Democratic convention book.

He charged that "many of the corporations contributing" have Government contracts or business dealings with the Government, and asserted there is reason to believe "that pressure was exercised * * * to compel them to subscribe to the Democratic campaign fund out of fear of refusal or hope of reward."

With the statement, Hamilton made public a demand upon Senator Augustine Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, chairman o fthe Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, for an immediate public hearing "into the activities of the Democratic National Committee respecting these contributions and of the circumstances under which they were obtained."

Matter of Record.

Declaring that President Roosevelt attempted to create the impression in his Cleveland speech that stockholders' money was being used to spread anti-New Deal literature, the Republican campaign chief said the advertising in the convention book was a matter of record.

"It was forced from business and from stockholders' money when most of the 100 or more firms involved did not think the expenditure wise," he claimed.

"Reports of the Democratic National Committee filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives disclose the receipt by the * * * committee of contributions from corporations of upwards of $300,000 in the guise of payments for advertising in 'the book of the Democratic National Convention for 1936, * * *'" his statement said further.

Part of Campaign Fund.

"These payments were made to the * * * committee and constitute a part of the fund raised by it for the conduct of the campaign.

"The corporatoins so contributing include many of the largest industrial corporations. * * The Federal corrupt practices act make it 'unlawful for any corporation whatever to make a contribution in connection with any election at which Presidential or Vice Presidential electors are to be voted for' and 'for any political committee or other person to receive any contribution prohibited' by said act.

"Receipt of these contributions would appear clearly to be in violation of the Federal corrupt practices act.

"Both the public interest and your duty require an immediate public hearing * * *, and we, therefore, demand such a hearing."

A diet of steel beads—one a day for six months—has saved 20-month-old Robert Fowler, 235 G street northwest, from starvation.

Responding to a method of treatment unique in medical history, young Bobby has been snatched from death by Dr. James A. Flynn, nose and throat specialist, of 1511 Rhode Island avenue northwest, it was revealed yesterday. The child faced starvation after his esophagus was burned when he mistook a can of lye for something edible.

The burns closed the child's throat. He could neither eat nor drink and his weight dropped from 32 to 15 pounds. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Fowler, took Bobby to Providence Hospital. There, Dr. Flynn was called. Several operations were performed.

Then Dr. Flynn ran a linen thread down the child's throat, through the esophagus and stomach and out a rubber tube inserted in the abdomen. After this was done, a steel bead, one-fortieth of an inch in length, was placed on the string and drawn down the youngster's throat.

Since then, 36 beads, each a little larger, have been swallowed by Bobby. Now Dr. Flynn uses a 1⅛-inch bead. By swallowing each bead about once a day, it was explained, Bobby has gradually enlarged his esophagus to something approaching normal size.

Mrs. Fowler described how Bobby ate the lye:

"I don't know how he ever found the can," she said. "It was hidden in an old icebox and how he managed to undo the catch is more than I can imagine."

BOBBY FOWLER.

Mrs. Fowler hurried the baby to a hospital, where he remained several days and was finally discharged as well. Back home, however, Bobby refused to eat.

"He cried nearly all the time," Mrs. Fowler said. "I knew he was hungry, but he wouldn't take anything but water and sometimes a little ice cream. I guess he felt on fire inside and the water and ice cream were the only things that could give him relief. I took him to several physicians, but none of them seemed to know what was the matter. And all the time, Bobby kept crying and eating and drinking less and less.

"Finally his throat closed up altogether—he couldn't swallow a thing, not even a drop of water. It was then I took him to Providence Hospital and Dr. Flynn was called."

Although Dr. Flynn declined to discuss the case, it was learned he discovered the strange treatment while studying at the University of Bordeau, France, about ten years ago. The treatment was originated by Prof. George Portmann, noted French specialist. When the physician found that Bobby's esophagus had virtually healed shut, he decided on the beads as a last resort.

"I was so worried when Bobby swallowed the first bead that I didn't know what to do," related Mrs. Fowler. "I knew that if the bead made the slightest tear in the esophagus it meant death. But the risk was worth it and now my baby has gained all his weight and eats anything he wants."

Inspired, no doubt, by that intrepid "girdler," Sidney Olson, The Washington Post's pioneering reporter, who last week "girdled" the District and wrote a series about his experiences, they called for bids for improving Eastern avenue.

Specifically, Olson found a hole on Eastern avenue, a big, dark, unpleasant hole, which he referred to as "home." The fact apparently aroused the Commissioners to activity.

In an order, they asked yesterday for sealed proposals which will be opened at 2 p. m. November 2 for grading, paving, curbing and otherwise improving Eastern avenue between Kenilworth and Minnesota avenues.

When work begins on the improvements brought about by the District girdling jaunt that became an unintentional crusade, the hole Olson discovered will disappear.

Flames Kill 3 on Italian Liner; Crazed Musician Leaps, Drowns

By the Associated Press.

Palermo, Italy, Oct. 19.—Four persons died today in a mystery blaze that swept the third-class quarters of the Italian liner Vulcania.

Three of the victims were stewards. The other was a musician who, apparently crazed by heat and terror, leaped from the vessel and was drowned.

Two of the stewards were burned to death fighting the fire. The third was asphyxiated in his bunk.

An official communique issued tonight said the fire had been caused directly by a short circuit. Two of the victims were listed in the communique as Seaman Francesco Rocco and Steward Oscar del Piccolo. The names of the other two were not given.

The motorship arrived in Palermo this afternoon with 1,100 passengers delayed for three hours while the vessel was hove to and officers and seamen fought successfully to confine the blaze to the third class.

Americans, bound for New York, said the blaze, which started shortly after dawn, did not reach the first or second class cabins.

None of the passengers in those classes seemed alarmed, the Americans said, although all were prepared to climb into lifeboats.

Roosevelt Is Off Today on Swing In New England

Worcester Talk Tomorrow to Highlight Tour; Six Others Are Planned.

Driving steadily at a pile of official papers and correspondence that had stacked up on his desk during his 11-day absence from the White House, President Roosevelt last night strove to prepare his affairs for a campaign swing into the Republican territory of New England.

Meanwhile the Democratic National Committee announced that the President will speak at a business men's dinner at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, on October 23.

The speech, scheduled for 10 to 10:45 p. m. (Eastern standard time), will be broadcast over a national hookup (C. B. S.).

Working in the seclusion of his second-floor study, the President yesterday refused all appointments but two—Harry Colmery, new national commander of the American Legion, and Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr.

Tonight he will take off again on his re-election journeying, with a speech at Worcester, Mass., tomorrow night as the chief address of the trip, although he will make at least six speeches from the back of an automobile in a direct plea for votes in industrial towns in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

The President's special train will stop first at Providence, R. I., tomorrow morning, where Gov. Theodore F. Green will meet him. Riding in an automobile, he will speak from it at the Rhode Island capitol building.

Providence First Stop.

Remaining in the automobile throughout the day's campaigning, he will go through Fall River and New Bedford, Mass., to Fairhaven, where he will lunch at the old Delano home.

Proceeding through Taunton and Brockton to Boston, the President will make another address there, speaking a second time from an automobile before the State capitol building. This address is scheduled for 4 p. m. Wednesday.

He will rejoin his train at Worcester, Mass., in the evening and rest until his speech. His train will carry him Wednesday night to Hartford, Conn., speaking before the State capitol there from an automobile after a conference with flood-control officials.

After a drive to New Haven for lunch, the President's plans include a roundabout trip through Bridgeport, Stamford, Norwalk and Danbury in the direction of Hyde Park, which he expects to reach late Thursday night. He intends to stay there for the week-end returning to Washington Sunday evening after attending church in his home town.

Last Week Is Clear.

The President has kept his last week before election free of all dates but two: An appearance at ceremonies commemorating the fiftieth birthday of the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor on October 28, and his wind-up final address on October 31 in Madison Square Garden, in New York.

Although the President's New England speeches are tentatively set at 6 p. m., a number of unscheduled addresses may be added on the spur of the moment, as was the rule during his 5,000-mile Western trip.

In the final week, observers believe, the President will concentrate on last-minute efforts to swing doubtful States into the Democratic column. Some quarters have expressed the opinion that a dash into Pennsylvania, possibly coupled with a brief Ohio swing, are not out of the question.

After his two appointments yesterday, the President devoted his day strictly to the preparation of the New England talks, laboring steadily to point up his final campaign efforts.

Roosevelt Owes Hull Debt of Gratitude for Winning New Deal Critics Back Into Ranks.

By Franklyn Waltman

ONE wonders whether President Roosevelt fully realizes the debt of gratitude which he owes to Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Events of the last few weeks clearly indicate that it is, indeed, a large debt, for not only has Hull been a rock of common sense in an Administration where nonsense has been given too full a rein, but he has made the President and the New Deal palatable to a number of important people.

WALTMAN.

Support of the President's re-election efforts by the New York Times is due chiefly to the Hull reciprocal trade program, to cite but one important quarter influenced by the Hull program. James P. Warburg's week-end declaration in favor of the President's re-election is another—the more dramatic because Warburg for almost three years has been one of the sharpest critics of the New Deal.

Other illustrations could be cited. For instance, Joseph P. Tumulty, White House secretary during the Wilson regime, is moved to write a letter to local newspapers applauding the Hull program, but indicating he is sour on other aspects of the New Deal. Since Gov. Alf M. Landon's attack at Minneapolis on the Hull program such incidents have multiplied—and not the least important are the apparently large number of persons whose hostility to the New Deal has perceptibly cooled since the Minneapolis speech, even though they have not declared for Mr. Roosevelt's re-election.

The widespread support of the Hull reciprocal trade program which has become evident during this campaign is really one of its most remarkable aspects. The Secretary of State by persistently preaching his doctrine of breaking down trade barriers as a means to world peace has developed a public opinion behind him so strong that it surprises even him and his closest friends.

It is not so much what has been done under the Hull program which has attracted support—for not a great deal has been done, comparatively speaking—but the course of action and the direction preached by Secretary Hull. Many persons for whom the reciprocal tariff program has apparently become the foremost issue in the election see in it far more than the lowering of tariffs and the increase in foreign trade, as important as they may be.

They see in Secretary Hull's strivings the antithesis of many of the New Deal's major efforts, an antithesis of such schemes of economic nationalism and planned economy as the NRA, the AAA, other bounties to farmers, extensive governmental spending and currency experimentation and inflation. They apparently regard the Hull program as the keystone of a barrier against those types of measures.

When the New Deal broke over Washington in 1933 Secretary Hull was regarded as a relatively unimportant person. Many wondered why he was named Secretary of State. They thought that with his knowledge of tariffs and of governmental financing he would have been more at home in the Treasury or Commerce Departments. New Dealers explained it did not make much difference, anyway, since this Administration planned to cut loose from international ties—and Raymond Moley, the President's chief adviser, would really run the State Department with his left hand as Assistant Secretary of State.

In those days the miracle men of the Administration were the college professors—the chaps with the latest theories from the classroom and textbook for making America over. Foreign trade and currency stability were old-fashioned fetiches, perhaps all right for an old-fashioned Democrat like Secretary Hull to putter around with—but the latest fashion among the professors included managed currencies, planned economies and pump priming.

Secretary Hull might well have resigned, as did some who held views similar to him in the Treasury. But he did not. He decided to maintain his integrity and dignity by remaining aloof from the experimentation and courageously to fight the issue out within the Administration. He saw the President torpedo the Landon Economic and Monetary Conference—but he managed to torpedo Dr. Moley out of the State Department.

He saw the country become hysterical about the NRA, but he bided his time and saw the country come to loath it. He had to wait a year to get his reciprocal trade act through Congress—but he got it. In time he witnessed the exposure of the fallacies and futility of most of the brain trust measures which were so opposed to what he was striving for and now has witnessed a Europe which seemed to have forgotten there was any alternative but to arm and wait for the military cataclysm threatening it commence to arouse itself from its stupor.

* * *

But whether Secretary Hull has won or lost the day remains to be seen. Even if President Roosevelt is re-elected it is not certain that Mr. Hull will be permitted to proceed successfully with his efforts. It was not until last August that Mr. Roosevelt showed any enthusiasm for the Hull program and what Presidents do in campaigns cannot be taken as indicative of future courses of action.

It may be that Mr. Roosevelt has been impressed with the public support of the Hull program and that hereafter he will take greater stock in the ideas of this old-fashioned Tennessee Democrat and less in those of the glib and suave brain trust boys, most of whom believe that any idea which is new is good and any which has been advocated before is reactionary and therefore bad. It may be that the sun has set on the Hull program as the keystone of a barrier against those types of measures.

Parley on Mass Industry Drive Called by Lewis

C. I. O. to Confer With Steel Committee; Hope of A. F. L. Truce Vanishes.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, announced last night his committee would meet in Pittsburgh, November 9 and 10 with the Steel Workers Organization committee to consider advancing the union organization campaigns in the steel, rubber and automobile industries.

The announcement ended whatever hope may have remained for immediate peace in the controversy which has split organized labor into two opposing factions.

While a committee of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor still waited vainly to meet and discuss peace with representatives of the C. I. O. unions, Lewis left for Pennsylvania, where he will campaign for re-election of President Roosevelt.

Lewis insists organization of the steel industry has been going ahead, but that he has not been saying much about it because he did not wish to interfere with interest in the campaign. He had intimated previously that activity would go ahead vigorously after election day.

At the Pittsburgh meeting all regional field executives of the steel workers' organizing committee will be called upon to report. The C. I. O. has about 175 organizers active among the steel workers.

The Pittsburgh meeting will be held less than a week before the opening of the American Federation of Labor convention in Tampa, Fla., November 16. It is probable that the C. I. O. members not only will discuss organization matters at Pittsburgh, but that it will take up the question of its attitude toward the Tampa convention. The C. I. O. includes representatives of ten unions suspended for "insurrection" by the A. F. of L. Lewis has indicated these unions probably will not attempt to seat delegates at the Tampa convention.

The executive council of the federation continued its meetings into the third week yesterday. It is engaged in finishing a report to be made to the convention and is expected to conclude its work today.

Meanwhile, a special group still was endeavoring to settle a strike called by the American Newspaper Guild against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. William Green, federation president, said that some progress was being made. The newspaper suspended publication at the beginning of the strike, more than two months ago.

Green, who is a member of the suspended United Mine Workers Union, said he intended to go to Tampa and to preside as president of the federation. Asked whether he would seek re-election, he replied, "I haven't said anything about that."

WPA Aids to Wear Bells.

Augusta, Me., Oct. 19 (AP).—Members of the WPA engaged in mapping Maine timberland may be mistaken for Swiss bell ringers but they shouldn't be mistaken for game if they heed the advice issued today by W. O. Frost, of the State forestry service. Frost urged the field men to wear bells and red garments during the hunting season.

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—With election day two weeks off, money backing Gov. Alf M. Landon for election became somewhat more plentiful in the financial district today.

According to Baldwin & Co., a Wall Street firm, odds on President Roosevelt of 3½-to-1, prevailing at the end of last week were shortened today to 3-to-1, with 12-to-5 asked by the Democrats.

* * * *

New York, Oct. 19.—Charles Francis Coe, the writer, outlined plans at Republican headquarters today for an organization of "vigilantes" to be stationed at every voting precinct in the country to see "that the votes will be counted as they are cast."

"We are going to ask for vigilantes in every precinct in the country," Coe said. "We are going to equip them with instructions as to how to prevent the stuffing of ballot boxes."

He said that while he was forming the "vigilantes" at the request of Representative Joseph W. Martin, G. O. P. Eastern campaign manager. "I am dead sure that among the Coe vigilantes will be a good many Democrats who think in terms of country rather than candidate, and of principle before party."

Martin said he had received complaints of thousands of illegal registrations in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, New York and other cities.

James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said he thought organization of the "vigilantes" was "an excellent idea."

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—His pockets crammed with $1,000 in certified checks to prove he is not a vagrant, and a copy of the Constitution, Earl Browder, Communist Presidential candidate, headed west tonight to determine his "rights as a citizen" in Terre Haute, Ind.

He was lodged in a Terre Haute jail three weeks ago on a charge of vagrancy, arrested before he could leave his train.

"I'll read this to Chief of Police James C. Yates when I see him," Browder said, displaying his copy of the Constitution.

* * * *

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—A restraining order which would have prevented his arrest here was denied Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President, in Vigo County Superior Court today.

Judge Albert R. Owens denied the restraining order petition but made one significant qualification.

"If he comes to town," he said, "and any police officer stops him, I'll see that he gets to court for a hearing on the temporary injunction.

Police Chief James G. Yates has ordered 50 of his 76 policemen to be at the railroad station when Browder arrives. It may be that Browder may be "taken into custody" to "preserve the peace."

* * * *

De Kalb, Ill., Oct. 19 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace told a political rally here tonight Republican Party leaders "are spending untold millions to sow the seeds of discord, to set section against section, class against class" in "their desperate drive to win a national election and resume control of the National Government."

The Cabinet member called upon voters "to join President Roosevelt in his efforts to preserve this Nation" by re-electing Mr. Roosevelt.

The speech was the first of more than 15 political addresses scheduled by Wallace in the farm belt during the next two weeks.

* * * *

Donahey spoke on a Nation-wide radio network under auspices of the Democratic National Committee.

Donahey described the President as the "man who has had the courage to establish belated social security laws and fight valiantly for economic justice."

"This great humanitarian * * * inherited millions of hungry citizens who cried for bread and a chance to earn it," Donahey said. "He has given them something to live on. If re-elected he will give them something to live for."

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Republican National Committee announced today Gov. Alf M. Landon's address at Indianapolis next Saturday night would be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System. The Republican Presidential nominee will speak for half an hour, beginning at 9 p. m., Eastern standard time.

* * * *

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, told a luncheon meeting of the Good Neighbor League today the Republican Party had not properly appraised the relief problem in the United States.

"Candidate Alfred Landon," he said, "has charged that our Federal relief appropriations were railroaded through a puppet Congress. * * * I want to deny this emphatically. Congress knew the problem and was in direct touch with the sufferings of the people."

Of individual relief, Hopkins said, "Gov. Landon complains because in 1933 the average cost of a relief case was $15 a month and in a year and a half it was $30. I am proud that it was. As a matter of fact, in some States prior to this Administration the monthly average per family was as low as $3.86."

WPA Director Issues Ultimatum in Strike

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Robert G. Hoffman, city WPA director, issued an ultimatum today to striking WPA workers that they must return to work immediately or lose their jobs.

Donald Nichals, chairman of the strike committee, said 2,500 workers were out on 16 projects. The strike began Thursday.

"Once they are off WPA the strikers must go back on home relief and be reinvestigated by the welfare department," Hoffman said.

Italy Lists 18 Dead In Week-end Quake

Canevs Di Sacile, Italy, Oct. 19 (AP).—Hundreds were homeless tonight after week-end earthquakes caused an estimated damage of 20,000,000 lire ($1,000,000).

An official communique put the death total at 18 at least.

A cold, driving rain added to the misery of the homeless families, many of which pitched pup tents in the fields.

Knox Charges New Deal Has 'Secret Plans'

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 19.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, opened the final two weeks of the Presidential campaign tonight with a charge the Roosevelt Administration "has secret and undisclosed plans."

President Roosevelt, Knox declared in an address in the Coliseum here, had failed to answer questions on ten subjects concerning what he would do if re-elected. Calling it an unbelievable situation, Knox declared, "this Administration has secret and undisclosed plans we know not what."

Whether the President intends to urge the enactment of a new NRA if successful in the election was one query Knox gave special emphasis.

Knox charged the Roosevelt Administration with appealing to the forces of revolution, and declared it does not believe in the American system of free enterprise. He added:

"You cannot afford to have an irresponsible and partisan government at this time. There are ugly and dangerous forces in the world."

Knox said his Republican running mate, Gov. Alf M. Landon, had made his "hopes and plans" public knowledge.

"Some may disagree with some of these plans," said Knox, "but not this: They are before you. There are no secret plans. There is no Tugwell working in our background, with plans for a Russian system. There are no alliances in our party, with plans to scrap the Constitution. * * * We pledge ourselves to preserve the American system, to do what can be done to purge it of its injustices. We pledge ourselves to fight the forces of communism and fascism in this land."

It was a "campaign of silence" the Roosevelt Administration at first planned to wage this fall, Knox charged, but he declared "they have been driven to that last-ditch defense, a defense of their record, and when they have reached the point of discussing that record, they are licked."

Finnan Approves $39,000 Pool Job

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, yesterday announced he has recommended award of $37,000 in work on the new East Potomac Park swimming pool to the Charles H. Thompkins Co., 1630 Connecticut avenue.

The job is divided into two lump sums, $15,000 for pilings and $22,000 to adapt the pool's structural design to its new foundation and make various improvements to the existing field house.

Flood waters last spring washed away the foundations which had been built. Under the present plan, 3,900 feet of composite piling and 3,300 feet of wood piling will be driven.

As a result of this additional work, Finnan said, contract time for completion of the project has been extended 109 days, making May 31 the scheduled date for opening of the pool.

Clegg Will Direct G.W.Home-Coming

Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will serve as chairman of George Washington University's 1936 home-coming, Charles S. Baker, president of the General Alumni Association, announced yesterday.

Home-coming this year will center around the George Washington-West Virginia football game November 29. Besides the game, which will be widely attended by alumni, there will be a home-coming ball Thanksgiving night.

The affair is a joint project of the General Alumni Association, the student body and the administration of the university. Invitations have been issued to 16,000 graduates in all parts of the country.

Floridian Pleads Guilty To Liggett Case Threat

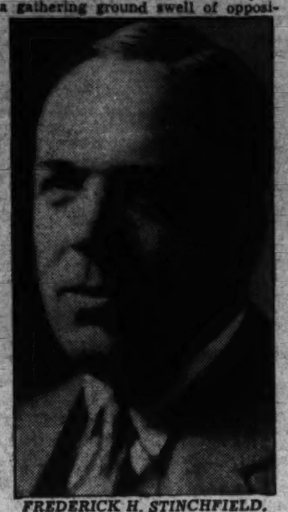
Miami, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Fritz W. Danielson pleaded "guilty with extenuating circumstances" today to a charge of sending extortion letters to two Minneapolis men in connection with the killing of Walter Liggett, newspaper publisher.

Federal Judge John W. Holland postponed sentence pending a conference with the prosecutor.

Danielson was arrested last March 27 and charged with demanding money from Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld and Meyer Schuldberg under a threat to expose their purported connection with the Liggett case. Blumenfeld was tried and acquitted of the killing.

U. S. Bar Head Sees Public Revolting Against Bureaucratic New Deal Setup

Scoring bureaucratic agencies and centralized governmental control, Frederick H. Stinchfield, president of the American Bar Association, declared yesterday there is a gathering ground swell of opposition throughout the country to the perpetuation of the New Deal.



FREDERICK H. STINCHFIELD.

"Whether that undercurrent of dissatisfaction will be sufficient to batter down the breakwaters of the present bureaucratic set-up I do not know," the stocky Liberty Leaguer said. "On the surface, Roosevelt's chances for re-election are bright but surface reflections are superficial. One wonders if the trend of the Literary Digest Poll and the large registration are not indications that the breakwaters are crumbling before aroused public sentiment."

Though a member of the Republican Party, the head of the bar association paid a tribute to the late Gov. Olson.

"We in Minnesota had little sympathy with the policies of the Farmer-Labor Party but we recognized in Floyd Olson a vital personality," he said. "Olson was an excellent organizer with an ability to make and keep friends. He held in line many who were always Republican and his loss will be, for the local Democratic Party, a great disintegrating force."

Will Minnesota go Republican then? Stinchfield was asked.

"Everything points that way," he answered confidently. "Though I voted for Roosevelt in 1932 this time I will vote for Gov. Landon. That is only one protest vote, to be sure, but it is symbolic of the new trend."

Admitting that bureaucracy was not known in the era before Roosevelt the Bar Association's president indicted the New Deal for fostering and perpetuating it.

"Americans are not yet alive to the dangers of centralized control," Stinchfield said. "For, unlike Europeans, they have not yet tasted the knout of autocracy. Fascism or communism—I care not what the trend—four years more of contralization will breed alien theories difficult to combat or rescind."

The Minnesota corporation lawyer then lashed out at what he called "steady encroachment of Federal control" and cited the recent action of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. as evidence of that trend. The radio chain on Saturday cut off Senator Vandenberg's speech, in 22 out of 65 stations, when the latter used recorded excerpts of former addresses by the President.

"It was a very effective means of showing how far Roosevelt has deviated from democratic principles," Stinchfield said. "In banning the use of phonograph records the broadcasting company leaves itself open to the suspicion that it acted under pressure.

"We cannot blame the radio officials for the decision that they made. We must remember that their license is at stake if they displease," he continued.

The bar association's head then stated that a broadcasting company should not have to apply for a license to the Federal Communications Commission every six months. "They should have a license that could not be rescinded until the Government could prove it should be canceled."

The present head of the American Bar Association was born in Danforth, Me., May 8, 1881, and after graduating from Bates College and Harvard Law School, practiced his profession in New Haven. In 1918, he left the East for Minnesota where he organized his present firm of Stinchfield, Mackall, Grounce, McNally and Moore.

Court Decides Against Board In School Case

pretation of the act of March 3, 1915, which reads:

"Hereafter all pupils whose parents are employed officially or otherwise in the District of Columbia shall be admitted and tought free of charge in the schools of the District."

West, in his arguments yesterday against the demurrer filed by Lynch to Dr. Ballou's answer, contended that the word "shall" in the statue was permissive, not mandatory. Hence, he said, it was within Ballou's discretion to admit or turn down such nonresident pupils.

The assistant corporation counsel argued that the acute overcrowding of District schools, particularly the senior and junior highs, was sufficient cause for the superintendent to shut the doors to nonresidents if his judgment so dictated.

Justice Bailey announced his decision without calling upon Lynch to state his case. Upon being informed that many children from nearby Maryland and Virginia are now enrolled in District schools, he sustained the Kemp demurrer and said:

"I do not think any discretion is vested in the superintendent (of schools) to exclude one class and not another."

West asked for ten days in which to file an amended answer but the judge, mindful that Lois Kemp already has been kept from school for a month, granted him only five days in order to expedite disposal of the controversy for the girl's sake.

Dr. Ballou had little to say about the turn of events. He said there are now about 2,000 boys and girls living outside the District who are enrolled in local schools.

(Elementary schools, where congestion is least severe, are open to out-of-towners. Nonresidents also are eligible for certain of the Capital's public high schools, but all of the junior high schools are closed this year to nonresidents, with a few if any exceptions.)

Asked how many youngsters had been turned down this fall, the superintendent replied he did not know, as no figures were kept on denied applications.

Seduction Verdict Waits.

Ottawa, Oct. 19 (Canadian Press).—The Supreme Court of Canada today reserved judgment in the appeal of Miss Vivian MacMillan against decisions of the Alberta courts disallowing a $10,000 jury award in her seduction suit against former Premier John Brownlee, of Alberta.

100 WPA Aids Get Job, Salary Change

Formal reclassification of the Project Control Division of the Works Progress Administration involving promotions and demotions for more than 100 employes, will take place today.

Reclassification of the division which employs about 300, officials explained, was made necessary as part of the reorganization following the recent dismissal of 250 of the division's workers.

Under the new classifications all the positions are to be brought in line with Civil Service classifications. This will involve a change of title in many cases, officials said, and salary changes—up and down—for about 35 per cent of the group. Most of the salary changes average about 200, the total burget for the division remaining the same.

Burned in Quarrel, Girl Near Death

Dorothy Fenwick, 20, critically burned Sunday morning when she was enveloped in flame after a jar of gasoline exploded during a quarrel between her mother and stepfather, remained near death last night in Gallinger Hospital.

Police continued to hold the girl's parents, Mrs. Matty Martha Bray, 43, and Samuel Bray, 60, in connection with the case. They have not been charged and will be detained pending the outcome of the woman's burns.

According to police, Mrs. Bray hurled the 2-quart jar of gasoline at her husband during an argument. Dorothy was cooking breakfast in the kitchen when the bottle smashed against the wall over the stove. She instantly was covered with the flames.

Tear Is Jailed; Pleads Guilty In Rum Case

Member of Warring Gang Faces Possible Term of 3 to 15 Years.

George F. (Teddy) Tear, brother of the fiance of the slain Corrina Loring, yesterday in District Court pleaded guilty to charges of possessing a smoke screen on an automobile and assault with dangerous weapon in a chase by police.

As a result, the 24-year-old member of the Warring gang faces possible sentence of from three to fifteen years. In addition Justice Peyton Gordon ordered his incarceration until sentence Friday.

Tear was specifically charged with attempting to block a police scout car while he was allegedly acting as convoy for a liquor car last April. Policemen spotted two speeding cars at First street and Indiana avenue, and after vainly attempting to overhaul the leading car, arrested Tear at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest. The officers charged Tear, driving the rear car, had repeatedly attempted to force them from the road.

Smoke Screen Charged.

Later he was arrested by agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau, who charged him with having a smoke screen on his car. Although he was out on bonds running above $15,000, Tear was released on bond. In addition, he is on bond awaiting outcome of an appeal from conviction of being a member of a huge liquor ring conspiracy.

On the latter charge Tear was sentenced to serve from 4 months to 2 years. The ring is alleged to have swindled the Government out of taxes running as high as $2,000 a day. Tear was one of 16 convicted, the others in a group of 34 originally indicted having either pleaded guilty or been dismissed.

Oddly, Tear was being sought by police on a charge of driving an automobile without a permit while he was being arraigned in District Court. Police said he had been seen operating his automobile without a permit, the permit having been revoked some time ago for traffic offenses.

Is Ordered Jailed.

Justice Gordon ordered Tear immediately confined. He suggested he would like a report from the probation officer of the court before he pronounced sentence. Meanwhile, a Police Department charge of assault with intent to kill upon Joseph O'Brien in a Southeast shooting was being held in abeyance by the grand jury pending outcome of O'Brien's injuries.

It was pointed out that if O'Brien died the grand jury would be asked to indict for murder instead of the police charge of attempting to kill. A bootleggers' dispute over territory rights is said to have brought about O'Brien's shooting.

Lutherans Delay Synod for Colored

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 19 (AP).—Stirred by the impassioned plea of a New York churchman, delegates to the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church refused today to vote authority for creation of a colored synod in the South.

The Alabama-Georgia Synod asked for an extension of church work among Southern colored persons. The convention authorized creation of a special commission to study the proposal and report to the 1938 convention.

"The United Lutheran Church is not yet ready to vote authority for such a new project," declared the Rev. Ellis B. Burgess, of New York. "Before it can plan such a movement it must get ready—it must educate its Negro ministry.

"We cannot afford to build today and lose tomorrow."

Filipino Quads Born.

Manila, Oct. 19 (AP).—A second set of quadruplets was born in the Philippines today, ten days after the birth of the first quartet. The second set was born to Mrs. Engracia Belmonte, 25-year-old wife of a blacksmith, at Guimbal, Iloilo Province. The first born died. Doctors said the surviving boy and two girls have a chance to survive. The first quadruplets born to Mrs. Leoncio Englo, 21, at Maragondon, Cavite Province, died 36 hours after birth.

China Generals Draw Up Plans To Fight Japan

Nation May Go to War Before Yielding to Drastic Tokyo Demands.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Shanghai, (Tuesday), Oct. 20.—China has decided on a program of armed resistance, if necessary, rather than submit to the more drastic of Japan's demands, it was said unofficially today.

The report followed conclusion of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's military conference at Hangchow, where the Nanking dictator consulted with military leaders from all over the country.

Simultaneously, it was announced in Peiping the Japanese army will hold large scale troop maneuvers in North China from October 25 to November 5.

The conclusions of the Hangchow conference were not made public, but newspapermen who covered the week-end conversations between Chiang and his generals believed a definite decision had been reached to oppose Japan's demands for creation of virtually independent regimes "friendly to Japan" in the five North China provinces.

It was significant that Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang, former "Christian General," emerged from his retirement in Shantung province to attend the conference.

Feng is known for his bitter hatred of Japan and his advocacy of a policy of armed resistance to Japanese penetration.

The old marshal will depart tomorrow for Chengchow, strategic military center in northern Honan Province, to inspect ten divisions of the central government's army, which have been concentrated there.

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—Great Britain, embarking on an ambitious venture to obtain a bigger share of Chinese trade, announced today she was sending a special representative to Shanghai to act as a credit investigator for home manufacturers.

The government exports credit guarantees department prepared to assume credit risks to a certain point on behalf of the United Kingdom's heavy industries against German, American and Japanese trade penetration in China.

Turn on Speedway Leads to Capture Of 2 Bandits Here

The horseshoe shape of the speedway on Hains Point last night proved the undoing of two holdup men, armed with a toy automatic. The two approached a car occupied by Norman E. Walters, of 1916 F street northwest, and a woman friend. One of the men stuck a black automatic in Walters' ribs, took $5 from him and left on foot after warning Walters not to follow.

Walters turned his car around and left by the other way to notify police. The men were picked up soon after by Park Policeman W. K. Schneider. They are being held at Second Precinct and are suspected of having taken part in other robberies.

Former Dentist Here Loses Plea

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Circuit Judge Harry N. Sandler denied a petition today in which Dr. Clyde M. Gearhart, former New York and Washington dentist, sought to speed his divorce suit.

The dentist, who claimed he treated four Presidents, was told the legal time for taking testimony will not expire until next month.

Dr. Gearhart testified during a previous hearing his patients included Presidents Taft, Wilson, Harding and Hoover.

He charged publicity given the divorce suit, previously instituted by his wife, Mrs. H. Gearhart, of Baltimore, had ruined his practice.

Gearhart said the first suit was dropped. His action was filed in June after he established residence under Florida's 90-day divorce law.

U. S., City Must Join to Reclaim 2d, 4th Precincts' Slum Areas

Overcrowded Alleys Breed Crime; ADA Awaits Careful Planning.

Acres of slum-blighted areas in the Second and Fourth Precincts have been avoided studiously by the District Alley Dwelling Authority in its slum reclamation program to date.

Fully aware that the steady increase of crime and disease in these precincts can be traced directly to the filthy overcrowded alley dwellings, the authority, nevertheless, has been confining its operations largely to the more respectable of the city's neighborhoods.

Only careful long-range planning and close co-ordination with other Government agencies can bring about reclamation of those decaying neighborhoods where squares containing alley dwellings are linked together for miles, John Ihlder, executive officer of the authority, declared.

The $700,000 granted the authority to carry on its operations over a ten-year period could have been thrown into the center of the worst slum area and been absorbed without causing much of a beneficial ripple, Ihlder explained.

Under its present program the authority does not launch a reclamation project until it determines what the future of the neighborhood will be. Even then the authority does not go into action until it decides its operations will be of distinct value to the improvement of the whole neighborhood.

To Define Program.

Before the Authority attacks the slum reclamation problems in the highly congested area bordered by North Capitol and Thirteenth streets and Massachusettts and Florida avenues northwest it will have a well-defined program outlined by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Modification of the city plan may be necessary to reclaim some of the blighted areas, Ihlder said.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning of the Park and Planning Commission, said experts are already considering how to coordinate its program with that of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Not until Congress shows whether it intends to increase the Authority's revolving fund, and by how much can any definite plan be developed.

The school building program is linked closely with the program of the Alley Dwelling Authority. Should Congress allow funds for an adequate five-year school-building program, calling for developments in the slums area, the Authority could move into the neighborhoods about to be improved and launch its own developments nearby.

Plans for parks and recreational centers in the slum area are now awaiting appropriations. The Authority is watching hopefully to see if they materalize.

So limited is the income of the Authority that it cannot risk investing its funds in property which it knows might be taken over by the Federal Government in later years, Ihlder explained that the Authority is trying to make every dollar do the twofold job of slum clearance and slum reclamation.

To Hold Site 5 Years.

The parking lot operated by the Authority at Twenty-first and E streets northwest, embraces some land which is valued at $2.35 a square foot. It is in an area which private operators have found ideal for apartment house sites. The Authority does not intend to build on the property for five years while it waits to see whether the Federal Government wants it for a building site.

The site is so valuable the Authority could not utilize it for a low-rent housing development. It is possible the Authority could sell portions of the site to private real estate operators, thereby releasing its capital for purchase of other slum property.

"We feel that we as a Government agency, should not release property which the Federal Government might want in a few years," Ihlder said. "If we should sell the property without any restrictions, it might be used for speculative purposes, or buildings might be erected on it which while profitable would lower the values of other property in the neighborhood."

Ihlder said the authority is hopeful the success of its restricted operations on the fringes of the slums will so impress Congress that it will provide sufficient funds for a direct attack upon the squalid hidden communities in the Second and Fourth precincts.

Hazen to Dedicate Revamped Slum Area

The District Alley Dwelling Authority will hold open house for the "best people" of Washington today at 2:30 p. m. in London court southeast, which a year ago was described as "one of the rottenest spots in the city."

From a hidden community of squalid alley dwellings, the Authority has converted London court into a model low-rent housing development.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Authority, will dedicate the 12 new and 11 reconditioned houses which front on a grassy plot in the 1200 block of L street southeast.

Other speakers will be Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, chairman of the Washington Committee on Housing, and Dr. Emmett J. Scott, secretary of Howard University.

In the 2,000 invitations sent out for the house warming, Commissioner Hazen suggested that those who attend should first tour unreclaimed alleys to acquire a better idea of what has been accomplished in London court.

This is the third of a series of articles outlining activities of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, which completed two years of its 10-year-slum reclamation program this month.

Extortion Plot Is Confessed By D. C. Youth

Suspect Arrested After Pharmacist Receives Letter Threat.

Steve Michael Terry, 18, of the 1700 block of Columbia road northwest, was arrested by police yesterday following an alleged attempt to extort $1,000 from a local pharmacist on the threat his house would be blown up.

Terry, after his arrest, admitted to detectives he had sent threatening letters to Samuel Einwohner, of 1342 Seventh street northwest, demanding the money. No charge had been placed against him last night.

Einwohner notified police of the alleged extortion plot when he received a letter demanding the money on threat his house would be destroyed while his wife and children were at home.

Instructions in the letter told Einwohner to place an advertisement in an afternoon newspaper, "Wanted, clerk. Must be Jewish." Einwohner, on police advice, inserted the advertisement which was followed by Terry's arrest.

Police yesterday said Terry had hired a mail box at the newspaper office. He told Einwohner to send the money and any communications to the mail box.

After about a week, Terry is alleged to have sent a notice to the newspaper requesting that any mail in the box be forwarded to him. The mail was forwarded and Terry failed to appear. A message then was left for him that the mail would be at the general delivery window in the postoffice.

Philippine Extremists Admit Terror Bombings

Manila, Oct. 19 (AP).—Constabulary officials said today they had obtained confessions that a group of Sakdalistas, Philippine extremists, engineered the October 3 Manila bombings and fires in a plan to overthrow the government by force.

Five Sakdalistas were arrested following the blasts, which started a $500,000 fire in a hardware plant and cut a water main which supplied North Manila. Others of the organization are being sought.

The Sakdalistas, who advocate immediate Philippine independence, had intended to start a "reign of terror" that night, the constabulary officers said.

Parents to Visit McKinley School

The Parent-Teacher Association of McKinley High School will hold meetings to acquant parents and guardians of students with the school tomorrow and Thursday. In charge of the meetings will be members of the faculty, headed by Principal Frank C. Daniel.

The meetings will be held at 2 p. m., and consist of tours of the various classrooms and baloratories, where the equipment and work of the students will be observed.

An effort will be made to have the parents of each child meet the child's teacher.

Frank Buck in Hospital After Kick by Horse

Amityville, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Frank Buck, the bring-'em-back-alive man, was in the hospital today nursing hurts inflicted not by a lion or a tiger, but by a west Texas cow horse.

The man who has crossed paths with black leopards, pythons, king cobras and other less genteel members of the animal kingdom in his search for zoo specimens, said he was mounting the horse when an automobile backed into its withers.

Buck let go all holds as the horse reared, and in the ensuing scuffle he was kicked on the leg.

District Board Denies Bennett Public Hearing

Ousted Engineer Now Expected to Carry Ouster Case to Court.

The case of Charles A. Bennett, dismissed assistant engineer in the municipal architect's office, appeared yesterday headed for court as the District Commissioners indicated they would grant no public hearing.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, who had been away over the week-end, said that he was withholding the report of the special committee which investigated 18 charges against Bennett on the advice of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

The engineer commissioner admitted, as had Walter Fowler, chairman of the committee, that he does not know the identity of Bennett's accusers. The only complaint he has heard of, Sultan said, is "a lawyer named Jones."

Col. Sultan said that Bennett was dismissed for failure to write specifications according to accepted standards and in the best interests of the District rather than on the basis of any or all of the 18 specific charges of favoritism toward certain manufacturers.

4-Yr. Junior College Proposed by Hutchins

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 19 (AP).—Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, favors the reorganization of the entire system of American education. He would scrap the present plan of four years each of high school and college.

Dr. Hutchins' substitute for the present system will be published tomorrow by the Yale University Press under the title "The Higher Learning in America."

He envisages the development and the growth of the junior college, which would comprise a four-year course beginning with the third year in high school and include the first two years of present college work.

Vote G.O.P., Colby, Ely Urge South

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Joseph B. Ely and Bainbridge Colby, leaders in Democratic councils of past years, urged Southern States tonight to support the Republican national ticket November 3.

Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, charged that President Roosevelt had put aside the Democratic Party in Minnesota for the "most rancid aggregation of radicals, socialists and communists which," he said, "composed the Farmer-Labor Party. And," Colby charged, the President "thanked the Democrats for stepping aside."

Ely, speaking from the same platform under auspices of the Maryland Jeffersonian Democrats, anti-New Deal organization, attacked the record of the New Deal. He is former Governor of Massachusetts.

"Away with the New Deal and its baner bearing a strange device of Democracy and historical change," he said. "Up with the banner of economic freedom and constitutional government. Up with the banner of Landon and Knox."

GENERAL ELECTRIC OIL FURNACE

INCREASED SALES HAVE ENABLED GENERAL ELECTRIC TO CUT THE PRICE OF THE G-E OIL FURNACE. Now everyone can enjoy the best in automatic oil heating at a greatly reduced price and at new low terms.

NO DOWN PAYMENT
3 YEARS TO PAY

The General Electric Oil Furnace, as you probably know, is different in appearance and different in operation from all other types of oil burning equipment. Different and better. More efficient. More economical. Quieter. Safer.

It burns oil in a new and better way. It "traps" the heat formerly wasted up the chimney. And it brings amazing savings on fuel bills.

Come in and see this marvelous heating unit in operation. Learn what it means to burn oil safely, dependably, and economically. If you can't call, write or telephone for the absorbing booklet "Luxurious Heat." It's yours—free—for the asking.

PLAY SAFE! Invest wisely for the future

Don't let anyone tell you that oil is best burned in a boiler or furnace designed for coal.

Don't let anyone sell you an assembly of separate parts—boiler, burner, controls, etc.—parts which were not made to work together.

RESEARCH KEEPS G-E YEARS AHEAD!

The General Electric Oil Furnace with the exclusive "Inverted" Flame has upset all previous ideas about oil heating. Don't fail to see "The Heating Unit That Science Built."

NO OTHER OIL FURNACE CAN BE LIKE THIS!

LUXURIOUS HEAT. Maintains an even temperature—automatically. Provides an abundance of hot water—every hour of the day and night. Beautiful in appearance. Quiet, clean and odorless in operation.

SAFE. Oil is burned in an electrically-welded steel boiler. An automatic safety control shuts off the fuel supply in less than 4 seconds. The self-oiling mechanism is sealed-in-steel to protect it from dust and dirt.

DEPENDABLE. Sturdy—built for a long life of service. Thoroughly reliable.

ECONOMICAL. The new scientific method of burning oil insures complete combustion. Heat usually lost up the chimney is "trapped". Greater fuel burning efficiency permits the use of cheaper grades of fuel oil.

ONE COMPLETE UNIT. Every part is designed to work harmoniously with every other part. A compact, coordinated unit—designed, built and warranted by the General Electric Company.

AND NOW YOU CAN HAVE ALL THIS AT A NEW LOW PRICE!

Lad Plunges Into Chesapeake to Save Fisherman From Death in Water.

A 17-year-old hero and a companion he snatched from death in choppy waters of Chesapeake Bay Sunday were recuperating last night, little the worse for their harrowing experience and glad to be alive.

Harry Lochner, 39, of 1310 Massachusetts avenue northwest, owes his life to a young friend, Harry Rinnier, printer's apprentice, also of the Massachusetts avenue address. They were week-end guests aboard the fishing boat of their employer, local contractor. Early Sunday the trio anchored about 3 miles off Solomons Island for a day's fishing. Shortly before dusk, however, high winds and heavy seas drove them toward shore.

Rinnier and Lochner were aft hauling their lines in when the craft suddenly rolled. Thrown overboard and unable to swim, Lochner saw rescue hopes fade as the boat, already under way, forged ahead.

Heedless of the danger, Rinnier donned a life preserver, kicked off his shoes and dived in. Reaching the drowning man's side as he sank the second time, he dived beneath the surface and grabbed Lochner by the hair. He held him in that manner until their boat came along side and Power hauled them both aboard.

Lochner, semiconscious was given artificial respiration. Later at his home he suffered a relapse and was taken to Sibley Hospital. Young Rinnier also was confined to bed suffering from exposure.

Ann Harding Asks Court To Extend Child Custody

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (AP).—Ann Harding, film star in an action that could result in a renewal of legal warfare with her former husband, Harry Bannister, asked court permission today to keep their child, Jane, 7, in England until May, 1937.

Miss Harding, who is in London with Jane, filed the request in Superior Court here through her lawyer, Roland Rich Woolley. Under an order issued several months ago, Miss Harding must return Jane to California before December 10, 1936.

Landon Statement on NRA

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Gov. Landon's Train, Oct. 19.—The text of Gov. Landon's statement on the NRA follows:

Mr. James Roosevelt in an address at Gardner, Mass., on Friday night in behalf of his father's candidacy for re-election to the Presidency, made a statement regarding the NRA. There are two versions of what young Roosevelt said, one taken down in shorthand, according to the press, at the time the statement was made, and the other given out by the speaker himself the next day, and then changed by him some two hours later.

As to the actual intentions of the President regarding the NRA the two statements are in essence identical.

The statement taken from the stenographic record of the Worcester Telegram reads, as vouched for by that paper, as follows:

"If the NRA had not been knocked out we would not have had so much unemployment. The way to correct this is to shorten hours of labor.

"In order to accomplish this, the President intends to continue the principles of the NRA by going before the people and seeking an amendment to the Constitution to make the principles of the NRA the law of the land."

His Own Account.

Mr. James Roosevelt's own account of what he said, as quoted in the press, is as follows:

"These are the purposes of the NRA. The Administration is pledged to attempt to carry out the purposes of the NRA in every constitutional manner.

"Should there be no way in which this can be accomplished, which we do not admit, I as an individual see no alternative but to ask the people for the right to make those purposes constitutional through the Congress of the United States."

Without attempting to unravel Mr. James Roosevelt's constitutional theories as expressed in the last sentences of his statement (they have a certain New Deal smack about them) this much is clear in both statements, namely that young Roosevelt understands the President still to intend to make NRA principles live and operate in our government by one device or another.

This is precisely what I have charged, over and over again.

At Portland, Me., on September 12, I said:

"The NRA was the beginning in America of the movement which, throughout the world, has been sweeping aside private enterprise in favor of government control—a movement which has been substituting personal authority for constitutional self-government."

Spirit of NRA Lives On.

"But—you may say—the NRA is dead.

"True enough. The National recovery act is dead, thanks to the courage and integrity of the Supreme Court.

"But the spirit of the NRA lives on. It lives on in recently enacted laws. It lives on in the efforts of this Administration's 1936 platform. It lives on in the recent utterances of the President and his spokesmen.

"But above all, it lives on in the spirit of the President who has confessed no error—who has let it be clearly known that he considered it would be a catastrophe if the American farmer should once more become a lord of his own farm.'

"If this does not mean that the present Administration wants to establish Government domination of industry and agriculture, what does it mean? If the President has changed his mind and recognized his errors, let him say so. Let him say so in plain language. Until we have such an admission of error, the choice before us is clear."

In my address at Detroit on October 13, showing that the actions of the President do not conform with his campaign pleas that he stands for individual enterprise and favors an all-powerful Federal Government, brushing away State rights and home rule, I said:

"If the President thinks agricultural and industrial anarchy can be prevented only by the reenactment of the principles of NRA and AAA, let him say so.

Asks About Amendments.

"Let him tell us—and tell us before election day—just what amendments to the Constitution he has in mind.

"By his silence on this he is attempting to dodge the fundamental issue of this campaign—the issue of whether he intends to change the form of our Government—whether labor, agriculture and business are to be directed and managed by Government-directed and manager politics."

I have declared that being elected, I shall immediately recommend to Congress the repeal of all laws giving autocratic power to the President. I have made it plain that I stand for the maximum of individual liberty consistent with the welfare of all the people, but with no national economic planning that has the Government dominating labor, industry and agriculture instead of exercising the normal governmental service of preventing unfair practices and oppressions among those activities of the people.

The President must specifically deny that his son's views are his views. Otherwise the silence of the father will be the confession that the son spoke for the President when he gave us to understand that his father intended to perpetuate the NRA willy-nilly."

Widow Bares Love For Accused Slayer

Oregon, Ill., Oct. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Frances Birch, willowy widow of 32, told the story of her "back street" affair with Guy Tallmadge today at his trial on charges of killing his wife in the tragic culmination of a love triangle.

From the witness stand of an overtaxed circuit room, the red-haired woman related how the bald, gaunt, 56-year-old defendant wooed and won her after an ardent courtship.

Tallmadge, haggard from a chronic illness that caused his collapse eight times last week, slumped in a chair and avoided her gaze.

FCC Is Studying Radio Shut-Off On Vandenberg

Board Weighs Complaints; C.B.S. Denies Any 'Fear' Motivated Curb.

Complaints against radio interruption of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's Saturday night "fireside chat" with the phonograph voice of President Roosevelt were taken under scrutiny by the Federal Communications Commission yesterday.

Vandenberg, who in a wire to a member of the commission said "the incident is closed so far as I am concerned," planned to broadcast another address from Wilmington, Del., at 8 p. m. today.

Although no repetition of the phonograph interview is planned, Vandenberg is expected to comment on Columbia Broadcasting Co.'s Saturday night efforts to enforce its rule against use of transcription records.

Meanwhile, Harry C. Butcher, in charge of Columbia's Washington office, moved to refute "published inferences that our action in the case of Senator Vandenberg was dictated by fear of either the Democratic Administration or the Federal Communications Commission."

Prall Plans Upset.

Butcher said Columbia's rule against broadcasting of phonograph records was invoked in the last two weeks against Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Communications Commission. He said Prall had a speech recorded for broadcast over Station KTSA, at San Antonio, Tex., and sent it to Columbia's Washington office.

"The chairman was informed of the rule," said Butcher. "Neither the transcription nor the chairman himself appeared on the network program. The chairman made no complaint."

While the commission had no comments to make on the Vandenberg incident, Commissioner Eugene Sykes pointed out "if we have any complaints we look into them." It was learned the commission had received some complaints.

The Associated Press reported from New York that Senator Vandenberg had wired George Henry Payne, of the Communications Commission, it was "ludicrous" to complain "that someone might have thought Mr. Roosevelt was participating in the broadcast in person."

Announcement Clear.

"The announcement was clear and specific that he was not present and that his quotations dated back to 1932 and 1933," Vandenberg wired.

"You are quoted in The New York Times this morning as saying that the broadcast was unethical and disrespectful. I defy you to identify a single disrespectful word, unless you call it disrespectful to prove a broken pledge.

"As for ethics, I suggest that fair play cannot be more scrupulous in quoting a candidate for President than to use his own voice and his own words. Surely we have not yet reached the point where it is unethical to compare specific promises with specific performances in assessing the record of candidates for high place."

Vandenberg said that although he regarded the incident as closed, "I do not propose to be unethically attacked for submitting a legitimate challenge to the Democratic nominee for President of the United States. I think my record proves my complete respect for the Presidency and my constant devotion to clean politics. In return, I ask for fair play and free elections."

A telegram from Ralph Beaver Strassburger, publisher of the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald, was made public by Payne. It read:

"I protest vigorously against the chicanery and deception bordering on fraud on which Senator Vandenberg's interview was based."

Associated Press dispatches from New York quoted Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley as commenting as follows:

"This is about what one would expect from Senator Vandenberg. Many months ago I made a speech in which I predicted this would be a dirty campaign. The Republican National Committee and the opposition press took exception to what I said. However, everything that has followed since has borne out the accuracy of many statement."

Night Life Injurious To Hen, Says Expert

Kansas City, Oct. 19 (AP).—The hen is primarily a home body and the bright lights and night work to which modern poultry raisers submit her will one day prove her undoing, T. W. Noland, director of the Missouri Poultry Show, warned tonight.

Those chicken fanciers who use artificial light to make their hens lay more eggs soon will have nothing but trouble—and a flock of dead chickens, he declared.

The egg laying machinery of a hen is geared to a certain speed beyond which it cannot be accelerated safely, said Noland.

3 Youths Borrow Knife, Then Slash Throat of Lender

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 19.—Lennie Murray told police today that three colored youths borrowed his pocketknife, then cut his throat with it and robbed him of $4.

Murray, a farm hand living near here, said the attack occurred on a side road near Churchville yesterday.

Dr Armfield Van Bibber, of Bel Air, who treated Murray, said the gash in his throat missed the jugular vein by less than a quarter of an inch. Murray said the men approached him while he was sitting in his parked car. They asked to borrow a knife, he said, and he took his newly sharpened jackknife from his pocket, opened it and handed it to one of the men. The men's demeanor changed and they forced him from the driver's seat, threatening to cut his throat. They drove his car into a patch of woods nearby.

There, he said, they dragged him from the car, cut his throat and took $4 from him.

Lady Astor Urges Law to Aid Labor

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Lady Nancy Astor said here today "employers" who defeat such legislation as the eight-hour day for women are "worse enemies of the State than Communists."

Discussing social legislation and a wide range of topics in an interview, the famous Virginia-born Britisher continued:

"As long as employers in business and industry fight against such measures as the eight-hour day and minimum wage laws, they will force people into union organizations. People who oppose such legislation are the people who make Communists and Socialists. And countries which refuse to face that fact will continue to have revolutions, strikes and lockouts."

By the Associated Press.

With favorable fall weather greening vast stretches of recently seeded farm land, Federal officials yesterday said this year's drought would be less costly to Uncle Sam than the disastrous one of 1934.

Tabulation of Federal drought relief expenditures in 1934 showed they were well above the half billion dollar mark. Federal expenditures so far this year were estimated at less than $100,000,000, with indications the final total might be about twice that.

More than one-third of all the counties in the United States were listed officially yesterday as emergency drought territories, but the special Agriculture Department committee which designates such territory had made no addition to the list in more than two weeks.

Nearly one-half of the 3,071 counties in the country were designated as drought areas two years ago.

Farmers in designated counties are eligible for Federal grants and loans and emergency relief jobs. Reduced railroad rates and seed conservation programs also are offered in such territory.

One of the biggest differences between 1936 and 1934 drought costs has been in Government livestock purchases.

Two years ago about $120,000,000 of Federal funds was spent to buy more than 8,000,000 head of livestock in drought areas.

This year a special fund of $5,000,000 was allocated and machinery set up to buy cattle if heavy marketing from drought areas forced prices to low levels.

A check yesterday showed less than 4,000 head had been purchased, at a cost of less than $100,000. Spokesmen in charge of this program said it probably would end this month, when processing contracts with packers expire. The meat products obtained will be turned over to State agencies for free distribution to persons on relief.

The Works Progress Administration reported 280,000 farmers in drought areas were employed on special projects, on the last date for which figures were available.

Youth, 15, Faces Electric Chair In Death Trial

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Fifteen-year-old Roland Munroe looked on with an air of boredom today as a jury qualified to inflict the death penalty was seated in Criminal Court to hear his trial on charges of slaying a crippled widow with a hammer.

The effeminate defendant with an avowed flair for exotic perfumes appeared to be day-dreaming as he lolled in a chair through the first day of the proceedings.

Assistant State's Attorney Richard Devine accused the youth of beating 65-year-old Mrs. Agnes Roffeis to death last August 29 in a robbery that netted eight dollars worth of trinkets.

Although he strove to seat jurors who would have no scruples against sending young Munroe to the electric chair, Devine asserted: "This doesn't mean that I'm going to plead for the death penalty, but that I want the jury qualified to inflict it if they see fit."

Defense Attorney Samuel Hoffman announced he would make no attempt to deny the crime, but would attempt to prove the boy was insane.

The State's attorney's office reported Munroe had confessed he killed Mrs. Roffeis early in the investigation, but later claimed he struck her with a tack hammer in self-defense.

Detectives quoted him as saying: "I don't think a jury would send a 15-year-old boy to the electric chair."

The Institute for Juvenile Research described the defendant as "intellectually adequate, but emotionally and volitionally inferior."

Dr. Harry Coffman, of the Cook County Behavior Clinic termed him "a moral imbecile."

He was declared sane by a jury last month at the conclusion of a sanity hearing.

Italians Avenge Death Of Fliers in Ethiopia

Addis Ababa, Oct. 19 (AP).—A column of 500 Italian soldiers tonight tracked down Ethiopian tribesmen to kill in "mass reprisal" for the slaying of 30 Fascist aviators last July.

The Italian soldiers were flown in transport planes to Lekemti, and immediately killed many native irregulars.

The Ethiopians scattered before the Italian machine guns and bombs.

Military headquarters reported the sortie was to avenge the deaths of the aviators including Gen. Vincenzo Magliocco, assistant chief of aviation during the Italo-Ethiopian war.

New Operation Grafts Tissue To Heart to Aid Blood Supply

Treatment for Hardening of Coronary Arteries Described to American College of Surgeons in Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—A new operation which provides a human heart with a blood supply from muscle and fat grafted to it to supplement or replace the normal supply from the coronary arteries, was described today before the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Clark S. Beck, of Western Reserve University, of Cleveland, declared the operation, which he has been gradually developing for the last five years, had been found successful in treating severe advanced cases of hardening of the coronary arteries which supply the heart muscle with blood and in some cases had brought complete relief from the pain and fear of death which victims of the disease suffer.

Essentially it consists of severing a chest muscle, opening the pericardium, or sac encolsing the heart, and inserting an end of the divided muscle in direct contact with the heart. The muscle is not attached directly to the heart, but is stitched to the pericardium. The insertion in the heart sac is not closed and fatty tissues near it are allowed to come in contact with the heart.

The result is that a union occurs between the muscle and fat in the heart itself to carry blood to it from the new source through the tiny blood vessels of the fat and muscle in much the same way that grafted skin receives a new blood supply from the tissue on which it is placed.

Dr. Beck explained that the delicate operation is intended to correct "two important defects in the construction of the human machine"—namely, that the heart depends almost entirely for blood on the coronary arteries, each only about one quarter of an inch in diameter, and that it is hung in contact with the body, but has little continuity with neighboring tissues.

If one artery of the hand or leg is tied off the extremity can continue to function, Dr. Beck declared, but "the life of the individual is placed in constant jeopardy, when his coronary arteries become clouded."

4 Killed and 30 Hurt In New Bombay Riots

Bombay, Oct. 19 (AP).—Four persons were killed and 30 injured in renewed religious rioting today, bringing the death toll to 58.

Four other persons died of injuries received Sunday.

Troops patrolled the streets as fears of an epidemic were expressed because of garbage collectors' refusal to work.

The riots were started last Thursday when a Hindu place of worship was built near a Moslem mosque.

Friend Admits Killing Woman; Body Found

Peterboro, N. H., Oct. 19 (AP).—The body of Mrs. Rose Gilman, 39, mother of five children, missing since September 30, was found today covered with leaves, in the woods of Temple Mountain.

Two hours before Sheriff Richard M. O'Dowd had announced Carl Barrett, 28, friend of the woman, had confessed he struck her on the head and killed her. O'Dowd said Barrett had confessed being on intimate terms with the woman.

Ekins Winner In Aerial Race Around World

Lands at Newark With Two Other Reporter Entrants at Manila.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—A monoplane circled over the airport at Newark, N. J., today and landed to disembark an elated young man who had established a world record for travel around the globe in ordinary commercial conveyances.

The monoplane was the Sky Chief of the TWA Lines and the traveler was H. R. Ekins, "flying reporter" of the New York World-Telegram and other Scripps-Howard newspapers, who had just gone around the world over a route 25,654 miles in 18 days, 11 hours, 31 minutes, 36 4-5 seconds.

He was smiling broadly as he stepped from the Sky Chief, with a group of passengers the air liner had carried from Burbank, Calif., to be welcomed by cheering throngs who had been waiting hours for his arrival.

It was the end of a long journey for Ekins—a journey which started with two rival newspaper writers racing him around the world when the dirigible Hindenburg left Lakehurst, N. J., in darkness and a driving rainstorm 18 days ago.

The other two reporters—Dorothy Kilgallen, of the New York Journal-International News Service, and Leo Kieran, of the New York Times-NANA Service—were far behind, in Manila, where Ekins caught the Pan American Airways Hawaii clipper six days ago.

To Attend Coronation.

Tokyo, Oct. 19 (AP).—Emperor Hirohito will be represented at the coronation of King Edward VIII by Prince and Princess Chichibu, who will sail for London in the spring, it was announced today.

Surgeons Urged to Heed Patient's Personality

Philadelphia, Oct. 19 (AP).—A plea for physicians and surgeons to make an emotional diagnosis of a patient's personality as well as a medical examination as a distinct aid to treatment was made today before the opening meeting of the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. James S. McLester, of Birmingham, Ala., former president of the American Medical Association, criticized vigorously the cool, aloof practitioner who regards a patient "merely as an aggregation of tissues and organs, each of which is expected to respond to outside agents, whether physical, chemical or biological, with almost mathematical precision."

Veteran Lawmaker Dies; Wed Aid on Death Bed

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—State Representative David E. Shanahan, whose political career embraced 42 years of consecutive service in the Illinois Legislature, was mourned today by associates and friends in politics and business.

The veteran legislator, "dean" of the Illinois Lower House, died last night at the age of 74 after five months' illness. A few hours later, his death-bed marriage of two weeks ago to the woman who served him 20 years as secretary, Mrs. Helen Troesch Shanahan, 41, was disclosed.

Pilotless Locomotive Runs 5 Miles, Crashes

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 19 (AP).—A pilotless locomotive with throttle open took a 5-mile run through the outskirts of Nashville today, thundering over street crossings and clattering through switches.

The journey ended amid crashing steel and spouting steam when the engine roared into a car loaded with logs, reared into the air and tumbled, torn and twisted, to the ground. The engine was used for switching by a chemical company.

Four Men Executed For 3 Florida Murders

Raiford, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Four men were executed at the State prison farm here today for three murders. The first two to go to the electric chair were Clarence D. (Red) Casey and Jimmy Milligan. They were convicted of killing Frank D. Palmer, Miami druggist, in 1931.

L. D. Padgett, Santa Rose County wife killer, and Lee Clark Negro from Escambia County, also convicted of killing his wife, were the other two.

This Safe, External Treatment
Helps END A COLD Quicker

The 3-Minute VapoRub Massage

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warmed cloth.

Almost before you finish rubbing, VapoRub starts to bring relief two ways at once—two direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages. This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation—helps break congestion.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets
This safe, external treatment cannot possibly upset the stomach, as constant internal "dosing" is so apt to do. It can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

Japan to Make ManchuriaCoal Beds Yield Oil

Two Liquefaction Plants Building to Extract Petrol From Mines.

By the Associated Press.

Mukden, Manchukuo, Oct. 19.—Manchukuo, long on coal but short on oil, is to have two "liquefaction of coal" plants in operation next year.

The South Manchuria Railway, spearhead of Japanese advances on the Asiatic mainland, has begun the erection of a plant in Fushun, adjacent to the world famous Open-Cut mines. The railroad, owned in part by the Japanese government, launched its project after long experimentation and a study of the work done by the Japanese Navy.

Its first investment, 1,000,000 yen (about $285,000) is to be followed by an investment of 10,000,000 yen next year. A yield of 20,000 tons of oil a year is expected at the start with the output vastly increased when the eventual investment of 54,000,000 yen becomes fully productive.

(Japanese authoritative sources disclosed last week that Japan has invested $682,000,000 in Manchukuo since the autonomous state was created under Japanese supervision in 1931. About half was said to have maintained armed forces and only about $40,000,000 used in private investments.

(The Manchukuoan government was said to be planning a five-year industrial program involving expenditure of $410,000,000.)

When Manchukuo set up a government oil monopoly over the protests of the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands, wiping out the business of Standard-Vacuum, Texas Oil, Anglo-Dutch Shell and the Soviet's Naptha Syndicate, it looked to several sources for the 30,000,000 gallons of petroleum products it needs each year.

Shale Low Grade.

The shale which overlies several Manchukuoan oil fields contains a little petroleum, but the best of it would not be worked in a country where petroleum was found. The railway has installed a 12,000,000-yen plant at Fushun and expects to raise the output there to 8,800 tons of gasoline a year.

In Dairen the refinery of the Manchuria State Petroleum Co. now uses crude oil, imported chiefly from America, while its prospectors search northwest Manchuria for new sources, so far with no success.

The great Showa steel works at Anshan can supply 4,500 tons a year of benzol. Alcohol is manufactured from Manchuria's abundant grains and the government is discussing adding some of it to the commercial gasoline.

Still Short of Need.

But all of these sources do not assure the Japanese navy and army of a wholly independent source of fuel for its planes and motorized equipment, to say nothing of steadily lengthening new bus lines or the constantly mounting numbers of cars and trucks which form a large part of America's few remaining sales in this country.

So Manchuria turns to coal, following the examples of Great Britain, Germany and France.

Soft coal is used. It is broken down by the so-called "low temperature process" into its components, yielding to the ton: Three-quarters of a ton of semicoke, 25 gallons of tar, 2.5 gallons of light oil, a small amount of ammonia and other products. The tar and oil are refined into gasoline.

An independent company, with only 5,000,000 yen capital, has started a plant at Supingka, an important city midway between Mukden and Ksinking. It is planned for an annual output of 13,000 tons of gasoline.

Pilson Misquoted In Sabotage Story

A statement published by The Post Monday, quoting Edwin Pilson, president of the Dupont Iron Works, as saying a "competitor might have smashed machinery in an effort to delay production," was denied last night by Mr. Pilson.

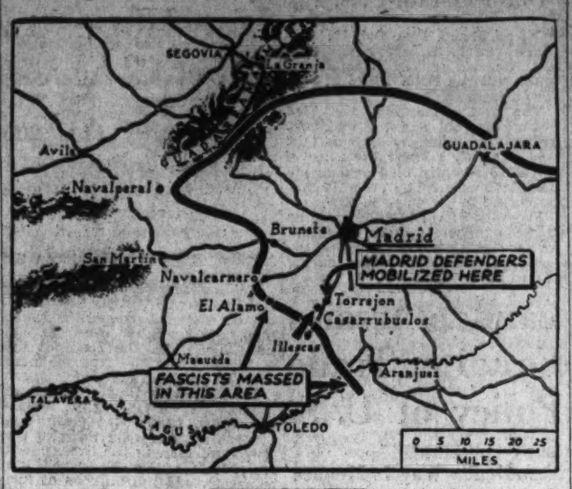
The original statement was in connection with a police investigation of suspected sabotage in an effort to stop work on a Government contract.

"We resumed production this morning," Pilson explained last night.

Insurgent Forces Push Toward Madrid



Attache Here Resigns, Asserts Spain's Future Is Up to Franco

Senor Terrasa Feels Nation's Cause of Democracy Is Lost; Declares Struggle Has Become Fight Between Anarchism and Fascism.

Proclaiming his belief in and support of a "Totalitarian Fascist State," Senor Don Juan Terrasa y Puges, Commercial Attache of the Spanish Embassy, yesterday resigned his post.

Taking this step at a dark hour for the beleaguered Caballero government in Madrid, the young diplomat defended his action on the grounds that it was done "at the dictates of my conscience."

"Whichever side wins the cause of democracy appears to be lost in Spain," he declared. "If some of the officials and representatives of the Madrid government still have any hope for democracy I fear they have been duped. Indeed, I confess that I was similarly deceived until the receipt a few days ago of reliable information from Spain that left no doubt in my mind the struggle has become a fight between anarchism and fascism."

Cabinet Is Helpless.

Asked why he did not announce his resignation when the Socialist Premier Caballero assumed control, Terrasa replied:

"Caballero might have saved democracy, but Caballero is not the government. The present cabinet in Madrid is unable to cope with the anarchists."

"There is no possibility now of a middle way out," Terrasa said, adding that in his opinion the solution of Spain's future lies in the hands of the rebel Gen. Franco.

"I only hope," the young Spaniard concluded, "that Catalonia, where I was born, will soon realize the urgent necessity of co-operating with the rest of Spain in a common effort to crush the seeds of anarchism, which is even more vital at the present moment than the cause of Catalonian autonomy for which I have always stood."

Native of Barcelona.

Terrasa, 32 years old, is a native of Barcelona, capital of Catalonia and hot-bed of revolution for a century. During his student years he took an active part in Catalan politics and studied in Spain, France and Germany before he entered the diplomatic service as vice consul to London in 1929. After serving as legation secretary in 1931 at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, he went to Soviet Russia with the first official Spanish mission in 1932.

Since 1932 Terrasa has been commercial attache here and has worked actively on the projected trade agreement between the United States and Spain. He will leave shortly for New York, but his future plans are indefinite.

The Spanish Embassy had no comment to make on the commercial attache's resignation other than to say that his action did not reflect the views of the remaining staff.

"Senor Terrasa acted in accordance with his conscience," a spokesman for the Spanish Embassy declared. "It was better for him to resign than to be forced out as the others were."

Robbery Suspects Deny Getting Loot

Detectives yesterday continued to search for $1,400 loot taken Saturday night from Israel Orlove, O street market merchant. A young white woman and two colored men, whom police say admit the hold-up deny they got any money.

Police continued to question the three in connection with the robbery. They gave there names as Virginia Crosson Joseph, 18, of 712 A street southeast, Ernest W. Mitchell, 30, colored, of 1731 Willard street northwest, and John Harris, colored, 34, of 1634 Florida avenue northwest.

A 15-year-old sister-in-law of Mrs. Joseph is being held at the Receiving Home as a witness, although police say she had nothing to do with the hold-up.

Orlove was robbed of his receipts by a colored man just after he left the market. The gun used in the hold-up was found later in Mitchell's car.

Police said the woman, formerly a cashier for Orlove, admits planning the robbery and soliciting the aid of the two colored men. Mitchell, she said, actually held the gun, although she and Harris were in the getaway car. All deny they took any money.

Maryland Farmer Dies Day After His Brother

Middletown, Md., Oct. 19.—Clarence L. Ahalt, 63, prominent farmer south of Middletown, died at Frederick City Hospital this afternoon a little more than 24 hours after his twin brother, Ora S. Ahalt, fell dead at his home in York, Pa., from heart disease. The former had been ill for several weeks. Both brothers were engaged in farming for many years, Ora having retired a few years ago and moved his family from Middletown to York.

South America Arms for War On Small Scale

Lack of Money Prevents Military Race; Troops Few, Efficient.

By the Associated Press.

Millions of men could be called to arms by the ten nations of South America in the event of war—but there would be equipment for not more than 2,000,000 men for the whole continent.

Although the South American countries have improved their defenses in the last few years, lack of money has prevented widespread improvement programs in most countries.

Only Argentina, which ranks as the most effective military and naval power in South America, has been able to shape a broad navy and army improvement program. Even Argentina's program, in comparison with Europe's armaments rush, is extremely small-scaled.

Argentina is building a new 7,000-ton training cruiser and has contracted for seven new destroyers, while building several scout ships at home and also will spend about $11,000,000 for new airplanes.

Brazil ranks first in South American manpower, with about 94,000 men in the army and various military police forces. Argentinan strength is about 26,000, about equal to that of Chile. Both the Chilean and Argentine forces, the Chilean including 15,000 caribineros (gendarmes) are rated high in efficiency.

The ABC countries, Argentina, Brazil and Chile, rank as the first three in South American military power, but observers say they doubt if the three combined have in stock more than a million rifles. The other seven South American countries are reported to have an additional million or million and a half between them.

After those three, South American armies are small. Peru has an army of 10,000, Colombia about the same, Uruguay 7,000, Bolivia and Paraguay 5,000 each (the maximum permitted under the armistice protocol, which ended their three-year war in 1935) Ecuador, 5,200 and Venezuela, 8,000.

Argentina and Chile are planning increases, but only of a few thousand men in each case.

Argentina may have as many as 300 efficient planes in both its army and navy air forces, but that ranks the highest on the continent. Brazil has a couple of hundred efficient planes, Chile about an equal number or a few less, and the other countries rank down the line.

In navy strength, South American countries have comparatively few modern, fast or powerful ships.

Argentina, the best equipped, has two 25-year-old battleships; two fine 6,800-ton cruisers, built in 1929; a 7,800-ton training cruiser now building in England; two 39-year-old light cruisers; nine destroyers and seven new destroyers contracted for besides three submarines and two armored river gunboats.

Meteor Reported In Newfoundland

Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Oct. 19 (AP).—Residents reported a meteor burst over Avalon Peninsula today.

Advices came from widely separated communities from Fortune Bay to Conception Bay reporting "balls of fire falling."

Residents of Harbor Grace said "a ball of fire appeared to fall a short distance from the airport."

There was no indication of serious damage in the first reports, and many persons here said the bursting object looked like "an airplane in flames."

need of preparing for defense of the capital city.

The government clamped down new regulations to conserve resources of the capital. Street lights were ordered turned off at 10 p. m. and water supplies were shut off from 4 p. m. to 8 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 7 a. m.

Stringent regulations for the capital's food supply also were ordered.

Militia Forced Back.

Talavera, Spain, Oct. 19 (AP).—Fascist insurgents tonight hammered spokes of steel down two highroads leading into the hub—Madrid.

One motorized column rolled northeast from Illescas, forcing the retreating government militia back on Torrejon de la Calzada, only 16 miles from the capital.

Another fork of the Fascist advance marched speedily up the converging road from Maqueda. Tonight the advance units of this column were in El Alamo, only 4 miles from the immediate objective, Navalcarnero.

Rebel leaders everywhere were jubilant, and Gen. Emilio Mola, in a radio broadcast, said his troops would be in Madrid "within a few days."

Most observers, however, thought that the insurgent military high command would await further consolidation of its positions before launching the final direct attack on Madrid.

Parliament Session Asked.

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—Leaders of the Labor Party tonight asked Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin to call Parliament for an immediate session on the Spanish neutrality situation.

The Laborites, in so ding, sided with the Russian representatives who were plainly irked by what they called the "tortoise-like" pace of the neutrality committee.

(In Moscow, informed sources said Russia was determined to bolt the neutrality pact and would do so in a day or two. The Russians were angered over the committee's delay in acting on Soviet suggestions for a Portuguese blockade to prevent foreign aid to the Spanish insurgents.)

Clement R. Attlee, Laborite leader in the House of Commons, wrote Baldwin that "although allegations have not been proved definitely, there is strong ground for belief that the policy of nonintervention (in Spain) has been deliberately violated."

(Russia and the Spanish Madrid government both have protested to the committee that Germany, Italy and Portugal were aiding the Spanish insurgent Fascists in direct violation of the neutrality pact.)

Dr. W. Angie Smith To Leave Capital

Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, one of the leading clerics of his denomination, was transferred to the First Methodist Episcopal Church at Birmingham, Ala., yesterday.

At Birmingham, he will succeed Dr. Clovis Chappel, former pastor of the Mount Vernon Church here. The Rev. J. W. Rustin, present minister at Ghent Church, Norfolk, Va., will replace Dr. Smith.

The Birmingham Church is the second largest in the denomination, having a membership of more than 4,500. Dr. Smith's change, he said last night, was made at his own request because of the illness of his oldest son.

Hoover 'Deceit' Charges Denied By Morgenthau

By Sidney Olson.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., last night presented a detailed official denial of charges made by former President Hoover that the Roosevelt Administration "juggled" accounts, and had instituted "an entirely new system of double bookkeeping."

Morgenthau's reply, originally slated to be made as a speech Friday night, was issued in the form of a statement at his press conference yesterday, after he had conferred with President Roosevelt at the White House.

The Secretary, reading his statement, denied the existence of a "double budget," said the practices which Hoover had criticized as "intellectual dishonesty" had actually originated during the Hoover Administration, and insisted that "the facts do not support any of his criticisms of the Government accounting and reporting methods."

Demands Reply.

The statement differentiated sharply between the criticisms of other politicians and those of the only living former President on the basis that "when a former President of the United States in a public address charges the Treasury of the United States with "intellectual dishonesty' and 'pernicious deceit,' the public interest demands that those charges be not ignored."

Morgenthau remarked in this connection that "if the people were to take Hoover's criticisms seriously, Government bonds would be affected. I notice the bond market went up Saturday and again today." Hoover's address was made in Philadelphia Friday night.

The statement said:

"* * * I believe it can be truthfully said that this Administration has furnished the public more detailed information on the financial operations of the Government than any preceding Administration."

"Three Formulas."

Segregating Hoover's criticisms into "three formulas" which the former President said the present Administration had adopted in order to distort the Government expenditures, the statement noted first the Hoover charge that:

"The Roosevelt Administration has made some beautiful economies by just omitting certain items from its regular expenditures before it comes to the totals announced to the people. They appear only in an index."

The statement said that on May 1, 1930, Hoover's budget director wrote the Secretary of the Treasury that Hoover had asked him to see if "arrangements" could be made for separate tabulation of receipts and expenditures under the captions of general funds, special funds and trust funds.

Has Remained Changed.

On July 1, 1930, the Treasury statement was changed to meet Hoover's wishes, Morgenthau said, and has remained that way since, as the present Secretary finds no fault with this method of bookkeeping, terming it "a distinct improvement in budgetary procedure and the reporting of financial data."

The Secretary added:

"But when Mr. Hoover ascribes responsibility for this change to the present Administration he misstates facts."

Hoover's second formula said, "It has always been a rightful principle of Government accounting under the old commandments to pay all receipts or all final recoveries from revolving accounts into the Treasury. Then Congress appropriates them out and thus holds control of the expenditures."

Old Treasury Practices.

Morgenthau, noting that the use of revolving funds and the Treasury accounting procedure of them are old Treasury practices, said:

"There has been no change in the method of handling revolving funds in the Treasury's daily statement and in the budget since 1920. The procedure today is the same procedure followed throughout President Hoover's own administration." He cited the Farm Board's revolving fund in this connection, a parallel which some observers held to be faulty in that those expenditures were not then deducted from total expenditures in the manner in which Reconstruction Finance Corporation moneys are noted on the statement today.

Morgenthau said, "In criticizing the method of accounting for revolving funds Mr. Hoover is condemning his own practice."

More Potent Formula.

The third Hoover formula stated: "This is a much more potent formula for juggling scoreboards. In the days of the old-time arithmetic the President and the director of the budget yearly fought each of the Federal bureaus over every item of expenditures. Congress fought at the items and finally made a detailed appropriation for each of them, down to the salary of every clerk."

In answering this point, Secretary Morgenthau drew a distinction "between the manner in which the Congress had made available for expenditure lump-sum appropriations for recovery and relief, on the one hand, and on the other hand, the accounting and reporting procedure of the Treasury Department in connection with such expenditures."

Information Published.

He said that fundamental Treasury practice made accounting for relief expenditures separate from that for the departments, but that the same information was regularly published for both types of expenditure.

In answering the Hoover hint that small type was used to conceal recovery-fund expenditures in the budget statements, Morgenthau said: "This is not true. Detailed expenditures from recovery funds are printed in the budget statements in italics of the same size type immediately following the related items payable from regular funds."

The Secretary raised his voice as he read his answer to the Hoover charges of "double bookkeeping" and a "double budget." He said:

"There has been much loose talk about the use of a double budget and double bookkeeping. There is no such thing in the United States Government as a double budget, nor is there any system of double bookkeeping. * * * In order that the public may be informed as to the uses made of the funds appropriated, the Treasury classifies its expenditures into two divisions, namely 'general' and 'recovery and relief.' These classifications do not indicate in any sense double bookkeeping or a double budget."

"Misleading," He Says.

Asked why the receipts and expenditures of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were not daily included in the total Government receipts and expenditures statement, the Secretary answered that this would be "misleading." He said such a practice would "pad out" the totals by the amount of the "roll" or turnover of funds in the revolving funds of the RFC. Thus, if $1,000,000 were spent 10 times it would show as a $10,000,000 expenditure, he insisted. Administration critics have held the view that this would not be an entirely legitimate and factual reporting of expenditures.

In Perth Amboy, N. J., meanwhile, Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, in defending the Administration's bookkeeping methods, lashed out sarcastically at Gov. Landon, saying: "Behold the miracle man! He knows, or his advisers know, that in the year 1936 three-fourths of the deficit is due to expenditures for recovery and relief. To balance the budget without new taxes, it would be necessary to eliminate all recovery and relief items, and in addition to reduce regular expenditures by a billion and a half. The way to balance the budget is to build up the national incomes and reduce unemployment."

Social Service Heads Assail Child Welfare Law; Cite Model Code Need to Protect Young Wards

Modern Juvenile Court Urged by Committee After Wide Study.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Cobblestone streets and the coach in four, symbols of the Capital of long ago, have "gone with the wind."

Modern Washington prides itself on setting an up-to-date pace for the country in most respects, yet according to welfare authorities, it still supports an antiquated juvenile system which smacks strongly of the lavender and old lace era.

"Or of an even earlier era," said Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the Socfal Hygiene Society. "Laws relating to children born out of wedlock in the District are positively medieval. They deal with illegitimates on a penal, rather than a social welfare basis. They are entirely out of keeping with enlightened public opinion, which accepts the principle that every child, irrespective of the circumstances of his birth, has a right to adequate opportunity for growth and development.

The Social Hygiene Society is now strongly back of a proposed illegitimacy act designed "to modernize the medieval laws for children born out of wedlock."

Three years ago, a committee was appointed to draft a new act that would replace the so-called "bastardy act," which has been in effect in the District since 1912.

In drawing up the proposed set of laws, the committee endeavored to omit any terms that would imply—as does the present law—that either the unmarried mother or the illegitimate child is a criminal, and to eliminate all the incriminating phraseology with which the present law is so generously seasoned.

Experts from local welfare agencies and the United States Children's Bureau, working with physicians and lawyers, made a study of the laws of Iowa, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota and Wisconsin, as well as the uniform illegitimacy act, which has served as a guide in drawing up new illegitimacy laws in a number of States.

In contrast with the present law which begins, "Every child shall be deemed a bastard who shall be forgotten and born out of wedlock . . ." the proposed act strikes out the scarlet-letter implication by identifying itself simply as "a bill relating to children born out of wedlock in the District of Columbia."

The major advantages of the proposed legislation are as follows:

The Health Office shall record the registration of all illegitimate births, and shall turn such records over to the Board of Public Welfare for investigation. (The purpose of this is to put welfare authorities in touch with such cases, so that help can be given if it is needed.)

The father shall be required to share in the support of the child until the latter is 16, or until it is adopted, regardless of any change in the mother's marital status. (The present law requires support until the child is 14.)

The mother may file action for the child's support at any time. (The present law provides that action must be filed before the child is 2 years old. If, after that time, the mother learns that the father is in a position to share in the support of the child, she cannot file suit against him.)

The father may make an informal acknowledgment of paternity, and agree to share in the child's support, before a judge in the presence of two witnesses. (The present law provides for a ponderous procedure involving prosecution of the father, and places the entire case on a criminal basis.)

"Under the present law, too much of the burden is placed on the mother and child and not enough on the father, with the result that the child often suffers for lack of proper protection," Everett said. "The proposed plan, protective rather than penal, would make a real attempt to locate the father in every case of illegitimacy so that he could be required to share in the support of the child. Furthermore, the plan would place no legal stigma on the child, but would give him some of the opportunities children of unmarried parents have had for many years in Norway, Sweden and Denmark, where social legislation is far superior to ours."

Lack of economic protection and continued personal responsibility causes illegitimates to be subjected frequently to transfers from one kind of care to another. The child, failing to get continuity of training and affection, often develops the feeing of being unwanted. Miss A. Patricia Morse has discovered in her work with the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare. "This is the chief reason why many children born out of wedlock come later to the attention of public agencies as dependents or delinquents," she said.

Feeling that the proposed illegitimacy act would be a valuable factor in keeping the child of unmarried parents from becoming a public charge, the Social Hygiene Society has placed the proposed act, which it has been sponsoring for three years, on its "must" list of projects for this year. "We are more strongly behind it now than ever before," Everett said, "for we are more convinced than ever that the seedy law in effect today offers little or no protection to either unmarried mothers or their offspring. If the new illegitimacy act served no other purpose, it would at least effectively bring the unmarried father into a situation for which he should be held equally responsible with the mother."

District welfare workers in general feel that if the old laws affecting adoption, birth registration and illegitimacy could be brought up to date, children of the District would be protected to a far greater extent than ever before. They are convinced, however, there are still other phases of the present system that must be changed. The Juvenile Court in the District, they point out, is now a criminal court—meting out so much punishment for so much "crime," when it could be a chancery court concerned with welfare and protection.

(How can such a change be effected? What agencies and individuals have been working toward this end? Answers to these questions may be found tomorrow in The Post.)

Women Workers Strike.

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP).—While the bargemen's strike ended, nearly 100 women employes of a gas plant struck tonight. The strikers blamed the gas company's refusal to examine their demands for improved working conditions as the reason for the strike. Only one plant serving the Paris area was affected.

decision of this court that the attempted act is not an act of Congress within its powers," he said.

Action of justices in rejecting McClennen's request leaves the social security act one of the few New Deal laws not scheduled to come under the eye of the court at this session.

The Alabama Power Co. and the Texas Utilities Co., appeals of which for review were denied yesterday, charged Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes' loans and grants to municipalities were fostering public-owned electric light plants in "destructive" competition with private systems.

The Texas Utilities Co. was opposing PWA advances to Plainview, Tex., and the Alabama Power Co. contesting loans and grants to Florence, Sheffield, Tuscumbia, Decatur, Hartselle, Guntersville and Russellville, Ala.

Rejection of their petition in no way affects hearings on the Duke Power Co. suit, which presents similar issues. Former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker heads legal counsel for the Duke group.

N. Y. Mortgage Law Upheld.

Other actions yesterday by the court:

By agreement of counsel, dismissed a challenge of the 1933 New York mortgage moratorium law Joseph and Angelina Loporto, of New York, had unsuccessfully tried to foreclose a mortgage. The New York courts upheld the State law, which suspended foreclosures on past due bonds and mortgages.

Upheld, in effect, a Colorado statute prohibiting operation of restaurants in rooms where merchandising is done. Refused to consider an appeal against the law brought by S. H. Kress & Co., F. W. Woolworth, Inc., and other chain and drug companies.

Granted a Supreme Court review to Dirk de Jonge, a Communist, who is seeking to escape a 7-year term in the Oregon State prison for violation of the State's criminal syndicalism law.

Granted a review to the Washington State tax commission in its effort to uphold constitutionality of a State law imposing a 2 per cent sales tax in a case involving construction work on the Grand Coulee dam.

Hangman Executes 4, 'Too Tired' for 2 Others

Belgrade, Oct. 19 (AP).—Because the hangman was "too tired," two condemned murderers still were alive tonight in the Yugoslavian town of Zajecar.

They were to have been executed today, but facing the noose ahead of them were four mail robbers.

When the robbers were hanged, the hangman postponed the execution of the murderers until tomorrow with the simple explanation he was "too tired" for the task today.

Capone's Florida Villa To Be Sold for U. S. Tax

Miami Beach, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—The Government served notice today it would sell Al Capone's big white villa on Palm Island at auction next month.

The stucco mansion, the tiled swimming pool and the extensive grounds on Biscayne Bay will be sold to satisfy a Federal tax lien of $51,498.08 recently filed against the gangster's wife. The property was purchased in her name in 1928.

From then until 1932, the year he went to prison to serve ten years for income tax evasion, Capone entertained his friends there during the winter months.

neither national nor world prosperity. * * *

"Our policies will be so co-ordinated as to give the farmer a full crop at a fair price, regain his lost foreign markets and maintain in this country a fair exchange value between industrial and farm products."

Landon's statement on NRA referred to a statement by James Roosevelt, the President's son. He said that "as an individual" he saw "no alternative" but to ask for a constitutional amendment to make NRA purposes effective.

"The President," the Republican candidate said, "must specifically deny that his son's views are his views. Otherwise the silence of the father will be the confession that the son spoke for the President when he gave us to understand that his father intended to perpetuate the NRA willy-nilly."

At Trinidad, Colo., and Raton, N. Mex., the Governor reiterated that "the Republican Party proposed in its platform to protect the American farmer in the domestic market and pledges to administer relief without partisanship."

"The Administration has been in power three and one-half years and has found money to spend on fossils," Landon said, "but it has gathered no facts and hasn't the basic information necessary to work out a sound plan."

Seven thousand four hundred feet up at Glorieta, N. Mex., Landon came out on his rear platform and shook hands with a group of school children gathered there as a mounted and chapped cowboy looked on smilingly.

Among party leaders with whom the nominee conferred while traveling across New Mexico were Cyrus McCormick, of Nambé, national committeeman, who told reporters "the only way the Democrats can win this State is to steal it and I hope we will be clever enough to prevent that;" Jesus Baca, Santa Fe publisher, and George Craig, Albuquerque, State chairman.

Townsendites Lose Hopes to Elect Congress

because of his membership on the committee.

The majority report, signed by Representative C. Jasper Bell (Democrat), Missouri, committee chairman, and six other members, has been filed with the clerk of the House, but it is not expected to be released until after election.

The United Press quoted Tolan as saying that "'in reading the majority report, one would glean that there is not one good thing in the Townsend Plan in the lives, minds and hearts of Dr. Townsend, his managers, and the millions of fine American citizens who believe in him and his plan."

Tolan challenged "anyone to show from the record that a single penny (collected by the Townsend organization) was not accounted for."

Fourteen candidates for the Senate are listed by the Townsend Weekly. This list does not contain the name of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, who recently made a statement favorable to the plan. Senator Wallace H. White, of Maine, recently re-elected, is on the list, as are all three of the newly elected Representatives from that State.

In contrast to the Townsend claims, a survey by the Republican Congressional campaign committee lists only 84 candidates for Congress, representing all parties, as being definitely favorable to the Townsend plan. Should everyone of the candidates for the House listed by the Townsendites be elected and should they all vote for the plan, they would be 18 short of a majority.

The Townsend movement has not influenced the campaign nearly to the extent that its leaders had anticipated. One of the reasons is the joining of forces of the Townsend movement, the Union Party and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's Union for Social Justice. Coughlin has devoted his attention almost exclusively to denunciation of the Roosevelt Administration and its monetary policies. He has said little about the Townsend movement and his voice has drowned out those of the Townsendites.

Nevertheless, the Townsendites are counting heavily upon the combination to elect some candidates to Congress and they are even claiming that William Lemke, the Union Party candidate, who has indorsed the old-age pension plan only in part, will carry six States.

Demand Quiz Into Insurance Premium Setup

By the United Press.

Detroit, Oct. 19.—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, tonight demanded a Federal investigation of insurance companies and attacked provisions of the social security act as unsatisfactory.

In a campaign address, Thomas charged that salaries paid by insurance companies are "grossly excessive," and the mortality table on which life insurance premiums are based is more than 30 years old.

He also said the attempt of companies to combine protection with profitable investment and to sell "a policy to meet every type of need," is not a success from the standpoint of the average small policy holder.

Hits Policy Terms.

He also charged the arrangements under which policies lapse or are surrendered or on which the holder can borrow money, are in most cases unfair to the holder.

"This whole situation requires fearless and constructive investigation for which I promise to agitate, whoever is elected President," Thomas said. "Its grosser evils demand immediate legislation."

Concerning the campaign statement of Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential candidate, that "no insurance policy is safe," Thomas said: "The insurance companies are safe as long as the capitalistic system is safe. And, to the degree that President Roosevelt has brought temporary relief to the capitalist system, he has brought security to the insurance companies."

Landon Speech Rapped.

Thomas charged Gov. Alfred M. Landon with making a partial and distorted use of arguments against the social security law which originally were used by others when the bill was before Congress. He also said the Republican candidate has offered no substitute.

Thomas said three faults in the social security law were omission of any arrangement for health insurance, inadequate grants for immediate old-age assistance, unsatisfactory arrangements for unemployment insurance.

Japan's Air Plans Stir Wide Concern

Geneva, Oct. 19 (AP).—Japan's plan to spread a network of airlines to the far-flung Pacific Islands, which formemrly were German colonies created wide interest today.

Speculation was stirred because the decision to operate planes to the mandated islands in the south Pacific follows inauguration of service between San Francisco and Manila in the Philippine Islands, by the Pan-American Airways.

The plan, announced in Japan's annual report to the League of Nations, was studied closely also because of the enormous area the islands cover. The mandated territory, comprising the Marianne, Caroline and Marshall groups, includes 1,400 islands, islets and reefs.

They stretch out about 1,300 miles from north to south and about 2,700 miles from east to west.

(The nearest islands are almost directly west of the southern tip of the Philippines, separated by several hundred miles of water, and extend westward toward Hawaii.)

The Japan asserted the undertaking was "to promote efficiency of administration and assist industrial and social activities of the inhabitants."

Guggenheim Leaves Business for Movies

Salt Lake City, Oct. 19 (AP).—M. Robert Guggenheim, jr., scion of the wealthy family, resigned a learn-the-trade-from-the-bottom-up mining job today—and headed for Hollywood.

The 25-yearold heir to mining millions said he had accepted a production department position with United Artists.

"I am taking a modest position," he said. "But I hope some day to be a director. I want to get started while I am still young."

Guggenheim said the move was in response to an urge he has felt "at least 15 years."

He was graduated from Dartmouth in 1933. He was an ore buyer here for the family-controlled American Smelting & Refining Co. His father is Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, of New York, son of the founder of the Guggenheim fortune.

Burdick Held for Jury.

Westport, Conn., Oct. 19 (AP).—Don Burdick, 36-year-old New York broker, pleaded innocent today through his attorney to a charge that he shot his wealthy father-in-law, Harry E. Byram, "with intent to murder." Within a minute after the case was called, Judge Frank McMahon bound Burdick over to the January term of the superior court.

Heads N. W. Ayer & Son

H. A. BATTEN.

Batten President Of N.W. Ayer & Son

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Announcement is made of the election of H. A. Batten as president of N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., nationally known Philadelphia advertising agency, succeeding the late Wilfred W. Fry. William M. Armistead, former vice president and director, has been re-elected to the board of directors. Mr. Armistead, who has been continuously with the corporation since 1909, for the last two years in an advisory capacity, now resumes active participation in its affairs.

Mr. Batten, prior to his election to the presidency, was a vice president, director and chairman of the management committee of the board of directors designated by Mr. Fry to administer the business during his last illness. Mr. Batten is 39 years old, and has been with N. W. Ayer & Son for 24½ years, war service excepted.

Will Study Enters Poisoning Inquiry

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Assistant District Attorney Elbert T. Gallagher said today that Chang Soo Lee, Korean servant charged with poisoning two relatives of his employer, Mrs. Ada L. Churchill, was to have received substantial bequests on her death.

The assertion was contradicted by Acting City Judge Charles A. Voss, attorney for the 64-year-old widow of a prominent lawyer, who said he had intimate knowledge of the family affairs for years and that no legacy had been planned for Lee.

The pair Lee was charged with poisoning, Mr. and Mrs. George Reeves, of Indianapolis, remained in critical condition with lead poisoning at White Plains Hospital.

Gettler will examine the stomach contents of the patients and quantities of various kinds of poison which the Korean admitted he had in the house to kill squirrels, Ferris said.

Stock Sale Fraud Charged to Seven

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP).—Indictment of seven men on charges of misrepresenting stock for sale was announced here today. The action followed an investigation of Benners, Owens & Co., instituted last spring by John T. Callahan, of New York, assistant general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Callahan petitioned the Federal district court here on May 15 for a temporary injunction restraining the brokerage house from selling Old Dutch Refining and other stocks "in a fraudulent manner." The officials who were indicted today had been subpensed to appear before the grand jury which voted the indictments. None was available for comment on the indictments late today.

Callahan's petition alleged that Benners, Owens & Co. pushed Old Dutch stock and misrepresented it in circulars it distributed. The Old Dutch Refining Co., of Muskegon, Mich., published advertisements repudiating what it said were the brokerage house's misrepresentations.

Scully Is Chosen Mayor.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (AP).—Cornelius D. Scully formally became mayor of Pittsburgh today, succeeding William N. McNair. The city council unanimously elected him to fill the office he has occupied since October 6, when McNair resigned. But McNair has withdrawn his resignation and his claim may be carried into the courts within a few days.

More In The Old Tradition.

The sequel to the Oxon Hill flag-saluting incident is heartening proof that old-fashioned Americanism is not yet dead in the Maryland Free State.

It will be recalled that some months ago the six children of August Ludke, a devout member of a sect known as Jehovah's Witnesses, refused to participate in the flag-saluting exercises at their school. They were expelled, the authorities ruling that there was no choice in the matter, daily obeisance to the flag being mandatory. The law, they said, is the law. But to many people it was a reminder that the law can sometimes be, in Mr. Bumble's phrase "an ass." Patriotism that is imposed by governmental edict, stimulated by regimentation and compulsory outward observance, is a shallow kind of patriotism at best.

So it is encouraging to learn that the Ludke children, though thrust into limbo by the Maryland school authorities, are not to be deprived of their schooling. Their own parlor has been transformed into a classroom with an American flag proudly hanging over the improvised blackboard. Two school teachers have volunteered to teach the youngsters the three R's while a Washingtonian has agreed to visit Oxon Hill twice a week to give them physical training.

Both the determination of the Ludke family to see that their children get a proper education without offending their harmless religious convictions, and the readiness of others to help them, are heartening manifestations of fundamental American traditions. Marylanders, who were very strong for personal liberty when deprived of the right to drink, might constructively apply the same philosophy to the Ludke case.

Minimizing The Deficit.

In several recent speeches President Roosevelt has attempted to show that the net national debt is now lower in proportion to income than the national debt was in March, 1933. According to Secretary Roper's preliminary estimates, national income for the current year is expected to approximate $60,000,000,000—a figure about 50 per cent above the abnormally low level of 1932. Since the present Administration came into office, the net debt (i. e., gross debt less general fund balances) has likewise risen about 50 per cent, exclusive of contingent liabilities.

It serves little purpose to discuss the validity of rough computations introduced for the express purpose of minimizing the seriousness of a steadily mounting and already dangerously high Federal debt. To contrast the present debt burden, as gauged by probable income, with that of a depression year which marked the culmination of a prolonged deflation, proves little except the fallibility of misused statistics.

A much truer picture of the magnitude of the Federal debt burden would have been afforded if the President had contrasted the present net debt of nearly $32,000,000,000 with the debt of about $17,000,000,000 which the people were carrying in 1929—a year when the national income was over $20,000,000,000 above current estimates and the Federal budget was, moreover, balanced.

The President's biased discussion of the Government's financial position is especially disturbing because it indicates that he is not fully aware of the danger of deficit financing. His light-hearted indifference to the menace of a constantly growing debt was shown quite strikingly in a recent statement that payment of the soldiers' bonus is "now out of the way and is no longer a future obligation of the Government." Gov. Landon effectively exposed the fallacy of thus assuming that outlays which have added about a billion and a half dollars to the public debt ceased to be an "obligation" when the demands of the veterans had been satisfied, or momentarily silenced.

The President's attitude in this case is characteristic of his method of treating the problems created by Government spending. Obligations incurred by shifting the cost of present outlays to future generations do not appear to worry him. He expects that the budget will eventually balance itself "within a year or two" as a result of "income increasing and expenditures declining." The only new note in this familiar refrain is his reference to a possible drop in expenditures. But in the absence of any plans for retrenchment, a continuance of deficits with a rise in debt charges is to be expected.

The Reciprocal Trade Program.

In a careful and favorable appraisal of Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade program, the Foreign Policy Association estimates that reduction or concessions have been applied to about one-sixth of our exports and one-fifth of our dutiable imports, while assurances have been given that one-fourth of our non-dutiable imports will be retained on the free list. The report notes, however, that no agreements have yet been concluded with countries which are large producers of competitive agricultural products, such as Argentina, Uruguay, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

So far, in fact, the chief importance of the reciprocal trade agreements appears to be due to their influence in arresting the upward trend of trade barriers and the multiplication of new duties through shifts from the free list. In a world that has been steadily tending toward nationalism of an extreme sort, these seemingly negative achievements have actually very great positive value.

According to reports the next move to extend the program will take the form of a drive to secure the adherence of more South American and Central American nations. An excellent opportunity for preliminary approaches will be afforded when the Inter-American Peace Conference meets at Buenos Aires in December. Of course the carrying out of such plans will to some extent depend upon the outcome of the election. Gov. Landon has announced opposition to several major aspects of the tariff-bargaining program of the Administration, though there is reason to believe that if elected he would moderate previously expressed opinions on this subject.

Apart from such political uncertainties, various economic and financial obstacles may interfere with the progress of the movement to lower trade barriers by agreement. A combination of depreciated currencies and systems of exchange control, for instance, constitutes barriers to comprehensive trade agreements with most Latin-American countries. As our pact with Brazil shows, such handicaps do not preclude action but they unquestionably limit the scope of negotiations. While the debtor nations to the south of us are of course interested in the news of our monetary agreement with Great Britain and France, it is not yet apparent that this accord will have any immediate effect in modifying their own exchange-control systems.

The Hull program has made admirable headway in face of the handicaps of fluctuating currencies, partly because of assistance afforded by a world-wide economic recovery which has made it easier to overcome resistance to tariff reductions. The next stage of development will provide a more searching test of the permanent benefits obtainable through mutual concessions under trade pacts. The chances for a successful and vigorous drive to lower excessively high trade barriers will certainly be much better if the recent tripartite monetary agreement is carried out with a view to stabilizing world currencies at levels that can be permanently maintained without manipulation.

In that event, and assuming that no domestic disturbances interfere with the maintenance of exchange stability, the United States should concentrate on furthering the preliminary negotiations taken with our best customer, Great Britain, and with other nations that have benefited only indirectly, if at all, from the pacts so far concluded.

Gaining Employer Confidence.

Under the old dispensation, when neither State nor Federal Governments felt any responsibility for the unemployed, the few public employment offices in existence were called upon to find jobs for the least efficient workers, and for the unfortunates who could not get work through any other channel. Consequently the employment exchange system that is today being built up to facilitate the placement of workers of all degrees of competence and skill has to overcome prejudices against public agencies which are to a large extent heritages from the past.

The United States Employment Service is, therefore, not only intensifying its drive to place applicants for work in private employment, but is also carrying on a door to door campaign to increase employer cooperation. Its September report notes that the "personnel of the Employment Service offices made 101,996 calls upon employers in search of placement opportunities." It is evident that mere registration of the names and occupations of the unemployed is only a part, and much the less difficult part, of the task confronting a really efficient public employment agency. When the new services have become well established and favorably known, of course, personal calls upon employers will no longer be so necessary.

Constant vigilance, however, is essential to insure that confidence placed in the employment agency's judgment is justified. The ultimate test of its effectiveness is not the number of placements, but the number of jobs provided for people qualified to perform the work for which they are paid. The visits to employers give placement officials an opportunity to learn what they should do as well as to tell what they are doing.

In view of the immense amount of work involved in setting up a Federal-State system, handicapped at the start by inadequate funds, the announcement that the United States Employment Service during September found jobs for approximately 390,000 persons in normal nonrelief employment is most encouraging. Some of our politicians apparently do not yet appreciate the rapid strides that have been made toward dealing systematically with the problem of reemployment. If they did they would cease to call for expensive censuses of the unemployed and would concentrate on the feasibility of registering all work-relief recipients at the employment exchanges. Thus a current census of unemployment and a check on politics and waste in relief could simultaneously be obtained.

M. Blum's Warning.

When the French Radical Socialist Party meets at Biarritz on Thursday, the principal decision the delegates will be called upon to make is whether or not to break away from the Popular Front which now governs the republic.

During recent weeks signs have been multiplying that the more moderate section of the party has become disturbed over the policies sponsored by the Blum cabinet. In particular they have felt that the Communist tail is more and more wagging the Popuar Front dog, as seen in the continuance of the strike movement, despite the gains made by the workers through parliamentary action.

In view of fears that the Communists are planning to exact an ever-higher price for their continued support of the government, the moderate Radical Socialists have been agitating for the destruction of the present all-Left coalition. They would replace it with a new coalition from which only the Communists and the extreme reactionaries on the Right would be excluded. Personally friendly to M. Blum, who since he took office has won many golden opinions for his statesmanlike conduct, they have let it be known that, in the event of the overthrow of the present government, they would not be averse to having him head such a "National Front" government.

But this plan has now been effectively scotched by the premier. In a speech which M. Blum made at a demonstration of the Radical Socialist Party at Orleans, he declared that under no circumstance would he permit himself to become a party to any such maneuver. Should the Popular Front government be overthrown, he said, there would be no alternative but the dissolution of Parliament and the holding of another election, with all the confusion such developments would entail. No parliamentary majority is possible outside the Popular Front, he added.

What makes this statement so painful for the restive Radical Socialists is that it seems to be true, and for that reason places them on the horns of a real dilemma. They do not like to be teamed with the Communists. But if the Socialists refuse to join in a new coalition it cannot be formed. And for their party to break away from the Popular Front, without the possibility of seeing a "National Front" come into existence, would only lead to confusion and worse.

It is difficult to believe, therefore, that the Biarritz congress of Radical Socialists will see a break in the Popular Front government. The right-wing of that party can take comfort in the way Premier Blum has shown, in his Spanish policy and otherwise, that he is anything but the tool of the Communists. He has now given further assurances that he will see that order is fully maintained in France and that social reform will be brought about by gradual stages rather than through revolutionary means. The Communists, too, seem prepared to give hostages to their unwilling allies. They have informed M. Daladier, the chairman of the Radical Socialist Party, that they intend to remain loyal to the Popular Front and its principles.

The Popular Front may be, as some insist, a thing of shreds and patches. Nonetheless, with chaos as the alternative, it may well continue to survive crises that in the past would have overthrown far more homogeneous administrations.

We've never studied astronomy, and so this question may expose an appalling ignorance: If a comet were patted on the head, would it wag its tail?

If misery loves company, a centipede with corns and a giraffe with tonsilitis should have a perfectly lovely time together.

From the Hartford Courant.

There is no doubt that the English of the King James Bible is as much an institution as the book itself, and any modernizing changes in the traditional text bring a feeling of discomfort to readers. The Revised Version of 1881, which did not make very profound alterations in the general text, invoked a storm of protest and, although finally accepted, has never supplanted the version developed by King James' scholars. Customs and the formation of new words and rules of syntax have, however, so renovated the English language that quite possibly many people would prefer to read a definitely modernized translation such as that to be published by the National Catechetical Congress of the Roman Catholic Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. That it will meet with much criticism as well as approval is not unlikely.

The modern English translation is worth a try, for it may recapture an interest of the layman that has been continuously on the wane. Perhaps people are ready to repeat King James' words that he had never yet seen "a Bible well translated in English." Yet it must not be forgotten that the Biblical style has been an enduring influence in English literature, affecting the writing of men like Ruskin and often showing its influence in modern poetry and novels. If it is worth reading in the forms it takes at the hands of imitators, it probably has not lost the interest of all but students and scholars.

"Cause And Effect."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is amazing to listen daily to the speeches of men who wish to arrive at the execution of our government, in observing the scanty substance of their reasoning powers, the lack of intellectual research and the absolute manner in which they expose naked facts without the faintest manifestation of understanding in the realm of the science of cause and effect. They exploit a sort of subjective logic which they smugly term "common sense"—a term sorely misunderstood.

Quantity is constant whether it be live pigs or dead pigs, crops or seeds. Man's highest function in the universe is the augmentation of quality not quantity; quantity through intellectual action then subsists but in a transformed state as quality.

In quality there is hierarchy—it is the function of science to search for and maintain order in this hierarchy. This is often accomplished by the destruction of one good for the survival or creation of a greater good. Does Nature herself not ravage the face of the earth with her glaciers, overflowing rivers and volcanoes? She is a constant image around which to develop our concept of the augmentation of quality or of value.

If millions of little pigs were slaughtered and acres of land plowed under it was in entire conformity with the principles of sound psychology and philosophy since the value of the pigs and the crops that were left was augmented to the degree of obtaining a higher general economic standard than would have existed had all of the pigs and all of the crops survived.

Indiscriminate and undisciplined production is as great an evil as indiscriminate and undisciplined destruction. TRUTH.

Spain's Popular Front.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of October 9, "The Russian Threat," you make the following statement:

". . . the French government clearly had the right to supply arms to the duly-constituted authorities at Madrid while no nation had any right to give aid and comfort to the rebels."

Just what you mean by "duly-constituted authorities" I do not know, but as a jurist I cannot help regretting your lack of a distinction frequently employed in law. The "rebels" are fighting a "de facto" government, but not a "de jure" government. They are fighting "Reds" who have usurped the functions of government and who are murdering anyone who disagrees with them. This Leftist policy of annihilation of all opposition has, ever since the assassination of Sotelo, proved very agreeable to the press in general.

Another regrettable fact is the continued reference to the Leftist Party as the "popular" government. I am wondering how few Leftists there will have to remain before they cease being looked upon as the "popular" party. The fact is, they never were the popular party, because all the Leftist parties together (including the Left Wing Republicans, Socialists, Anarchists, Communists and Syndicalists) polled 200,000 fewer votes than the Rightist parties.

I presume there are many Americans who are willing to admit that all just rebellions ceased with our own Revolutionary War. At least that is the impression caused by the present confusion of terms and meaning of words which are the stock in trade of Russian propaganda. JURIST.

Washington, Oct. 10.

[Editor's note.—The Madrid regime is recognized as the de jure as well as the de facto government of Spain by the United States and other powers. In the election of February, 1936, the Popular Front coalition polled a majority of the votes and secured a majority of the seats in the Cortes. The regime at Madrid is not usually called the "popular government," but the Popular Front government, that being the name of the coalition which has held office since the last election.]

Practices What He Preaches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: He practices what he preaches! This title refers to none other than the President of the United States. A year ago, in May, President Roosevelt, in a speech before the delegates of the International Convention for Crippled Children, stated that industry should hire at least one handicapped individual per hundred able-bodied persons.

Both he and Mrs. Roosevelt immediately put this theory into practice by taking a personal interest in placing physically handicapped applicants who came to their attention. Among such persons placed was a little hunchbacked lady, who in spite of her university education and qualification as a typist, was rejected by private industry.

A number of the Government agencies in Washington such as the Treasury Department, the WPA, the Veterans' Bureau, etc., have also put Mr. Roosevelt's theory into practice. In these agencies one may see individuals with leg deformities employed as typists, stenographers and clerks. Individuals with one arm who perform the duties of receptionists, statisticians, and messengers. Quite a number of deaf-mutes are employed either as typists or file clerks. Most of these individuals, records show, have performed their duty satisfactorily despite their physical deformity.

The above facts should thus encourage private industry to follow the example set by President Roosevelt and the Government in hiring physically handicapped persons.

The Machine Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The 1936 Republican campaign is telling this Nation a bed-time story just like every campaign in the past, but this time there is more deception. Their song is "O Susanna" and they are putting this Nation dead to sleep and fooling the American people. They will balance the budget without taxes and bring back the dinner pail with the dead horse's tail.

Republican dictators never tell the truth in their speeches about this machine age, which is wiping out labor from the industrial field. Today our big factories are buying faster, newer and more efficient machines—one machine doing the work of a thousand laborers per day. These large corporations have a right to stand by the Federal Government and create jobs for the huge army of unemployed who have been thrown out of work on account of the use of fast-moving machinery.

Republican dictators would put up a horse and buggy to race an airplane and actually bet on the horse and buggy to win in this twentieth century of the speedy, powerful machine age.

I am proud of our beloved President, Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is a real American and has courage and human liberty in his heart and has kept the faith with the common people. May God's greatest blessing be with him! His conscience and soul are against false prosperity and he urges world peace.

Approach To The Capital.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last spring at the time of the big flood the road running by the Arlington Experiment Station and ending at the bridge at the Airport, was in such a bad condition that notices were posted. It is now in the same condition.

Why with millions to furnish work, is this neglected? It would furnish work to many to repair it, and at present is ruinous to cars, full of dangerous holes. Why do not the proper authorities make this approach to the Capital a decent one? DRIVER.

Election Polls.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Brundage's analysis of the Digest Poll in The Post for October 14 is interesting and ingenious. As one whose desire to know the cold facts is superior to his wish to derive comfort from their interpretation, I submit the following analysis of Mr. Brundage's analysis.

Mr. Brundage finds that the Digest voters come from a group which in 1932 voted 53 per cent Republican and (approximately) 47 per cent Democratic. He attempts to reduce these percentages to the actual percentages in the same States in 1932, which were 41 per cent Republican and 59 per cent Democratic. He performs this reduction not by the usual method of dividing his 1932 indicated vote in proportions of 41 and 59, but by the more novel method of finding a term to which 47 will be proportional to 59. This he finds, correctly, is 33. But his finding leaves him with 20 per cent up in the air and no place to go.

He now assumes that this 20 per cent was actually Republican after all, and cancels his attempt to adjust the Digest indicated 1932 vote with the actual vote in the same year. As this assumption vitiates all his further argument, all that need be said of his very unique method of computing the drift since 1932 is that you cannot compute it by applying the percentage of drift on one side alone to 20 per cent of the total. The drift affects both sides alike and the percentages are percentages of the total vote.

The Digest poll shows that 13 per cent of the electorate, in the field covered by the Digest, drifted from Democratic to Republican, and 7 per cent from Republican to Democratic, or 6 per cent net from Democratic to Republican. Whether this drift has been uniform throughout the electorate the Digest poll gives us no means of determining.

The Digest poll is susceptible of a more convincing defense than Mr. Brundage offers. The poll of the Institute of Public Opinion, conducted by the accurate and rigid methods of science, shows the same drift to Landon as is shown by the Digest poll. The following table will show that the two polls are in no point inconsistent. Since all figures in this table are adjusted to the two party basis, Mr. Brundage's 53 appears as 54.

	1932	1936	Drift
National election	41	..	.
Survey of whole field (IPO)	..	47	6
Automobile-telephone group (IPO)	..	55	.
Automobile-telephone group, large cities omitted (Digest)	54	60	6
Less fortunate group (IPO)	..	30	.

If the electors, and the candidates as well, paid more attention to plain facts and gave less time to wishful arithmetic, the electors might make a better choice and have better candidates from which to choose.

Political "Swiss Cheese."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tip Al Smith gave undecided voters to seek a background of facts against which to limn political bunk, is particularly timely after a comparison of two political debates delivered last week.

Alf M. Landon gave a terse, measured and effective answer, at Chicago, that was more than a routine response to Franklin D. Roosevelt's swiss cheese (in tribute to its myriad holes and deviations from fact) "box score" oration at Pittsburgh. It was a challenge to the New Deal to cut out the clowning and play ball.

Hail, Fare and Farewell.

"SORRY, lady, couldn't let you in 'tother side. Hurt yourself, it'd be my fault. Sure—everything's my fault! Any taxi driver, he's a born criminal—he just likes to kill little children—that's what they all think.

"I don't suppose now, lady, you ever happened to see one of us actin' like gentlemen? You mean it, lady? Say, that sure sounds swell. Yeah, you'd think it was a racket, drivin' a taxi. Why, I'm tellin' you a guy don't make 'smuch to eat as he gets bummin' off the food kitchens.

"But me, I got my pride, lady. I ain't no bum. Besides, nobody gives a fat man much. Just as if—'cause a man's fat—he couldn't get gone in the stomach——"

• • • •

"I beg your pardon, miss—would it bother you if I opened the window? My sinuses are pretty bad this morning. I sprayed them thoroughly, too. But all a fare does is smoke, and shut the windows. And if it isn't inside, it's exhaust outside. It's a little better than Pittsburgh, though. I was teaching school there till the headaches got so bad.

"Pardon me, miss, but have you ever been West? Arizona or Colorado? I wonder if it's true you don't have to work to breathe in those places—— Medical Building, you said? Next corner on the right?—I guess there are good doctors there. Sometimes I think if I get ahead a little—— But this asthma spray I've got helps some. There's a kind of powder a fare told me about—you burn it nights. But he got out before I got the name."

"The hell he did," I says to Bill, "fired yuh, eh? The boss fired yuh because yuh only got 12 fares? And all yuh been makin' for that worm for three weeks now! Sure—yuh gets a toothache count of a draught outa the broken window he's too mean to get fixed, and yuh goes into a joint to get some soup or somethin' like that yuh don't have to chew—and yuh meets a guy—and jes' counta you're a few fares shy, he fires yuh! What'd yuh do then, when he tells yuh?" I says. "Nothin,'" says Bill, "he weighs 200, don't he?" "Nothin'——?" I says. "Nothin'——? Why—if I'd a been there, I'd a—I'd a—I'd a taken that taxi and throwed it square at his stummick!"

• • • •

"See where Fenton was killed flying? Passenger killed too—a Big Shot. Big rumpus in the papers this morning account of the Big Shot. Say, I've seen Fenton fly—I been up with him. Extra says he was to blame—lot of dirt in the paper about his family life—what's that gotta do with it?—He was a swell pilot.

"If something busted on him it wasn't his fault. I been up with him. Sure, he walked out on his wife—what's that gotta do with it? Plenty of birds stick with a dame, can't run planes. That guy don't make mistakes. He was a swell pilot. I been up with him. If it'd a been us—that time—nobody'd a blamed him account he was sick of his wife——"

"Washington isn't the city it used to be. Hasn't got the class. I drove a taxi here in 1928. Came back last year. I wouldn't know the place. Stuffy. Dirty. No well-dressed women. No nice people. Honest, you don't know what you may pick up. You wouldn't believe it, Madam, but sometimes it's two days I don't get a single Republican——"

EDNA ROWE.

Baby Not Pedestrian.

Great issues are waiting for settlement in the courts of this and other lands, but it is not always the question of vast importance that possesses the interest which goes with novelty. Included in the news from England is the statement that a baby in a perambulator may not be considered a pedestrian. In the City of Hull the driver of a corporation bus was haled into court accused of obstructing the passage of pedestrians at what the English call a beacon crossing. Evidence was given that a mother had just lowered the "pram" in which was the baby from the curb to the street. She was about to step from the sidewalk when the arrival of the bus gave her pause. The bus driver was discharged, the court holding that the "pram" was evidence that the baby was not a pedestrian.

The police had attempted to offset this point by suggesting to the learned judge that the infant was a human being, but it was a lame contention. Another point might have been made. The police might have contended that with her hands upon the handle of the perambulator the mother was in effect a part of it, and so if it was in the roadway she might be considered there also, even with her feet still on the sidewalk. But having fixed their minds upon the theory that a human being is necessarily a pedestrian, the local constabulary may be excused for overlooking this other contention that a perambulator with a human being attached may be regarded as "pram" and pedestrian, too.

What About That Dough?

MUSSOLINI has sent us a new ambassador named Fulvio Suvich and the diplomatic set will be molting calling cards all over Washington for a couple of weeks. But when the social rites are over and Mr. Suvich pulls up his chair to Cordell Hull's and starts to purr, I trust that Mr. Hull will fetch him a stout jab on the top button of his fancy vest with a firm and demanding finger and put the question, "What about that dough?"

Mr. Suvich may shoot his cuffs and pull his mustache until it is stretched out like the antlers on a lobster, but that will not answer the question, "What about that dough?"

Mr. Suvich may roll his eyes and blow kisses at the chandeliers, putting on the old Number One routine about the beauty of American womanhood and the vigor and youthfulness of our great new country, but that will not answer the question, "What about that dough?"

• • • •

AND CERTAINLY it is to be hoped that they will steer Mr. Suvich away from the grave of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington, because other foreign diplomats in times past have visited this national shrine only for the purpose of softening us up. Henceforth, when the representative of some dead-best nation wants to make a solemn visit and drop a wreath it would be more fitting to lead him to the Treasury or the Archives Building and show him those rubber checks, all tied up with ribbon and smelling of lavender which they wrote for us so long ago.

Incidentally, it would be an interesting stunt for one of the picture services to take some shots of those actual checks or notes or whatever they are. They would help us to keep our emotional tempo about the rivalries and scraps in the Old World for they would remind us that they are all alike in the respect that we have to buy their friendship by the slice, and that if it comes to a showdown we haven't got a friend in the world.

True, we have been told that it would be bad for us to be paid in full all the money we sent to Europe. If they attempted to pay us in goods tomorrow we would have to use the Navy to chase away their cargo boats lest the dumping of all this goods result in the closing of all our own industries, complete unemployment and poverty and chaos amid plenty. If they sent us gold, that, too, would do something to the exchange rate and nobody would ever be able to buy anything from us and a store without customers must go out of business.

Sure, I know, but if the money they owe this country can buy roads and public buildings, bridges, modern apartment houses, ornate railroad stations and armament for them, then certainly the same money should be able to buy a few knick-knacks for us. Up to now we have never had a chance to see what it would do, and Mr. Suvich, on his arrival in Washington the other day, said any discussion of the debt would still be premature, indicating that debts mature very slowly in Italy.

I think our people would be willing to suffer a little from the dire effects of too much wealth if some payment on account would serve to reduce the armaments of the countries which are using our money to promote another war. We would be willing to stand the pain in the interests of world peace and, anyway, we are a very ignorant lot in this country who invariably wonder when Mussolini starts bragging of how much money he has, and how many planes and guns and warships he has bought, why any man who is so boastful of his country's honor doesn't pay a little something on her honest debts.

Greetings to the new Italian Ambassador and, waiving all compliments on the New York skyline and the beauty of our women and a $10 wreath bought with our money, what about that dough?

China Digs In

Tokyo Correspondent Believes China Would Rather Go To War Than Give Way Any Further To Nipponese.

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

IT WILL require something rather closely resembling a miracle to prevent the outbreak of war between Japan and China before this year closes, but the Far East is quite capable of producing such near-miracles, and prediction that war is now inevitable is too risky to be made here. Certainly every available indication at the moment is that it will take place well before the year closes.

In all probability it would not be called "war," but war it would essentially be, for the China of today can put up an armed resistance against an invading Japanese that would startle the world. The titular palm of victory would go to the arms of Japan in all likelihood, but the drain in men and economic resources on Japan would be so great that Japan would, in effect, lose the war even as it was celebrating a paper victory.

This is fully realized by the majority of thinking Japanese and by nearly all of the men who direct the Empire's policy. As a result, the world is offered a paradox in the Far East which not long ago would have been unbelievable. Japan is straining every nerve to forestall the necessity of sending an armed expedition into China because of the murder there of Japanese subjects; China is following a course which, unless self-deflected, will make such an expedition on the part of Tokyo inevitable. And at that point, no matter what term be used, lies war.

There is a decided change in the attitude and policy of the Tokyo Government toward China since even six months ago, and there is an almost equally decided change in China's attitude toward Japan. The past two months have witnessed a series of anti-Japanese incidents in China which must be stopped if Japan is to retain the leadership in Eastern Asia which it so ardently desires, for which it has already sacrificed much, and for which it is willing to sacrifice much more.

The change in China should be considered first, since on it is predicated in part the change in Japan. The oppressive and aggressive policy of Japan in China during the past five years has succeeded in uniting the Chinese people in a way that has not been known for centuries. Because of this, it has aided in creating the strongest Central government in that country since the death of the Empress Dowager, Tsu Hsi, so shortly followed by the change from monarchy to half-baked republic.

The Chinese have seen example after example of Japanese arrogance and, in his eyes at least, persecution of China and of the Chinese by their island neighbors. They have seen their government forced to yield, however reluctantly, to Japanese force or threat of force, and they have come to ask themselves the questions: "Where and when will this stop? Is not the point being reached at which we shall have to fight, even though we go down to defeat on the field of battle?"

A decade, even half a decade and less ago, the average Chinese who knew of these developments might still have asked himself these questions, but he would have answered them with a shrug of the shoulders and the observation that as long as the Japanese left his particular province, his particular district and his own extensive family alone, there was no need for him to do anything about it.

Chinese Are No Longer Indifferent To Attacks.

THAT ATTITUDE has almost disappeared in China, incredible as this may sound to those who do not know the China of 1936, but did know the China of 1926 or 1916 or even earlier. The change that has come over China and the Chinese during the past five years and during the past 12 months in particular is one of the miracles of the modern world.

Among the most important contributory factors is the introduction and spread of radio broadcasting in China. The Nanking government has installed a receiving set and loud speaker in nearly every village under it control, so that for the first time in all history it is possible to reach the millions of China. Day after day the Chinese in the interior and elsewhere listens to a radio speech in his own dialect on the sins and iniquities of the Japanese "invaders" and on what his own government is doing for him.

This element, "what his own government is doing for him," is the next great contributory factor in bringing about the revolutionary change in the Chinese as a citizen of his own country. The authorities in power at Nanking have set about earnestly, intelligently and on the whole honestly to create a nation out of China. They have not met with complete success as yet by any means, but what they have done is little short of marvelous.

The Nanking government is not interested in putting down rebellion and collecting taxes. It is interested in constructive work, in the building of a modern nation. The currency has been united and stabilized; loan rates have been cut from 30 or 40 per cent to only 9 or 10; the "thousand character" teaching is rapidly spreading literacy; free medical centers are gradually expanding and in numerous other ways the Chinese government is coming to mean something worth while to the Chinese individual and so it becomes worth his own while to sacrifice something in order to retain and maintain that government.

With such conditions to hand, it is seen how the Nanking government will reach the point where it can make a stand against the demands of Tokyo which seem to it never to cease.

Moderates Still Hold Upper Hand In Japan.

WITHIN Japan the change of attitude and of policy toward China is quite different and springs from different sources. The tale of Japan's continental policy since September 18, 1931, when Mukden was seized, a tale that has been branded "imperialism" by the League of Nations and by the world in general, is well known. The "riches of Cathay" that lured Columbus into the accidental discovery of a New World, still lure men, and Japan is the latest to respond to them.

But five years have not brought these riches tumbling into Japan's lap. Manchuria has not been the rich bonanza that Japan had thought it would prove to be, and instead of alleviating economic distress at home the Manchurian policy is proving an almost insupportable drain on the empire financially and will so continue for some years to come. Many Japanese, perhaps most by now, are awakening to the fact that trade, good will and other desirable fruits in China cannot be acquired by use of military expeditions to that land.

This in itself gives pause for consideration and weighing of values before decision is made now by Tokyo to launch still another such expedition. In addition, the army's popularity with the Japanese people is waning from other causes, and there is even a decided change of opinion within high army circles themselves. Five years ago, even two years ago, Japan would not have hesitated a minute to send an expeditionary force into China if given provocation of a nature such as now exists.

The struggle between the moderates and the extremists in the circles that govern Japan under the throne began to swing in the direction of victory for the moderates a few months ago. When Shigeru Kawagoe was appointed new ambassador to Nanking he sailed for China with a definite program to present to the Nanking government which would have been far more reasonable and moderate than anything Nanking has heard from Tokyo for five years past.

Before this could be presented two prominent Japanese journalists were mobbed to death by an anti-Japanese mob in Chengtu, in Czechuan. Feeling ran high in Japan, and still higher among Japanese resident in China, at the news of this outrage. The extremists pointed to this murder as evidence that China understood only the policy of the mailed fist, and insisted on applying it to Nanking at once. The saner and more moderate elements in the government opposed such action without qualification. So intense was the struggle (which fortunately was kept from the knowledge of the general public) that Hachiro Arita, minister for foreign affairs, threatened to resign if demands on Nanking were presented of so drastic a nature that the Nanking government could not possibly accept them and remain in office because of Chinese public opinion. In this Mr. Arita was backed up by Premier Koki Hirota. They won out.

BEFORE, however, this policy could be put into force more Japanese were killed in China. All that has been done by China to date to stop this campaign has been the issuance of general statements appealing to the Chinese to treat all foreigners better. Tokyo knows full well that still other murders are almost certain to take place unless drastic measures are taken.

Such measures can be taken either by the Chinese government at Nanking or, failing that, by the Tokyo government through the sending of a strong expeditionary force. To send such an expeditionary force now in the autumn of 1936 would mean war, no matter by what name it might be called, and Japan is not only hesitating to take this step but is striving by every means possible to avoid it. Nanking's policy so far has, however, been of a nature to provike an armed expedition, and so the world is presented with this most remarkable paradox.

The Japanese premier and the foreign minister with, it is believed, the full co-operation of every member of the cabinet, are striving to bring China to the point where it will itself adopt a sufficiently drastic policy to put a stop to the murder of Japanese in China. So far no result whatever has been achieved. Chaing Kai-shek, who is the real power in China, lingered on in the south, refusing to come to Nanking to negotiate with the Japanese for days on end.

The crisis is of a nature which cannot long continue at its present acute stage. Unless China agrees in part to what Japan wants and unless China itself puts a stop to anti-Japanese mob demonstrations, there is no alternative for Japan but to send an expeditionary force to that country, although with the full knowledge that it will defeat Japan's major objective of economic gain from China. Tokyo simply cannot afford to let the murder of Japanese continue. To do so is intolerable to the Japanese army and the Japanese public; to do so would mean that the Chinese would take this as a sign of weakness and press Japan beyond limits of endurance.

Unquestionably there is a strong war party in China which is growing stronger every day. Many Chinese have already reached the limit of their endurance, and favor war with Japan even though it be a losing war. They have had the doctrine of anit-Japanism so thoroughly and so long instilled into them now that they can think along no other lines. Likewise, they have witnessed the growing strength of their own nation in a military and other ways, and sincerely believe that China is now able to defeat Japan. Even if Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the Nanking government wish to control anti-Japanism and to conciliate Tokyo, it may be that the point has been passed in China where this is no longer possible because of domestic pressure. To yield too greatly would certainly mean revolution against the government so yielding, and Chiang Kai-shek would prefer to fight a foreign to a civil war.

No Landmarks

By Barnet Nover

Topsyturvydom.

WHERE ARE the old landmarks by which it was possible to judge the current of events in the world? It would, no doubt, be an exaggeration to say they have all disappeared. Some are still standing, like hilltops in a flood. But so many have vanished, or are vanishing, that international relations today present an appearance of vast confusion.

Not so many years ago, for instance, nothing seemed more certain than that Italy would never challenge Great Britain on any question of major importance to the British Empire. Not only sentimental links going back to the days of the Risorgimento, when Mazzini was the idol of the British intelligentsia, but very practical considerations seemed to rule out any possibility that Italy would set itself up as a rival of its once great and good friend.

Thus, it was that when, early in this century, Great Britain began to veer from "splendid isolation" to a more or less active anti-German policy, this seismic disturbance jarred the Italian kingdom out of the diplomatic position it had occupied since 1882. While remaining a nominal leader of the Triple Alliance, it became more and more friendly to the opposing side and ultimately joined forces with it in the war against the Central Powers.

After that war it was expected that Italy would indefinitely continue along its old course. Yet within very recent months the world has witnessed the extraordinary spectacle of Italy challenging the British Empire at what has been presumably its strongest point—its naval power—and getting away with it.

• • • •

BUT THERE IS also Portugal, "our oldest ally," as the British statesmen were won't to say. The Anglo-Portuguese alliance actually goes back to the seventeenth century and has survived several periods of British aloofness from continental affairs. Indeed, out of gratitude for British help in safeguarding the almost defenseless Portuguese empire in Africa and Asia from seizure by some ambitious colonial power, Portugal sent troops to France during the World War. Yet, now, in the face of British eagerness to see the non-intervention agreement regarding Spain carried out loyally by all the signatories, the Salazar dictatorship at Lisbon has steadily refused to do London's bidding. If the British are irritated they have effectively concealed that irritition.

Belgium is France's Portugal-with-a-difference. It, too, belongs in the category of "oldest ally" even though that alliance goes back not to the days of Cromwell, but those of Foch. It has, in fact, been the very keystone of the French bloc. But the keystone is crumbling. There are conflicting reports from Brussels as to just what the Belgians are actually planning to do. It is difficult to know whether the Franco-Belgium alliance of 1920 is to be smashed at one fell swoop or killed with half-heartedness. But in any case it does begin to appear that another landmark is disappearing.

THEN THERE is the curious attitude of the French Rightists. Time was when in their view the only good German was a dead German. It made no difference to them what kind of a government obtained at Berlin, or what group held power in the Reich—they were against them all. They were as suspicious of Weimar Germany as they had been of Wilhelmian Germany. They formerly believed it was Germany's eternal and unchanging program to plot the downfall of La Belle France. Then came Hitler. By contrast with what he did openly, the surreptitious evasions of the Versailles Treaty, with which the Rightist accused republican Germany, were insignificant and unimportant. Nonetheless, the French have taken the Fuehrer to their bosom.

On the other hand, their most hated enemies in France, the Communists, who once fought tooth and nail against all defense budgets, who regarded France not as a country to be defended, but as only a potential member of the world union of Soviet republics, are now wrapping themselves up in the tricolor and have made the Marseillaise their second anthem. No group now speaks with such fervid patriotism as they do.

• • • •

BUT THIS change is no less striking than the change that has occurred in the Russian attitude. Not long ago it was heretical and counter-revolutionary, to say the least, for any citizen of the U. S. S. R. to speak of the Russian fatherland. There was then only the Soviet fatherland. But the Kremlin has now decreed that there must now be an increased production of patriotism, together with mother love, filial piety, bombing planes and babies. In the very fountainhead of the collectivist creed, as well as in unconverted lands, communism is becoming nationalist.

Fascism, on the other hand, has had as its most distinguishing characteristic an almost pathological worship of the state as a mystical entity. Again and again Mussolini and oher high priests of the cult have declared that it was non-missionary. Fascism, they said, was not for export. But at a time when regular foreign trade is almost prostrate, so far as both Italy and Germany are concerned, the export of propaganda (sometimes taking the form of guns, munitions and airplanes for such Fascist adventurers as Gen. Franco in Spain) goes on apace.

It would almost appear that communism and fascism have exchanged roles; almost to the same degree that one is becoming national-minded the other is becoming international in its objectives.

The old landmarks are certainly disappearing.

French Novelist's Life

By William Lyon Phelps

Honore de Balzac.

The American dramatist, George Middleton, author of many plays and various other books, has just published an excellent drama on the life of the great French novelist, Honore de Balzac, who was born in 1799 and died in 1850. Just as George Santayana's "The Last Puritan" is a memoir in the form of a novel, so this is a biography in the form of a stage-play. I sincerely hope it may reach the stage, for in the hands of good management and with capable actors it would be immensely interesting.

• • • •

It is certainly the best play Mr. Middleton has written; and I recommend it not only to lovers of Balzac's novels but to all persons to whom the great name of Balzac is a great name and nothing else. I think it will arouse fresh interest in this man's amazing personality and equally amazing career; and I feel sure it will send many readers of the play to the novels by its hero.

Balzac set out to describe in the succession of novels which he called "The Human Comedy" the whole vast structure of nineteenth century life in France and in Paris; in its social, financial, political, moral, urban and rural aspects; and to describe this complicated structure with as much accurate detail as possible. The effort destroyed his life, but not until he had published enough novels to make his task fairly complete, and to leave a structure more permanent than anything in stone or brick or marble or bronze.

• • • •

Of the novels of Balzac that I have read—I have not read them all—my own favorite is "Eugenie Grandet."

The circumstances under which Balzac wrote are as dramatic as the most powerful scenes in his novels; and Mr. Middleton has made the most of these situations.

Ship Inquiry Is Opened

Cleveland, Oct. 19 (AP).—Canadian officials and representatives of the National Sand & Materials Ltd. began today a preliminary investigation of the tragic foundering on Lake Erie of the sandsucker Sand Merchant with the loss of 19 lives.

The Sand Merchant rolled over in a gale west of Cleveland Saturday night and sank. At dawn Sunday only seven members of the crew, including Capt. Graham McLelland, remained clinging to the two upturned lifeboats from which they were rescued by other ships.

Eighteen members of the crew and Mrs. Bernard Drinkwater, wife of the first mate, were lost. First Mate Drinkwater was among the dead.

Text of Landon Speech on Trade Policies

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Oct. 19.—The text of Gov. Alf M. Landon's Albuquerque speech follows:

Coming across New Mexico today, I said to myself: Surely, out here where the West begins, there will be no trouble in enlisting recruits in this battle to save our American system of government. The records in the War Department show how valiantly New Mexico responded to the call to arms in 1917; you will respond as readily when the attack on our freedom comes from within as you did when it came from without.

Many of your citizens once lived under the flags of other countries. You are now citizens of the United States. Although you may never have read the Constitution of the United States, you realize better than some of us who were born here what it means. You know that you have the right to select your own representatives, in Santa Fe and in Washington; the right to discuss political questions on the street corners and to march in political parades; the right to go to the church of your faith; the right to your personal liberty until a jury of your neighbors finds you have committed a crime; the right to keep your cottage or your farm or your horses, if you have earned them honestly—you know, without being told, that you have these rights, because we have a Constitution.

"Clash in Theory."

Men and women who live their lives in the wide open spaces—on the plains and in the hills—particularly resent regimentation and dictation from Washington. As the campaign progresses, it is becoming more and more clear that it is a clash of two ideas of government: The one that politicans know best what is good for you, and should run your lives out here in New Mexico from a swivel chair in a Washington bureau, the other that you are still capable of self-government.

The first is the theory of many countries of the Old World, as well as of our opponents in this campaign; the other is the American way. And once I am elected President the American idea of a constitutional government of personal freedom will be preserved, come what will.

The people of the Southwest are deeply concerned with livestock production and agriculture. For this reason I want to explain briefly the relation between the Republican platform planks on agriculture and foreign trade. They are closely related.

Agriculture is a matter of national concern. For that reason it should not be made a football of politics. In the past both political parties, because of their failure to recognize this fundamental truth, have adopted policies which have been injurious rather than beneficial to the farmers. Realizing this, our platform calls for a nonpolitical solution of our agricultural problems. We Republicans offer a common sense and practical long-term program of soil conservation and an end to the defeatist policies of despair sponsored by the President. The program of the present Administration has perpetuated and aggravated many of the evils from which our farmers are now suffering.

"Export as Basis."

Our program is grounded on the undeniable fact that throughout our history, American agriculture has been on an export basis—that our production has been and will for years be greater than our domestic needs. Our farmers cannot be prosperous when their foreign markets have been destroyed and their domestic markets simultaneously thrown on the mercy of foreign producers. Let's look at the record.

The Democratic platform of 1932 said: "We favor * * * effective control of crop surpluses so that our farmers may have the full benefit of the domestic market * * * We condemn * * * the unsound policy of restricting agricultural products to the demands of domestic markets."

In face of these solemn pledges, the President jammed through "must" legislation which has practically destroyed our foreign outlets for farm products. The volume of farm exports in 1935, according to Secretary Roper, was the lowest since the 80's. Simultaneously, through the abuse of a sound doctrine of reciprocity, and as a result of other policies of the New Dealers which make no allowance for nature, our domestic markets are being flooded with products produced on foreign farms.

The volume of farm exports from the United States declined in 1935 over 1932 as follows: Cotton, 33 per cent; wheat, 99 per cent; flour, 42 per cent; lard, 82 per cent, and other items in like proportion.

Cites Import Rise.

While our foreign outlets were being destroyed from 1932 to 1935, the volume of imported crude foodstuffs increased 41 per cent and of manufactured foodstuffs, 49 per cent.

During the past 3½ years about 5,000,000 acres of wheat, 12,000,000 acres of corn, 13,000,000 acres of cotton and 500,000 acres of tobacco have been taken out of production under the New Deal policies. And the President's Secretary of Agriculture would have us cut another 50,000,000 acres. Hog production was reduced by approximately 13,000,000 head. Simultaneously, the imports of competing farm products in 1935 would have required a minimum of 20,000,000 acres to produce them on American farms.

You livestock and sheep men of the Southwest have specially good reasons to object to the policies of this Administration. In the first six months of 1934 the total livestock imports into the United States were only 48,387 head of cattle.

For the first six months in 1936 these imports had increased more than 500 per cent, to 280,103 head of cattle. This, you will recall, was in addition to imports of cattle in "tin hides," which have increased 19 per cent since 1932. In the first nine months of this year more than 20,000 Mexican cattle have been imported into the Southwest. These imports have deprived you of a broader domestic market and better prices.

Queries on Policy.

Now I would like to ask the President whether his policies are those of the Democratic Party, which has traditionally stood for international trade. Are they not, in fact, those of a strange new party which has captured the Federal Government in the name of the party of Jefferson, Cleveland and Wilson? Has it not repudiated traditional Democratic doctrines in international trade and substituted new policies which are clearly leading us to the narrowest type of economic nationalism and other theories dangerous to America and to world peace?

I said recently at Minneapolis: "I am opposed to a policy of isolation. I want to see a prosperous world as well as a prosperous America. A healthy international trade is essential to world prosperity. Even more than this, world prosperity is good insurance against war. The great enemy of world trade today is the war-inspired doctrine of isolation and its resulting demands for self-sufficiency. From this we get embargoes, exchange restrictions and trade quotas. These are the real hindrances to a healthy exchange of goods between nations. We must not join in this kind of madness. If we are to maintain our standard of living the channels of world trade must remain open."

We Republicans have no quarrel with the doctrine of reciprocity, which is Republican in its origin, but in the language of our platform "we condemn the secret negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties without public hearing or legislative approval."

Method, Not Principle, Assailed.

The principle of reciprocal trade agreements, as an aid in reopening foreign markets, is desirable provided it is properly applied. The New Deal's program has not been so administered. It is not necessary for me at this point to discuss the secrecy of these negotiations, the futility of the hearings which were not open to the public, and the gross unfairness of the entire procedure. Those you know all too well. But the nature of the concessions to foreign nations granted by this Administration does merit further consideration. The farmers, who were already at a heavy disadvantage, have been called upon to make the first and major sacrifices, as I have pointed out, in down barriers to the flow of in this alleged attempt to break ternational commerce. Major emphasis in these negotiations should have been upon securing concessions from abroad for our agricultural products rather than granting concessions to our agricultural competitors.

What I object to primarily are the concessions of this Administration to nations which can send us little but farm products. The concessions from abroad have benefited, if at all, only our industrial producers. However, at this point it would be well to mention that the total volume of our exports both agricultural and industrial has increased only 4 per cent in 1935 over 1932.

Our industrial producers can adjust their affairs to existing conditions more readily than the farmers. The wise industrialist has the elements of his prosperity largely in his own hands. Not so with the farmer. He must not only have the vision of the wise industrialist as to costs of production and markets, but he must also gamble with the forces of nature over which he can have no control and with which the industrialist has no concern.

We Republicans will so conduct the reciprocal trade negotiations as to reopen foreign trade channels in such a way as not to penalize the American farmer or the industrial producer and workman. This can be done and it will be done once I am elected.

The most important problem facing us is the recapture of our lost export markets destroyed by this Administration. Our farmers want a full crop at a fair price. This they cannot have without our foreign outlets and unrestricted production. The barriers which have been set up by foreign nations in their desire to become self-sufficient under the threat of war, must be eliminated. Our Republican platform provides: "We will adjust tariffs with a view to promoting international trade, the stabilization of currencies, and the attainment of a proper balance between agriculture and industry." This will be our primary duty.

The present Administration in June, 1933, fumbled a great opportunity to break the trend toward intense economic nationalism which has been spreading over the world and may shortly transform economic warfare into actual hostilities. Now after a delay of three and a quarter years, the Administration apparently is beginning to see the error of its ways. In any event a great share of the responsibility for the extension of internationad economic warfare in the meantime must rest squarely on the present Administration.

Revival Is Pledged.

Until such time as the nations of the world are convinced that world peace rests upon the revival and expansion of international exchange of the products of the various nations of the world, there can be neither national nor world prosperity. We Republicans pledge ourselves to do all in our power to effect such a revival. But in this process we shall not trade off the farmer. Our policies will be so co-ordinated as to give the farmer a full crop at a fair price, regain his lost foreign markets, and maintain in this country a fair exchange value between industrial and farm products. We can thus foster an ever-expanding standard of living, not only for ourselves, but for the entire world.

But do not misunderstand me. Until international conditions are so improved as to restore the American farmer to his proper position, we will continue ample benefits to give him that position. These benefits will be limited to the family type farm. There will be no million dollar payments to foreign corporations or absentee landlords. Meantime our long-term program of soil conservation and the steady drive to regain and expand our foreign outlets, will eliminate the cause for such payments.

This is not inconsistent with a balanced budget. Freedom from crop control and the gradual recapture of our foreign markets will permit us to rapidly reduce the past heavy burdens on the Federal Treasury and simultaneously improve the farmer's position. We shall restore American markets to the American farmer. We shall make him once more "lord of his own farm."

Nor in this interim period will it be necessary to penalize the American consumer as he has been penalized in the past three years by rising prices of foodstuffs resulting from unconstitutional processing taxes and the destruction of crops.

Obligation to Farmer.

We shall use our reciprocal trade negotiations to protect the efficient American manufacturer and workman from the unfair competition of foreign nations which indulge in unfair currency depreciation, subsidies and other unfair international practices, to capture our domestic markets. But I am sure that American industry is fully alive to its obligations to the farmers and consumers of this country. It realizes that such protection should not be extended to the inefficient producer except in case of those industries which are essential to us in time of war, of new industries which have not yet reached their full development.

A consummation of these policies will in due course re-establish the farmer in a fully competitive position and permit this country to go forward to a constantly higher and higher standard of living which our initiative, natural resources, and our system of free enterprise will assure us.

City Heads Hear Social Needs Talk

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Declaring people "want their government to be a human instrument," Hollis R. Thompson, Berkeley, Calif., city manager, told the International City Managers Association today it is in the field of social service the city executive should have the greatest knowledge.

Thompson, president of the association, spoke at a "get-together" luncheon at the opening of the city managers' twenty-third annual conference.

Later the approximately 130 delegates discussed personnel administration at a round table directed by C. A. Harrell, city manager of Binghampton, N. Y., and joined in a smoker and "off-the-record" session at which Clifford W. Ham, executive director of the American Municipal Association, presided.

Share-Cropper Board To Study Tenant Plight

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 19 (AP).—More than two score proposals for remedying the share-cropper situation will be placed before the program committee of the Arkansas Farm Tenancy Commission when it comes here tomorrow to shape an attack on the problem.

Suggestions for turning tenants into a farm home-owner class—prime objective stated by Gov. J. M. Futrell when he created the commission—predominated in the proposals.

However, the list included numerous correlative courses of action ranging from health and education to industrialization of farm areas.

Italy Hits U. S. Films.

Rome, Oct. 19 (AP).—A sweeping government order vitally affecting American movies is being drafted into law, it was learned tonight. It will set a maximum of 16,000,000 lire ($800,000) as the total American film companies can take from Italy annually. Their annual business has been between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 lire.

Ickes Defends New Deal Cost, Scores Hoover

Secretary, at Philadelphia, Asserts Du Ponts Are Landon's 'Angels.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Standing on the same platform from which Herbert Hoover spoke Friday, Secretary Ickes tonight scattered his attack among Hoover, the du Ponts, Al Smith, the Liberty League and Gov. Alf M. Landon, and defended at length the New Deal spending program.

"Never before in political history, so far as I recall," he said, "has a campaign been so dominated by a single angelic family."

"A sufficient answer," he continued, "is that no one objects to paying a debt if that debt was contracted for his own benefit and if he has money in his pocket with which to pay it when it comes due. When the Government borrows money and spends it for the benefit of the people during a time of depression when private funds are not available, it is acting in conformity with sound business principles."

Referring to Hoover's statement questioning the intellectual honesty of New Deal bookkeeping, Ickes replied that "so many of the figures that he cited were erroneous that he became a glaring example of the very thing that he was inveighing against."

Concerning the Republican candidates, he said:

"Not even the ambition to be elected President or Vice President justifies an appeal to fear, the incubation of a sense of panic, or gross misstatements of fact. Col. Knox, especially here in Pennsylvania, has indulged in much loose and irresponsible talk about the alleged staggering debt burden, thus demonstrating his total unfitness for the responsible office to which he so clamorously aspires."

The speaker charged Smith with sacrificing "his popular leadership on the altar of gross materialism." He said that Smith went so far in his Liberty League speech in Washington last winter that the league "went underground for the duration of the campaign."

In his recent New York speech, Smith asked: "Who is Ickes?"

To this Ickes replied tonight:

"Ickes was a benighted individual who was foolish enough, out of pure sentiment and because he deeply resented the injection in the 1928 campaign of the question of your religion, to leave his party to vote for you for President, believing you to be a true progressive and not foreseeing you as a future paid retainer of the Wilmington, Del., oligarchy."

Landon's election, Ickes told the audience, would mean that "Smith's bosses" would be in control in Washington.

Trophy List Heavy For Halloween

The largest collection of trophies ever presented for winners in the annual Halloween parade will be given this year, Col. E. Goring Bliss, chairman of the 1936 Washington Halloween Celebration Committee, reported yesterday.

First place winners in the various parade divisions will be awarded silver cups. There also will be numerous secondary prizes.

Donors of the cups, now on display in Gude Brothers, florists, include the Griffith Consumers Co., the Evening Star, United States Storage Co., Washington Times, Gude Bros., Boyd Business University, Palace Laundry, "Kronheim Sez Seagrams," Washington Board of Trade, Occidental Restaurant and Thompson's Dairy.

Coroner's Jury Orders Acton Held in Murder

Frank Acton, 35-year-old police character, of 609 Seventh street southwest, was held for the grand jury yesterday when a coroner's jury ruled him responsible for the fatal shooting of Donald E. Mersch, 29-year-old salesman from Big Rapids, Mich.

Acton was charged with murder after Mersch died last Tuesday. He was arrested following the shooting October 4 at Eleventh and E streets southwest.

Two men held by police since the shooting, Bela H. Stramer, 23, of the 1,000 block Twenty-fifth street northwest, and Jesse Jones, 18, of the 1,300 block Tenth street northwest, were the principal witnesses.

Both men testified that Acton and Mersch became friends while they were serving sentences for larceny in the Lorton Reformatory. They said Acton had come to Mersch's room the night before the shooting and robbed him of a quantity of money and a watch.

The night Mersch was shot, they told the jury, Mersch went to a lunchroom near Eleventh and E streets southwest and demanded money from Acton. Acton, who was with Stramer, left the eating place, followed by Jones and Mersch.

Acton is said to have drawn a gun and threatened Mersch when the latter asked for the money. Mersch then got into his car with Acton, where the argument continued, the men said, and Acton then fired three shots, two of them striking Mersch in the abdomen.

Roosevelt's Son Sold Insurance To Radio Chain

Columbia Broadcast Head Admits Buying Policy Offered by James.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—Columbia Broadcasting Co. said tonight in reply to a telegram from Senator Daniel O. Hastings, Delaware Republican, that it had purchased insurance for its employes from James Roosevelt, son of the President.

The exchange of telegrams between Hastings and Columbia was a continuation of the controversy started when Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, was cut off some of the system's stations while engaging in a "debate" with phonograph records on which President Roosevelt's voice was recorded. Columbia's rule banned such a broadcasting.

Hastings then telegraphed to Edward Klauber, executive vice president of Columbia, asking him if it were true that young Roosevelt sold insurance to the broadcasting company. Klauber replied:

"Two years ago the Columbia Broadcasting System decided to take out group insurance. * * * This business was placed with the Travelers Life Insurance Co., and was solicited by that company as well as through their accredited agents, Roosevelt and Sargent. The plan, jointly submitted by these men, appealed to us as more satisfactory than any other proposition we received. James Roosevelt participated in this solicitation. * * *

"We must point out to you that sons of the President of the United States are entitled to engage in private business as well as any other private citizens. * * *"

Columbia announced tonight that Vandenberg would speak over its system from Wilmington, Del., from 8 to 8:30 p. m. on October 20 under auspices of the Republican National Committee.

Chest Goal Set At $1,969,000 In'36Campaign

Officials Cite the Increased Need in Announcing Annual Drive.

The Community Chest goal, in the November 12-24 campaign will be $1,969,000.

This goal, according to Chest officials, has been reached after the most careful consideration of the minimum needs of its 65 member agencies. It has been approved by the campaign committee and executive committee of the Chest and while it is only $92,000 over the goal of $1,877900 set last year, it is actually $212,000 more than the $1,757,000 which was raised.

Many factors entered into the discussions which resulted in fixing the higher goal this year, according to Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest. Failure to pay hospitals in full for actual service rendered last year to people who could not pay in full for needed care, was one of the large items. The nine hospitals in the Chest, Willett points out, were allocated $276,000 for the year, for service to patients certified to them by the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals.

The large increase in the number of patients able to pay only part of their hospital charges, together with an unusually large transient group for whom there was no other provision, he says, left the Chest in the position of being unable to meet the hospitals' costs for actual service, the shortage amounting to approximately $90,000.

Desire to place every dollar into active service during the depression years, Willett says, has resulted in neglect of building repairs and remodeling which must be done if buildings in which children and old people live are to be kept in a safe condition.

The director also pointed out that the rising costs of food must be taken into consideration in order that the youngsters and aged people in Chest institutions may be adequately fed.

The probability of increased demands for actual relief also entered into the fixing of this year's goal, Willett explained.

Italian Duke, 105, Dies.

San Remo, Italy, Oct. 19 (AP).—Duke Borea D'Olmo, Italy's oldest active diplomat, who celebrated his 105th birthday October 11, died tonight. A number of friends were with him. He lived in his villa here in virtual retirement for many years.

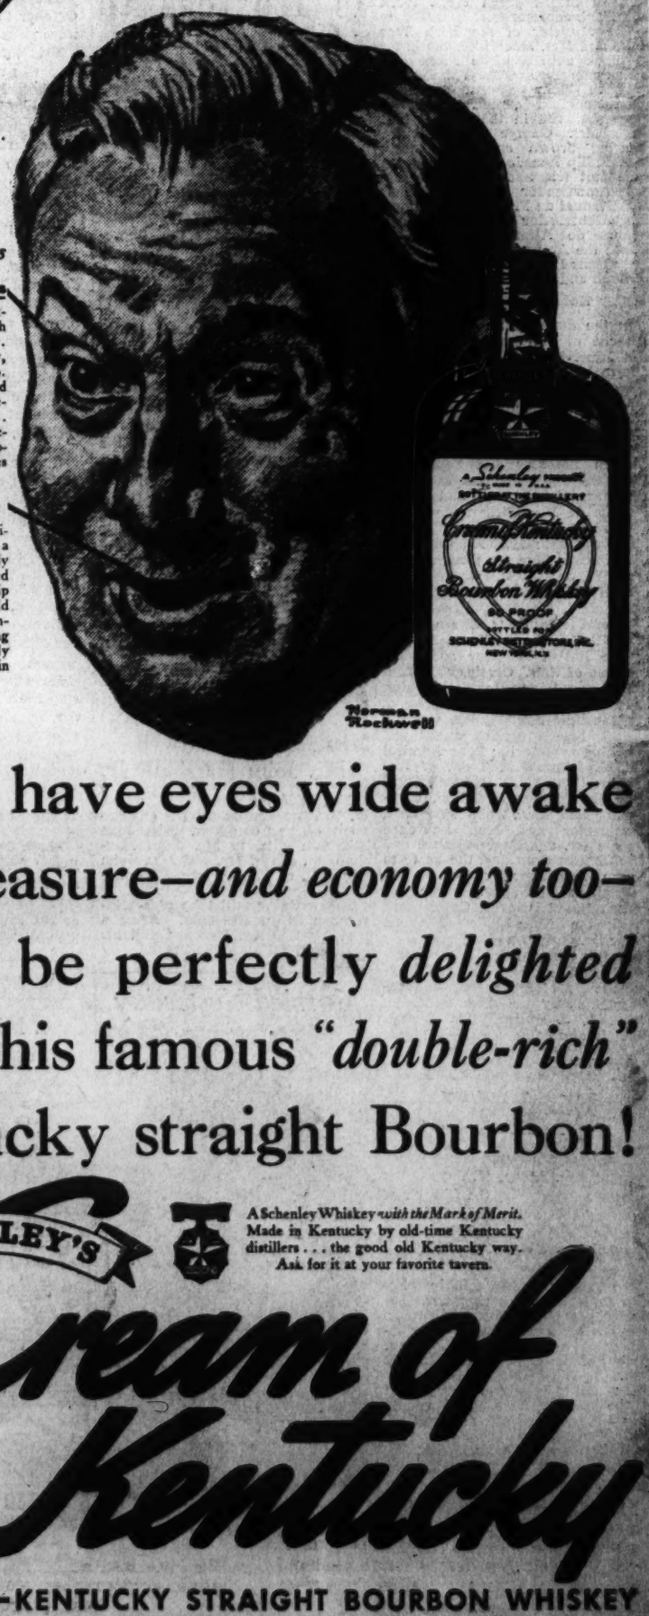
Have you eyes wide awake for life's pleasures?



How faces disclose personalities

Pleasure-loving eyes
Eyes—lustrous, keenly expressive and alert, with whites particularly clear. Upper lids thick and heavy, but not permitted to droop. Lower lids inclined toward fleshiness. Brows with decided upward tendency . . . lending an inquiring, hopeful expression of eager optimism. Horizontal creases at eyes' outer edges.

Lips fond of a feast
Lips—soft, sensitive, delicate textured. Lower lip a trifle moist, and distinctly more full-fleshed and rounded than upper lip. Upper lip thin, straight, and held closely to the teeth in contrast to the loosely hanging lower lip, which falls limply forward and sags slightly in a relaxed droop.

Admiral, Mrs. Standley Hosts to Large Group

By Marylyn Reeve.

Winding up the Naval Observatory Hill yesterday afternoon to the quarters of the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William H. Standley one was greeted by cheery lights blazing out from the hospital red brick house, and crisp blue-and-white uniformed Marine who sprang to open doors. Within, there was the usual hub-bub of merry conversation among the guests who continued to arrive in a steady stream. In the cozy salon at the rear were Mrs. Standley, in black lace with a long spray of baby orchids, and the Assistant Chief of Operations and Mrs. William S. Pye, the latter wearing deep maroon crepe fashioned with cut-out work on the yoke and sleeves, received.

The dining room was decorated with vases of dahlias in sunset shades. On the long tea table ivory tapers gleamed in tall silver candlesticks and a cluster of talisman roses was effectively arranged in the center. Among those who took their turn pouring were Mrs. Roy Ingersoll, Mrs. William D. Puleston, Mrs. W. H. Lassing, Mrs. A. B. Reed, Mrs. Forrest Royal, in black velvet with a cluster of gold flowers on one shoulder and long antique gold earrings; Mrs. Arthur Ayrault and Mrs. B. L. Canaga.

The young ladies who assisted were Miss Nancy Brereton, in terra cotta crepe with velvet flowers of harmonizing shades at the throat; her sister, Miss Helen Brereton, in peacock blue crepe; Miss Leila Peoples, Miss Anna Lee Stuart, in black crepe with a scarlet sash; Miss Bliss Shuman, in black wool crepe, and Miss Eunice Willson, in green crepe and a small golden-brown velvet hat.

First of a Series.

The tea was the first in a series of parties the Standleys will give, more or less as farewell affairs, as they will be leaving their station here in a month or so for the West Coast.

Three Cabinet ladies were present, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, in black with a cape of summer ermine, was wearing a Tyrolean hat of rust-tinted felt. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson was in blue with a matching tricorne, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau was attired in black, a black velvet hat and a silver fox cape.

The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Trucco, and the Minister of Guatemala, Senor Don Adrian Recinos, were in the dining room talking of some amusing subject over their tea cups. Menora de Recinos, in olive green, was across the room surrounded by a group of friends. Senorita Marta Trucco, the only one of the ambassador's daughters at the party, chose for her costume a bright green crepe frock and black accessories.

The Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite, the latter in black with a white suede hat, took themselves off from the crowd to have their refreshments in a palm-decorated corner. Some of those gathered in the central hall were Mrs. George B. Pillsbury, wearing brown and gold mesh; Mrs. Philip Lansdale, in dark green cape suit trimmed with moleskin; the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, the latter in black; the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, and the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri.

Kobayashis Present.

In the drawing room the Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Kobayashi, who wore a gun-metal colored suit, and Lieut. Comdr. Kanzo Miura were talking to Lieut. Comdr. Welles Roberts, who has recently been stationed in their country. Others in nearby groups included the Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Puga, the latter in black satin; the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wearing a scarf of sables to complete her black costume; Miss Augusta Russell in bright blue, Mr. Douglas Hall, Mrs. Parker West, whose high-necked black frock had white accents; Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa; the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Marchioness of Sant' Orsola, attired in oxford gray trimmed with matching Persian lamb; Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, wearing a dark brown printed gown and matching accessories; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Forde A. Todd, of Annapolis; Capt. H. E. Kimmel, Capt. and Mrs. Archer M. Allen, Commander and Mrs. Webb Trammell, Commander and Mrs. Laurence Reifsneider, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Courtney, the latter in black with a silver fox scarf.

Others at the party were the French Naval Attache, Capt. Louis Sabel; the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui; Commander Richard Tuggle, Lieut. and Mrs. Edward Layton, the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Coutinho, Lieut. A. J. Bolton, Mrs. Russell Bennett and Miss Florence Harris.

Mr. Finley Weds Elizabeth Joyce

Miss Elizabeth Joyce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Joyce, was married yesterday at the Church of the Sacred Heart to Mr. Fred C. Finley, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Finley, before members of the two families and friends.

The bride, dressed all in gray with orchids at her shoulder, was given in marriage by her father. Miss Edith Sartori was her only attendant, and Mr. Frank Finley, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mrs. Howard to Speak.

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will speak this morning at the Sulgrave Club on election forecasts, and will tell the story of her incarceration last summer in a German prison. The lecture, the first of her winter series, will be delivered at 11:30 a. m. at the Sulgrave Club.

Invitations Out For Marriage Of Miss Gullion

Will Become Bride of Lieut. Moorman Here on October 30.

Col. and Mrs. Allen Wyant Gullion have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Miss-Atha Gullion, and Lieut. Thomas Samuel Moorman, which will take place Friday, October 30, at 5 o'clock, in St. Mary's Chapel, National Cathedral.

Miss Gullion will have as her maid of honor Miss Virginia Huspvedt, and her other attendants will include Mrs. William Holbrook, of New York, and Mrs. Andrew Parker, of Washington.

Lieut. Eugene Mussett, of Langley Field, Va., will serve as best man and the ushers will be Lieut. Clifford Reese, Lieut. William O. Santer and Lieut. Edward Simonson, all of Langley Field; Lieut. Karl Truesdell, of Mitchell Field, Lieut. Joseph Williams, of Washington, and Capt. A. J. Grimes, of Columbus, Ohio.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception at the Army War Colleges Officers' Club.

Mrs. Parker will be hostess at a cocktail party Thursday, October 29, following the wedding rehearsal and, on October 23, Miss Huspvedt will entertain in honor of Miss Gullion and her fiance.

Col. and Mrs. Gullion, who recently returned to Washington from Honolulu, now are making their home at 2230 California street.

Mrs. Grosner Is Hostess to Large Group

Mrs. Clarence W. Grosner entertained at luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Senora de Chevalier, wife of the retiring Charge d'Affaires of Panama. The ranking guest was Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador.

The other guests were Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Senora de Guachcalla, wife of the Minister of Bolivia; Senora de De Bayle, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Nicaragua; Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War; Mme. Popovici, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Rumania; Senora de Vitieri, wife of the head of the Ecuadorean delegation here to settle the boundary dispute between that country and Peru; Mme. Zoulfikar, wife of the Attachce of the Egyptian Legation; Mrs. Thomas C. Dawson, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Mrs. Louis Schapiro, Mrs. J. G. Lewis, Mrs. James Moran, Mrs. Fulton Brylawski and Mme. Maria Arias, sister of Senora de Chevalier.

Miss Jean Ritz to Wed Mr. John Marshall, Jr.

Mrs. Russell S. Ritz of Bluefield, W. Va., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jean Elizabeth Ritz, to Mr. John Marshall, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall, of Tracy Place, Washington.

The wedding will take place November 28 in Bluefield. After a wedding trip Mr. Marshall and his bride will reside in Baltimore.

Married Yesterday

MRS. FRED C. FINLEY, JR., the former Miss Elizabeth Joyce, who was married yesterday at Sacred Heart Church and, with Mr. Finley, is on a wedding trip to Bermuda.

To Be Married Next Week

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Miss-Atha Gullion, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Allen Gullion, with her fiance, Lieut. Thomas Samuel Mooreman, jr., U. S. N., who is here for a brief visit. They will be married October 30.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Black tailored suits with touches of white were the costume of the day for the women of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. V. A. L. Mallet, wife of the Counselor of the British Embassy, who were at the station to meet Lady Marler when she arrived yesterday with Sir Herbert Marler, the new Minister of Canada. Lady Marler also was in a severely tailored black suit with a white satin blouse and a black hat with coq feathers.

The fact that the period of national mourning is not ended until October 27 is responsible for the black, but the notable fact that all wore suits could only be attributed to the dictates of dame fashion.

Mr. Merchant Mahoney, First Secretary of the Canadian Legation, who was representative of the department of external affairs of Canada before a legation was established here, was at the station yesterday to meet the new minister as he has all three who have come to Washington.

Sir Herbert and Lady Marler were guests in the Capital about ten years ago when Hon. Vincent Massey, now Canadian high commissioner to London, was serving as the first Minister of Canada to Washington.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings are about to leave Washington for a bit. They will go tomorrow to Connecticut, and what a busy visit it will be. Thursday they will meet the President and his party in New Haven. The following evening, Mr. Cummings will make an address in Bridgeport, and that will be the beginning of a series of them. From there he will go to Peoria, Detroit, Cleveland, Lancaster and Baltimore, with a few well-chosen campaign words for the worthy citizens of each named place. While he is doing this, his wife will be in New York, the guest of her close friend, Anne Callaghan, until after election. While there, she will hear the President speak at Madison Square Garden and also will celebrate her birthday, November 4.

Once each year, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. George B. Pillsbury entertain members of the Engineer Corps of the Army in and near Washington at a jolly afternoon party in their home in Wyoming avenue. This year's will be Friday afternoon, from 5 until 7 o'clock. With the Pillsburys now is Mrs. Pillsbury's sister, Mrs. Philip Lansdale, who has come East from San Francisco for an indefinite stay in Washington.

The "tall, dark and handsome" Ditlef Knudsen, of the Norwegian Legation, is—so that persistent creature, Dame Rumor, would have us believe—rather seriously interested in a certain young lady who made her debut in Washington two years ago.

Have you ever wondered just how some people always managed to stop their shopping at exactly the right time to step into a matinee at the beginning of the show instead of plunging into the middle of a plot and have to take the finish before the explanatory start? Well, we happened upon a clew yesterday. Mrs. Alben W. Barkley and her daughter, Mrs. Max O. Truitt, after consulting their watches and talk-about the hours of the shows, dropped into a soda fountain for two chocolate milk shakes to pass the irksome last few reels of the picture.

These Chilean riders are very early risers, and, we might add, riders. Every morning before 9 they are out at Meadowbrook schooling their mounts for the show this coming week-end. Yesterday, a late comer accosted Capt. Eduardo Yanez, and having missed seeing any of the action, requested a jump or two. Politely the visitor smiled, shrugged his shoulders and then added: "But you see, the horses are having a little lunch and after that they will rest. We cannot bother them again so soon." And that was that.

Capt. Millikin Speaks To Women Democrats

Capt Rhoda Millikin, of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, long an outstanding figure in social-service work, yesterday was guest speaker at the luncheon of the Women's National Democratic Club. She was introduced at the luncheon by Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell.

Officialdom Chuckles Over 'First Lady' Satire

New Comedy Amuses First Nighters; Morgenthaus, Mrs. Cummings Among Audience at Vassar Benefit Performance.

By Dudley Harmon.

Officials in last night's audience rocked with laughter at the satiric portrayal of devious goings-on behind scenes in the apital as depicted in the play, "First Lady," by Katharine Dayton and George S. Kaufman. A cabinet at home where lady lobbyists spread the gospel of peace and visitors from Iowa swipe ashtrays as souvenirs and gobble chicken sandwiches was just one of the highlights in a rip-roaring comedy which showed Washingtonians as some others see them.

Two Cabinet ladies present in the audience laughed as hard as anybody else last night. They were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General. The performance was a benefit for Vassar College, and Mrs. Morgenthau, a Vassar graduate, occupied a box with her husband; the Ambassador of France, M. Andre de Laboulaye, and Mme. de Laboulaye. The latter wore a black evening gown with a black fur collared wrap, and Mrs. Morgenthau chose an ermine coat for the occasion.

Washington has a definite interest in one of the co-authors of the play at the National Theater. Witty, brown-eyed Katharine Dayton is well known in the Capital, as she spent a winter here several years ago. Her satiric skits on "Mrs. Republican" and "Mrs. Democrat" have appeared in a national magazine and she has enacted roles in them herself for the amusement of guests at newspaper women's parties at the White House. Unfortunately, Miss Dayton couldn't get away from New York for the Washington opening of her play last night.

Noted in last night's audience: the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy with the Marchioness Sant'Orsola, who have attended every first night so far this season, even though Commander Cugia saw this particular play once before in New York; the Attache of the Rumanian Legation, Mr. Laurence Bungardeaun, who laughed enthusiastically at the antics of the heel clicking actors representing foreign diplomats; and the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, the latter wearing a mink cape over her evening frock.

Others there were: Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Feis wearing a flowered taffeta wrap over her black gown; those two faithful first nighters, Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, of Alexandria; Miss Elizabeth Shouse, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Bungardeanu, who laughed ning gown with matching wrap; Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, Mr. Charles Sturges and Miss Eleanor Powell with Mr. Gerald Reilly.

Book Pageant Prize Winner At Horse Show

By Grace Brooks.

There was an atmosphere of bygone days at the Upperville Horse Show Grounds yesterday, when the competitive past period pageant was called into the ring as the closing feature of the Trinity Church benefit horse show. It was one of the most elaborate ever shown in that section, noted for its fine shows.

Complete in every detail, even to the growing cotton, which was brought from South Carolina, was the representation of "Gone With the Wind," Margaret Mitchell's famous novel. This was entered by Mrs. Rozier Dulany, of Upperville, and was in four parts. The first was a large float drawn by oxen, on which were the cotton and cotton bales and society people dressed as negroes. They were Mrs. Fred Gochnauer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Triplett, Mrs. Jack Crockett, Miss Jessie Wiltshire, Miss Laura Shulenberger, and Mr. Alvin Baird, who sang Old Man River; the second was "The Retreat from Atlanta," represented by Mrs. Hanson Ely and Miss Thelma Carter, in a spring wagon; then "Scarlet O'Hara's Wedding," portrayed by Mr. and Mrs. Barry Hall, Miss Susan Carter and Mrs. W. M. McCoy, and finally the carriage in which Mrs. Dulany and Mrs. Henry Oxnard rode. This number won first place in the Old Time Turnout.

Second place in this class went to Mr. W. H. Lipscomb's sleigh. Riding with him were Miss Rosemary Ward, Miss Mary Calvert and Mr. William Hulbert, looking like winter with their fur lap-robes. Third place went to Nina Carter Tabb's covered wagon.

Mr. Taylor Hardin's coach and four won first place in the division for smart turnouts. With him were Mrs. John Barrows, of England; Mrs. Boker, Mr. Jack Keith and Mr. Louis Duffy. Second place went to an old-fashioned rig, belonging to Mrs. Robert Winmill, of Warrenton, and third, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cushman's entry.

The humorous turnout division was won by Mr. Prosser Tabb and Mr. H. J. Duffy with an old-fashioned shooting brake, drawn by two mules. Mrs. Robert Winmill won second and Mrs. Raymond Guest's mule wagon was third.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney were interested spectators and watched the performance of their large number of entries as well as of those of other owners. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney hunted with the Piedmont Hunt earlier yesterday morning before attending the show.

Others riding with the hunt before attending the benefit were Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Slater, Mr. Waugh Glascock, Dr. Cary Langhorne, and Mr. A. C. Randolph, jr.

Among others present were Miss Jane Wilbur, of Washington, who is a guest of the H. W. Frosts and who rode Mr. Frost's Dude Danny to win several blue ribbons; Mrs. Joshua Fletcher, jr., of Fredericksburg; Mrs. Paul Whiting, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin, Mrs. Thomas N. Carter, Mrs. Robert Randolph and Mrs. Spencer Carter, the last four of Clarke County.

Engaged Couple Will Be Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Clark Van Leer will give a dinner at the Shoreham tomorrow night for Miss Grace Beaman and their son, Mr. Anthony Wayne Van Leer, who are to be married Thursday at 8 p. m., at Falls Church, in Falls Church, Va.

Miss Beaman will have as her only attendant her sister, Miss Charlotte Beaman. The dinner tomorrow will follow the wedding rehearsal.

Mrs. Peacock Will Be Hostess

Entertains at Luncheon in Chevy Chase Tomorrow for Miss Walters.

Mrs. James Craig Peacock will entertain at luncheon at her home in Chevy Chase in honor of Miss Lois Walters, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Theodore Walters, whose marriage to Mr. Robert Coker will take place Saturday.

Friday morning Mrs. R. T. van Uden, a sister of the bride-to-be, will entertain at a breakfast at the Shoreham in her honor and that afternoon Mrs. Frank Bohn will be hostess at a tea in her apartment on Wyoming avenue. In the evening Mrs. Bohn's parents, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, will be hosts at dinner preceding the rehearsal.

Following the ceremony, which will be performed at 4 o'clock by the Rev. Rufus W. Weaver, at the National Baptist Memorial Church, there will be a reception at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Mr. Arthur J. Sinnott, who accompanied Mrs. Sinnott to Washington last week-end, has returned to Newark. He will rejoin Mrs. Sinnott at the Shoreham later this week.

Society Notes

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has been at Hyde Park, will join the President on his New England tour this week. She is not expected to return to the Capital until after elections.

The Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, arrived in Washington yesterday from New York, where he landed on the Queen Mary in the morning after a vacation in England.

The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, will entertain at a cocktail party and reception Sunday afternoon following the Inter-American Horse Show in honor of the members of the teams from Chile, Mexico, and this country.

The Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, will return to Washington today from Frederick, Md., where he went to attend a reception and dance given in his honor last evening.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. John H. Russell have as their guests their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, of New York and Porto Fino, Italy. Mrs. Marshall spent the summer at their Italian villa.

Mrs. Mark Bristol To Entertain Friday.

Mrs. Mark Bristol, wife of Rear Admiral Bristol, will entertain at a small tea on Friday afternoon for her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Allen, of Paris, who were married there recently. Mrs. Allen is the former Mrs. Alice Harding Pell, of Washington.

The Secretary of The Netherlands Legation, Jonkheer H. M. van der Wyck, is expected to return to Washington this week from a vacation trip to Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen will arrive in Washington Friday and will remain with Mrs. Bristol, the latter's godmother, until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tirrell have returned from their home in Massachusetts where they spent the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell have leased the home occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Burlin on North Royal street in Alexandria, and will move there Saturday.

Maj. and Mrs. Edmond C. Fleming, of Grosse Point Farms, Mich., are stopping at the Shoreham while in Washington to visit Mrs. Fleming's son, Mr. Joseph Boyer, who is attending Georgetown University.

Good Manners Code Essential In Sightseeing

By Margaret Wallace.

A CODE of manners for sightseers might not go amiss in our National Capital. Officials in our Government departments pay tribute to many of the sight-seers from all sections of the country who obey rules, are courteous and considerate. But a small percentage of those who go through our public buildings are a real annoyance because of their lack of manners.

It is the type of sight-seer who insists on going in parts of the buildings not open to the public, in pushing and jostling the other sight-seers or who engages in controversy with other visitors or the guards, who makes everyone else uncomfortable.

The sight-seer should obey the rules without question. The rules are made to preserve Government property, for efficiency in handling crowds and giving everyone a chance to see the sights and for the comfort of the whole company of sight-seers rather than a few.

Keep Hands off.

No well-mannered sightseer will handle furniture, pictures or articles in an exhibition. They will not sit in the chairs in the White House state rooms if they are of that privileged few who have cards to go into these rooms. They will not ask special privileges of the guards or officials in the building unless they have been arranged in advance.

Of course, a well-bred person will not mutilate Government property any more than he would private property. The type of sightseer who will carve initials on monuments and in public buildings lacks good breeding. Strange as it may seem, this appears to be the greatest offense of sightseers in Washington and constantly keeps the guards at the Capitol and the Monument busy.

The type of sightseer who takes food into the public buildings and then gets very indignant when told he cannot eat there also is another source of annoyance to those who try to keep our public buildings in good order. No well-bred person will eat candy and peanuts as he files in line through the East room and the state corridor of the White House, yet, after these lines of visitors have gone, peanut shells, candy and chewing gum wrappers are strewn about.

White House Query.

QUERY—I wish to see the state rooms in the White House. My daughter came to Washington from our home State last year and she got some cards from our Congressman and was allowed to go into the state rooms of the White House. My Congressman is not here now. How can I get similar cards? I will be here two weeks. Is it proper for constituents to ask for such cards?

ANSWER—It is proper to ask your Congressman for such cards. If he is not here his secretary may be in his office in the House Office Building. You should telephone there and then call in person. Otherwise, you would have time to write to your Congressman and he doubtless would send you the necessary cards. Arrangements are made for the general public to see the White House at certain hours of the day. You can learn the hours by telephoning the White House.

QUERY—I was very much embarrassed when a visitor at my house insisted on leaving cards at the White House for President and Mrs. Roosevelt. She does not know them. Was this proper?

ANSWER—Any citizen may leave cards at the White House, whether he knows President and Mrs. Roosevelt or not. The action of your guest should not have embarrassed you. She was acting with perfect propriety.

Cheese on Menu Adds Fall Zest To Your Meals

Zip in our menus is what we're looking for this time of the year and cheese adds zip to a meal. It is also a handy substitute for meat.

Cheese is the subject of The Washington Post Recipe Contest for this week.

There are many interesting ways of using cheese in cooking. You probably have a favorite recipe of this type, so copy it neatly and send it in to the Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post so that it will reach her not later than Saturday morning. Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

The cash prizes will be $3 for the first prize, $2 for the second prize, and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

Apples should be slit with a knife in three or four places before baking; the skins will then not wrinkle while in the oven.

Apple pie will have a new flavor if you grate a little orange rind into the sugar and sprinkle over apples in usual way.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Do All Women Go Haywire When Sex Enters Picture?" Asks Man, Indignant at Advice Given Girl.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of October 15 you discussed the situation of a girl 22 in love with a married man of 44. Some of your conclusions, it seems to me, would certainly convict you of a superficiality you do not ordinarily seem to possess. How in the world can anyone render a snap judgment such as you rendered, upon such paucity of information as supplied by the girl, is beyond my comprehension. I should certainly dislike to have you sit in judgment over a matter in which I was interested, if your conclusion in the matter mentioned is characteristic.

• • • •

Do all women go haywire as soon as sex enters the picture—even though well balanced in other respects? Are you one of those who do not know, or have not fathomed, the volcanic nature of the human heart, that you are able to pass prim puritanical judgment on everything that comes in conflict with our marriage laws? Remember that marriage was made for man; not man for marriage. Do you not know that man cannot be measured by a given moral code and accepted or rejected forthwith? The same type of shallow, conventional thinking is what has caused all our troubles in the political and economic worlds—these categorical, conventional decisions about life which always was and always will be otherwise.

• • • •

Of course, your conclusions would fit certain cases. But you do not limit them. Many would agree that the test of the cultured, intelligent individual is one who knows when a particular example does not come under a general rule. The dumb, smug and puritanical do not, perhaps cannot, go beyond the primary general rule. Hence our Coolidges, Landons, etc.

• • • •

Do you not know that the life of many a married man is almost a hell due to causes of incompatibility over which he or his wife have little control; that frequently the man continues because his wife desires it, because of children, or for other reasons. It is possible for a time. It is possible for him to almost endure such a relationship by building up various compensations most hate his wife, yet be big enough to see that conditions are not enough her fault to warrant his breaking her heart or her health by divorce. Do you not understand that it is possible for such a man to fall in love with another woman or girl?

• • • •

Do you think the love of such a man is less real than that of a callow young man? Less pure? Less worthy? Do you not recognize that love is sometimes stronger than all the conventions devised by man and sometimes worth the whole lot of them thrown together? If love should come but once, for the sake of a few conventions must it be eradicated for prim general considerations?

• • • •

One of the most contemptible things about women is this: In spite of their high-sounding talk, underneath they are miserably in pursuit of their little economic and martail security, always endangered by any tampering with conventions. The knowledge of the love of some man, married or otherwise, is worth more than a lifetime of married security with some dull clod, who considers the conventions as natural laws of man.

• • • •

May God help your soul if you do not take your responsibilities more seriously than to make dumb categorical statements about matters in regard to which you do not have the facts and know, it seems, so little of. ANONYMOUS.

Is He Rationalizing?

DEAR ANONYMOUS: The volcanic nature of the human heart is not unknown to me. Nor the fact that society's marriage laws are man-made laws, created for the greatest good of the greatest number after eons of experimentation. And neither is the tendency of the human mind to rationalize expedient actions in an attempt to make them seem noble, purposeful and right. Which latter is exactly what you are trying to do.

• • • •

The girl with whom you would have the broadminded married man work out his emotional compensation is not less frail, less subject to heartbreak than the wife whom he so protectively cherishes at the expense of his will to be free. And she is a great deal more at the mercy of a society instinctively hostile to those who tamper with its conventions.

• • • •

I perfectly understand that a man who is unhappy with his wife may very promptly find himself in love with any other woman. But if and when he does, it behooves him as a man of honor to bring the situation to order at once. He has an obligation to his wife, surely; but he also has an obligation to the woman he loves, whose love he seeks in return. If he can no longer give his wife love, he can give her security, providing she is willing to accept a loveless income. He can supply her with a divorce and alimony sufficient to her needs. But if he expects to share love with another woman, he must give her the protection of his name. That is society's law—more man-made than woman-made. It came into being that a man might know his children.

• • • •

If he is not willing to do this, he is preying on the woman who is not his wife. He is asking her out of the greatness and the tenderness and and the unselfishness of her love to give him, at entire cost to herself, that which he is not willing or able to pay for. Any man who is old enough to know what the world without and the soul within is like can vouch for the truth of this. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

CHOCOLATE BREAD PUDDING WITH HARD SAUCE.

Scald 2 cups milk in double boiler with 1 square chocolate. Beat with egg beater until mixture is smooth. Cut 4 slices stale bread in narrowest possible strips, using a sharp knife and bread board, then cut in the opposite direction, making 1 cup crumbs in all. Add to the milk with 6 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon salt, and let stand until cool. Grease a baking dish, turn in the mixture and bake at 325 F. for 1 hour or until vegetable knife thrust into the center comes out clean. Serve with hard sauce.

HARD SAUCE.

Cream ¼ cup butter, add slowly 2-3 cup confectioner's or powdered sugar, ¼ teaspoon vanilla and 2 tablespoons warm milk. Beat until light and fluffy and put in small bowl.

Cake and cookies can be kept longer if a peeled apple or a piece of fresh bread is placed in the cake box for additional moisture.

If cake becomes dried out, wrap in damp cloth and set in moderately warm oven until cloth is dry. The cake will become as fresh as when baked.

Food odors can be eliminated from your refrigerator by placing a small quantity of charcoal in a container on the top shelf.

Proper Parental Care Held Best Means to Combat Delinquency

By Elsa Castendyck, New Federal Children's Bureau Aid

Careers, Successful Home Direction Will Not Mix, Specialist Declares.

By Elizabeth Young.

ONCE WHEN Elsa Castendyck in the intimacy of the family circle, was blowing off steam about somebody's mismanagement of a couple of lively youngsters, her brother looked at her quizzically and said: "You're kind of against parents, aren't you, Elsa?"

And Elsa replied defensively: "Well, I've spent most of my life trying to undo what some parents have done."

Miss Castendyck, recently appointed director of the delinquency division of the United States Children's Bureau, told the story on herself the other day. A resident of St. Paul and a graduate of the University of Minnesota, Miss Castendyck has been actively engaged in child welfare work since 1932.

For the last eight years she has been responsible for the development of the work of the Washburn Home, an agency in Minneapolis caring for children in need of special assistance because of behavior, personality or physical problems. In her new position as director of the delinquency division, she will plan programs relating to prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency.

Where Parents Fail.

The kind of parents that Elsa Castendyck is against are those who fail to give their children "a sort of security. And by that," she says, "I don't mean financial security so much as I mean emotional security; guidance and anchorage; a real family life, offering a reasonable amount of normal physical and emotional outlet and some educational opportunities."

She is also against and aghast at the sort of mothers who neglect their children to pursue careers, or to bask in the spotlight of social or civic achievement. She thinks it almost impossible for a woman to be a successful mother and careerist at the same time. "If personal ambition alone takes a woman out of the home; if she is seeking some ego satisfaction that she does not find through being a wife and mother, it is usually the children who suffer while she finds the satisfaction she seeks," says Miss Castendyck.

The Important Thing.

"If necessity forces a mother to become a breadwinner, then it is usually she who suffers most, although the work she does is apt to suffer, too," she says. Miss Castendyck has a bit of advice for such mothers. "Choose most carefully the person who is left in charge of your children during your absence," she says. "It is not half so important that such a person be an expert cook and cleaner; that she know the best Emily Post usages of serving and doorbell answering, as that she have a natural kinship with children. As a cousin of mine once remarked and she is a mother who works from necessity, 'I've found it pays to be lots more concerned with the cobwebs in the children's brains than with the dust fluff under the davenport.'"

The dangerous age for children is the adolescent age, from around 12 to 17 years, and the recorded delinquency rate among boys is higher than that recorded for girls, according to Miss Castendyck, who says: "This is the age when they begin to grow up; to feel themselves important; to break away from home; to seek association with 'the gang.' It's boys around this age who feel an almost irrestistible urge to chuck stones at street lights, to steal milk bottles, to play hookey from school, to become neighborhood nuisances generally, just for the thrill of it."

Picking up Pieces.

It is children of this age who need sympathetic, watchful guidance such as only a parent can supply, if they are not to come to grief in the hazardous interim before maturity. Years ago, when parents failed their duty in this regard, such children as came to grief were classed as criminal. More recently, during the 30 years' lifetime of the juvenile court, they have been treated more understandingly, but even so, much help thus given was something in the nature of "picking up the broken pieces," Miss Castendyck relates.

Now it has become the objective of social agencies throughout the Nation, of juvenile court authorities and of the Children's Bureau to prevent juvenile delinquency by handling first offenders on an administrative or case work basis, thus keeping them out of the courts altogether while bettering their home, family and neighborhood conditions, which are almost invariably responsible for their antisocial conduct.

Community Project.

Under the direction of Miss Castendyck, a community demonstration of this new method of delinquency care and prevention has been instituted in St. Paul, Minn., to operate for a three-year period. Others will follow if this succeeds.

"Why St. Paul?" Miss Castendyck was asked.

"Because it was necessary that the demonstration be conducted in a city where a fine spirit of cooperation exists amongst social agencies; where the juvenile court has an open mind; and where the city child welfare agency has rather broad jurisdiction in its legal authority over children," she replied.

"Judge Carleton McNally, of the St. Paul Juvenile Court, is an extraordinarily fine, social-minded judge with a very open-minded probation department. And, if another reason is needed, because St. Paul is my home, and I will need to spend at least three-fourths of my time on the project."

Harris & Ewing.

Miss Elsa Castendyck, above, recently appointed director of the Delinquency Division of the United States Children's Bureau, has set up in St. Paul, Minn., her home town, a community demonstration of methods for preventing and treating juvenile delinquency. The project will run for three years.

Large Prints Featured In New Bathing Suits

Advance showings of patterned rayon jersey materials designed for resort bathing suits disclose an unusual tendency toward large motifs, although small ones are still featured also. But every collection of bathing suit jerseys includes several large patterns—in print, or in flocking, often hand-screened. Several fabric houses make the style point that the large patterns have been designed for very brief bathing suits which will be American adaptations of types seen on the French Riviera the past summer.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Diarrhea is so common that every one should know something about its possible causes. Older works on medicine describe epidemics which we now know were due to typhoid fever or to dysentery. In the frontier settlements this latter disease was of serious moment to the pioneers, brought on largely through the use of surface water for drinking.

If discharges are associated with large quantities of water, we assume that some irritation or infection is present. Most of us have encountered the green apple variety which is accompanied, as a rule, by considerable abdominal distress. This is relieved within a relatively short time, particularly if the stomach is emptied and external heat is applied to the abdomen.

We know also that it may come on as the result of eating infected food, especially that which has become contaminated with bacteria, chiefly of the Salmonella type. The characteristic watery evacuations are not at all rare following the consumption of food at picnics or bazars, or whenever edibles are served impromptu to a large group of people. One single carrier among those who prepare and serve the meals may disseminate enough bacteria to affect a thousand others. This is usually more prevalent in the transition period between summer and autumn, when refrigeration of perishable food may not be scrupulously enforced.

Acute diarrheas, as a rule, give us but little concern, as three or four days of good medical care will probably see the end of the attack. Chronic cases, on the other hand, may be difficult to track down. In many clinics half or more of these cases remain undiagnosed. We mean of course, those that have existed for months or even years; so long, in fact, that the individual has finally accepted the situation as a part of his makeup. The victim may have visited several physicians for quite some time, submitted to cultures, etc., all without avail until he resigns himself finally to the affliction.

For the most part these chronic affairs can be mastered. Many of these patients belong to that high-strung, nervous type in whom intestinal contractions appear with great force when they are under an emotional strain. The sympathetic nervous system, which governs the movements of the bowel, is overstimulated, with the result that the intestinal contents are propelled forward rapidly. Absorption is interfered with and the half-digested material inaugurates a type of irritability.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 19.

WE'VE just finished the most hectic week of opening nights since the boom theatrical days of 1928. I consider it my duty to be pushed around in the lobbies at these violent affairs, just in case a prominent society exhibitionist will finally be beaten to death, or a well-known lady will be set ablaze by a critic's cigarette.

ALICE HUGHES.

My guess as to the most interesting of the new exhibits is "Tovarich," which ran forever in London with Leonie Leontovich, the "Grand Hotel" baroness, in the leading role. Leonie, now in London on other business, is replaced here by a fine Italian named Marta Abba, and her chief support is the aging but still "deevine" matinee idol, John Halliday, who was one of my stock heroes when I was a gallery girl on Saturday afternoons. It's a Frenchy comedy about Russians, and a thoroughly amusing evening. I suggest you put it on your "must" list.

The rest ran more to quantity than quality, but altogether they made a tough week of it after dinner. There were seven altogether, and my poor old spouse says that another week like that could almost make a bridge-player out of him. To visitors from other cities an opening night here is an educational experience, in two ways. They will see our most overdressed people and our worst manners, all in one evening and one spot. The play is something else again.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of the favorite stunts now practiced by society women who go in for charity here is to sell tickets for a "preview" of one of the new plays, held on the night before the public opening. This was done with the aforementioned "Tovarich," and a great throng of the better people turned up at fancy prices to see the show ahead of time. This is also good for the actors, as it allows them a dress rehearsal before a big crowd of noisy twisters, wavers and chatterers. Thus the real opening night doesn't bother them in the least . . .

• • • •

Eve Symington, the society bob-link, is still singing for pay and thus taking the caviar out of the mouth of a professional torch-singer. Eve begins to carol in the Sert Room of the Waldorf this week . . .

• • • •

Our playboys are no end prank-some at times. Two of them whose names and faces are always in the press, Bill Plankington and Bobby La Branche, have been wearing beards for the past week or so, to the vast amusement of their gay pals—and to the luscious raspberries of thousands of other people who wouldn't know a Bill Plankington from a one-armed rightfielder . . .

• • • •

Registering to vote, never mind what ticket, the other day, I saw our former mayor, Jimmy Walker, putting down his John Hancock in the right column. Still dapper, though a bit too thin, James wrote "55" in the age column, and didn't look within a decade of it. I guess his pretty wife, Betty Compton, keeps him up to the mark. "Thin people never die!" she tells him—which is fairly optimistic, even in good times . . .

• • • •

A local critic calls the big "White Horse Inn," at Mr. Rockefeller's Center Theater, "The town's most spectacular yawn." But it's lovely to look at, just the same . . .

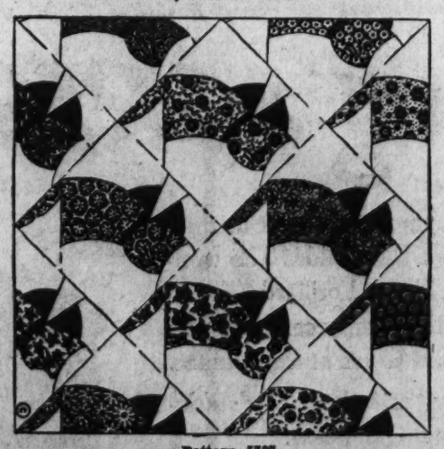
Calico Cat Patchwork Quilt Will Delight All Youngsters

By Alice Brooks.



Pattern 5707.

"PRETTY PUSSY" may be just a calico cat, but he certainly makes a bright and amusing quilt motif! Make him a "calico cat," indeed, by using up your scraps; it will lend variety to the work and a gayness to your finished quilt. Dark floss outlines the features. Cat lovers as well as all youngsters will be delighted with this quilt. In pattern 5707 you will find the block chart, an illustration for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for a single and double-bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

GAIN SELF-CONFIDENCE

MANY PEOPLE haven't succeeded in life only because they are afraid of making new acquaintances. When they are introduced to a new person, they experience a feeling of shyness, they become short-breathed, their heart flutters, and both their voice and body tremble. There is nothing physically wrong with them; they just don't understand the secret of reading and analyzing others.

All you need to do is to read and classify the new acquaintance. As soon as you know how to do this your fears will immediately vanish. This fear is only a throw-back to primitive man, when every stranger was a possible enemy. Nowadays, folks want to get along with others right at the very start. And the quickest way to do so is to know, understand and be able to classify the stranger and so know how to treat him. This is all thoroughly, but simply, explained in the new 40-page booklet, "Success in Handling Types—Your Own and Others." Explains what your own disposition, type and character are like and why. Tells what other people are like and why, so that you know how to act to successfully get along with every one. This booklet explains every little secret in plain, simple language. For your own success in life you should know these secrets.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Success in Handling Types—Your Own and Others," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Yacht Tragedy Survivor Tells Of Horror Ride

McKenzie Describes Desperate Struggle in Squall Which Cost 3 Lives.

By Eugene Warner,
A Staff Correspondent.

Easton, Md., Oct. 19.—Coast guardsmen, unable to find the bodies of Howard Ralph and Glenn Warner, Washington attorneys believed drowned in a capsized sailboat off Bloody Point early Sunday morning, will use a Coast Guard plane from Cape May when they resume searching Chesapeake Bay tomorrow morning.

Waiting anxiously, and still shaken with horror at the news that the body of one of the victims, Edward Winkler, had been found, J. Chase McKenzie, owner of the sloop Ranger, told today from a hospital bed of a desperate attempt to save his guests.

McKenzie, who wife called on him today, said:

"Our cabin was full of life preservers, but we were unable to get them in time. I dived several times trying to get a battery to hook on to our running lights, but I became exhausted and had to stop.

"From late afternoon until 3 in the morning we sat praying on a gunwale which was out of water. The waves broke high over our heads and almost knocked us off every time one struck.

"Glenn Warner tried to cheer us up. 'We've all got to go some time,' he said along toward the last. It got harder and harder to hold on in the cold. I dived in with a knife and slashed some sail for the others to wrap around themselves against the chill winds.

"Then I made up my mind to go. My heart was breaking. It was all my responsibility. I could hardly see shore. Many times in that endless swim I felt myself ready to give up. But I kept on trying, forcing my mind to make my arms and legs go. Several times I stopped and began to sink.

"It was for them as much as myself. I had gotten them into it. God what joy it was at last when my foot touched ground. But it was a long way to shore yet. Waves beat me down several times. I remember climbing a cliff.

"I woke up several hours later. It was mid-morning. For a couple of hours I wandered barefoot through rough country, my feet and legs cut to pieces by briars, looking for a house, but found none. I fainted several times.

"Then I saw some boats and called them. They couldn't get to me in the shallow water. I waded out and collapsed. They hauled me aboard. I pleaded with them to go to the sloop, but they wouldn't. They brought me to a hospital.

"Oh, God, what have I done? I tried to save them, but they're all dead."

"As I was swimming my mind seemed to go numb many times. It would have been quite easy to stop and just sink. Then I would tell myself to rest, and roll over on my back, then consciousness would come back, and I'd start in again.

"I'm an experienced swimmer, but that was the hardest swim I ever tried. We were weak from hunger and cold.

"It seemed to me impossible that the other fellows would sink. We were all pretty low and exhausted, it's true, but it kept feeling they would be there when help came. They thought they'd live.

"This whole experience seems impossible to me even now. I've followed the sea for years, and have first mate's papers. I knew that boat like my own hand.

"The others were remarkably cool. There was no confusion and we all crawled up onto the rail, sure a passing vessel would sight us. But the wind carried us out of the channel toward Kent Island. Darkness settled down fast and, without lights we were soon without hope of help."

Finds Husband, Thought Dead, Is Alive

Mrs. Jesse Owen Gifford, of Nashville, Tenn., reads telegram from an attorney advising her that her husband, who disappeared in 1928, is alive and well. She had thought him dead since 1931, when a body taken from a river was identified as his. It was discovered he was alive when he applied for his bonus money, which had already been paid to Mrs. Gifford. His whereabouts have not been revealed.

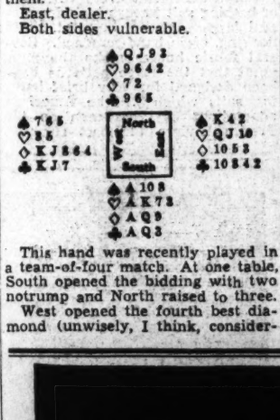
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Steering the Bidding.

When one hand of a partnership holds a so-called rock-crusher and the other few, if any, high cards, a determined effort should be made to maneuver the bidding in such a way that the strong hand will not become the exposed dummy. This, of course, is a generality; it must be admitted that bidding exigencies will not always allow this. There are two reasons why the rock-crusher should not be exposed. One of them concerns the opening lead—it is far better to have the lead come up to strength than through it; but the more important reason is that defenders naturally put up better defense when they can actually see the exposed high honors than when they must visualize them.

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



This hand was recently played in a team-of-four match. At one table, South opened the bidding with two notrump and North raised to three.

West opened the fourth best diamond (unwisely, I think, considering that he should have feared a major tenace on his right), and nine tricks became very easy for the declarer, since dummy's fourth heart became an entry for the taking of the spade finesse.

At the other table, the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
2 heart	Pass	2 notrump	Pass
3 notrump	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's opening bid was very bad for two distinct reasons: first, he did not have a two heart bid, inasmuch as he had more losers than honor tricks; second, his two heart bid was extremely apt to place a probable notrump contract into the wrong hand, as it actually did.

It is perfectly true that North could have made three notrump against the opening lead of the club deuce by guessing correctly the position of the adverse key cards, but the point of the matter was that North had a much harder problem to face, and did not solve it correctly.

He played the Queen of clubs on the first lead, and after that he never had a chance. West won with the King and returned the Jack. Now, even though North's nine of hearts turned into an entry for the successful finessing of spades, East naturally did not cover the Queen or Jack, and North therefore was held to three spade tricks, three hearts and the two minor Aces.

Producers Ask 47-Cent Rise In Milk Price

Virginia Board Considers Association Request; AAA Hearing Today.

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, whose request for higher milk prices comes up for hearing today before the Dairy Section of the AAA, yesterday asked the Virginia Milk Commission for a 47-cent a hundredweight increase in the price paid to producers.

Representatives of Arlington-Alexandria distributors, however, advised the commission to postpone action on the request until after the Department of Agriculture has established a permanent price schedule in Washington.

The commission took under consideration the petition for an increase which, together with suggested changes in regulations governing producer allotments, was presented by B. B. Derrick, manager of the Maryland-Virginia Association.

milk supply in the Arlington-Alexandria area had been "dangerously close" to the daily consumption since October 10. Better prices were needed, he said, to offset increased production costs and to "encourage" the production of a larger supply.

Those recommending postponement of a decison by the commission were W. S. Snow, attorney for the Alexandria Dairy Products Co., and W. V. Davidson and Frank Davis, representing the Arlington County Dairy. They held that purity of prices on both sides of the Virginia line was essential to successful regulation of the Arlington-Alexandria regulations.

Philip Rosenfeld, attorney for the Highland Farms Dairy in Washington and for the High ice cream stores, milk outlets in Arlington County and Alexandria, urged that the commission hold a hearing in Alexandria before deciding on the proposed increase. J. S. Agnew, chairman of the commission, said the suggestion would be taken under consideration.

Funeral Rites Of Gen. Baker To Be Today

Prominent in World War, Officer Later Took Part in Ohio Politics.

Funeral services for Brig. Gen. Chauncey Brooke Baker, 76, U. S. A., retired, who died Sunday in Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 3 p. m. today in the Fort Myer, Va., chapel. Burial, with full military honors, will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Gen. Baker, whose home was in Columbus, Ohio, was a senior member of the Military Commission to Great Britain, Belgium and France, for three months in 1917. He was chief of the Embarkation Service, office of the chief of staff, War Department, from August, 1917, to February, 1918. Gen. Baker retired in April, 1921, at his own request in order to devote his entire time to business pursuits.

For many years he was active in Ohio politics and identified with many financial and business institutions. He was an ardent supporter of Gen. Leonard Wood, when the latter was a candidate for the Presidency on the Republican ticket in 1920.

A native of Lancaster, Ohio, Gen. Baker graduated from West Point in 1888. Four years later he was graduated from the Infantry and Cavalry School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. In 1904, he received a bachelor of science degree from Ohio State University.

He saw service in many parts of this country and in Cuba, where he was chief quartermaster of American forces during the Spanish-American War.

Gen. Baker had many friends here. He was a member of the Army and Navy Clubs here and in New York, the Chevy Chase Club, the West Point Mess Club at Columbus, and was active in American Legion affairs.

He was married three times. His first wife was Miss Lucy McCook, daughter of Gen. Alexander McD. McCook, to whom he was married in 1889. She died in 1923.

British Defeat Is Celebrated At Yorktown

Woodring and Gov. Peery Join in Paying Tribute to Early Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19.—Secretary of War Harry W. Woodring and Gov. George C. Peery joined here today on the 155th anniversary of Cornwallis' surrender in honoring the early Americans and their French allies who paved the way to establishment of an independent republic.

Describing Yorktown as the fulfillment of "a noble expression of a great hope" in the declaration of independence, Secretary Woodring declared the "first and foremost duty of a government is to keep its people at peace with the world."

Gov. Peery said America in achieving its independence created a "better state of society in which the people of all the world wished and still wish to participate."

The ceremonies, opening at 10 a. m., were conducted under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sons of the American Revolution and the National Park Service.

The cabinet member said the nation's duty to promote peace did not mean "supine submission to aggression," but rather a "resolute defense of its sovereign rights as to discourage aggression."

"While we carefully avoid entangling political commitments," he said, "we are always ready for helpful co-operation. For ready assistance in furthering the progress of civilization. We have no desire to engage in military, economic or social warfare. We mean to keep the peace in the broadest and most inclusive sense of the word."

He said the reciprocal trade agreements and the co-operation with other powers toward the stabilization of currencies had aided in the "lessening of international tension," and predicted that if the "forces now at work are permitted to continue uninterrupted we may confidently look forward to another expanded and enlarged era of good feeling."

Blind Survey

The survey of employment opportunities for the blind, authorized by Congress last spring, probably will not be undertaken until some time next year. Reason: Failure of Congress to allot funds for the survey and the need of a deficiency appropriation before work can be done.

Enforcement of section 2 of the act, calling for the establishment of vending stands to be operated by the blind in Federal buildings throughout the country may get under way soon, however. The division of vocational rehabilitation of the Office of Education which is intrusted with the administration of the act has requested permission from the Budget Bureau to borrow some of the funds regularly allotted for the rehabilitation of disabled persons to start the licensing of blind newsstand operators.

Under the terms of the act as interpreted by the Office of Education, vendors now operating stands will not be affected, but all new stands will be filled by specially trained blind persons to be designated by the various State agencies caring for the blind.

If the Budget Bureau agrees to the temporary "loan" of rehabilitation funds, two newsstand specialists and five or six clerks will be taken on. The law requires that one-half of the staff must be blind persons. When the employment survey gets under way next year, an additional clerical force will be required.

If nothing has gone wrong, Herbert W. Krieger, of the Smithsonian Institution, will land today in the Northern Bahama Island where he is to study the cave burials and shore deposits of the island Indians. Krieger won't be back until February.

"Bear-Bread"

Lack of space in our "zoo visit" piece last week prevented us from recounting many of the "zoo stories" told by Dr. William M. Mann, zoo director, as he guided us about. And so from time to time you can expect us to pop another zoo tale into this column.

Here is one about the bread the zoo makes for and feeds to the bears. A millionaire health faddist visiting the zoo some time ago, tasted some of the bread and thought it the answer to Bernarr MacFadden's dream of the perfect health food. When he left, he took half a dozen loaves with him for further tasting. Several months later Dr. Mann received a letter from the millionaire saying the loaves had exceeded all his expectations and would Dr. Mann please send him the recipe.

Naturally, after such a come-on story, we tasted the bread. It was tough crusted, chunky and rather hard on our much too civilized teeth. We couldn't understand the millionaire's enthusiasm at all. Nor were we the least bit satisfied with one explanation that Dr. Mann offered.

"Maybe he was training to be a Wall Street bear."

"Minority" delegates to the District department of the A. F. G. E. are out to get as many committee appointments as possible.

Preserving Milk

You probably will recall the recent news stories telling of a method for shipping milk over long distances without spoiling, discovered by the Germans. Department of Agriculture scientists too have a formula for shipping milk to the tropics, yet retaining its sweetness.

The Department formula is based on an entirely different principle. The Germans preserved their milk by maintaining a constant supply of oxygen, the Department of Agriculture, however, freezes and concentrates the milk to one-third of its regular volume and then ships it in cans, freezing temperatures being maintained constantly.

When the cans are opened the milk can be used either as concentrated condensed milk, or two cans of water can be added to restore the milk to its original form. There is no difference in taste between the milk when canned and used in this manner than when bottled at the outset.

The Department's milk preserving experiments have been going on for about two years, principally under the direction of B. W. Webb. Trial shipments have been made to the tropics, the Canal Zone and some South American countries. At present the Department estimates the canned milk will remain fresh for about 30 days after canning.

An examination for apprentices in various mechanical trades at the Washington Navy Yard is to be given by the Civil Service Commission. Included in the trades for which applications will be accepted until tomorrow are blacksmith, boilermaker, coppersmith, electroplater, electrician, joiner, machinist, wood modelmaker, molder, patternmaker, precision lens, prism and test plate makers.

From five to ten AAA employes are resigning daily, which should ease the need of the January dismissals . . . The statistical results of the citrus consumption survey of the consumer's counsel office of the AAA are being charted under the direction of Dr. George W. Hervey.

Adventists Urge School Near Here

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 19 (AP).—To combat what they term atheism, agnosticism, infidelity and modernism, the officers council of the Seventh Day Adventists will recommend establishment of a post-graduate school near national headquarters of the denomination in Washington.

This recommendation will be made to the autumn council opening here Wednesday. The Rev. M. N. Campbell, president of the North American Division Conference, said today adherents of the faith in North America will be asked to contribute $100,000 as the first cost of this proposed institution.

The college is proposed because some young men, who had planned to become teachers in Adventist colleges or become ministers, eventually gave up such plans because of teachings in institutions of higher learning not conducted by the denomination, Mr. Campbell said.

Housing Lack For Low-Paid Here Related

Ihlder, Miss Hill Are Among Speakers on Home Problem.

Inadequacy of housing facilities for low-income families in Washington was deplored by speakers in an open forum discussion before the Monday Evening Club at a meeting inaugurating its fortieth year of civic activity last night.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, said private business thus far has failed to work out a program which would relieve the shortage, but expressed hopes that this deficiency would soon be corrected.

He told of the authority's plans to provide low-rent homes for families it moves from alley dwellings if they are unable to find suitable quarters in private developments.

Miss Alice Hill, director of the local relief administration, said there are 3,000 elderly single persons in Washington and emphasized the need for providing them with decent quarters at low rents.

Clark Corliss, of the Family Service Association, related how difficult it is for his organization to find suitable quarters for unskilled wage earners and their families.

Miss Jean Coman, Housing Division, PWA, said private capital provides suitable living quarters for only 40 per cent of the low-income population and it is the Government's responsibility to see that facilities are provided for the remainder.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Police Women's Bureau, advocated enactment of a law to license rooming houses. Many rooming houses now have no resident manager, she said, and this encourages undesirable conditions.

Mrs. Florence Stewart, secretary of the Washington Committee for Housing, urged enactment of a law which would control not only construction, but operation and maintenance of housing in the District.

Tax Situation Topic.

At a meeting of the Interfederation Conference at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, Jesse C. Suter, chairman of the Citizens' Joint Committee on Fiscal Relations, explained to the delegates the necessity for studying the involved local tax situation brought about by the many Federal buildings here.

The District cannot expand its tax area, he said, because its boundaries are set by Federal regulation. Thus, as the Government erects more and more buildings, the taxable property in the District is constantly decreasing.

A. F. Scheer reported that a committee was now at work studying a proposed plan to extend New York avenue to the vicinity of Cheverly, Md., to create a new arterial highway into Baltimore. The remainder of the route would be built upon the abandoned right-of-way of the W. B. & A. Railroad.

Kern Re-Elected.

John P. Kern was re-elected president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association at its meeting at Bryan School last night. Other officers elected were: First vice president, Alfred D. Calvert; second vice president, L. R. Tindal; secretary, Helena D. Reed; treasurer, B. F. Campbell.

Calvert and Mrs. Reed were also named as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Calvert takes the place of Joseph L. Gamell, who retired after serving as a delegate to the federation for the last nine years.

Chest Program Given

The Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association met last night at the A. R. Shepherd School. The group watched an illustrated presentation of the activities of the Community Chest. James I. Turner, new secretary of the Sixteenth street organization, was installed in his office.

Firm Demands Right to Build D. C. Abattoir

Acting on complaint of the Adolph Gobel Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., District Court Justice Joseph W. Cox yesterday ordered the District Commissioners to show cause by Thursday why the Gobel company should not be granted a permit to construct a meat-product manufacturing plant at 3737 Benning road northwest.

The company, in a mandamus action, claimed that it had been given permission to erect the foundation for the building, but complained that the District Commissioners, "at the request of one or more of them," have refused to ratify the final drawing of the project.

In a statement issued before the suit was filed, V. D. Skipworth, president of the firm, said the new building would utilize modern devices for elimination of objectionable odors. In addition, he said, the operation of the plant would be under the active supervision of the Department of Agriculture and would manufacture no fertilizers.

Skipworth also said that the plans for the establishment had been approved by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture.

Objections to the construction of the building have been raised by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and by the American Civic Association, of which Frederic A. Delano is chairman. Ickes' protest was made in his capacity of PWA administrator because of the provimity of a low-cost housing project.

Two Frenchmen Watch the Birds

Two French Bird Lovers Donate Rare Pheasants to District Zoo

Jean Delacour and Francois Edmond Blanc brought their bird-scattering mission to Washington yesterday.

M. Delacour is one of the world's foremost ornithologists and a pheasant specialist. M. Blanc is publisher of L'Echo de Paris, big-game hunter, racing driver and, like the scientist with whom he is touring the States, a bird lover.

They were guest of Superintendent William M. Mann at the Zoo yesterday. Dr. Mann was glad to see them, not only because they are old friends, but because they brought two pair of fine pheasants as gifts.

The two Frenchmen arrived in New York about ten days ago on the Ile de France. Their bathrooms were filled with birds.

"I think maybe we're not supposed to put birds in the bathroom," said M. Blanc, "but what could we do. They were too valuable to be kept out of our sight."

In the lot were humming birds, birds of paradise, pheasants and other splendid specimens to delight ornithologist and layman alike. Before coming here they dropped some off in the zoos of New York and Philadelphia. The remainder will be delivered personally in Chicago, San Francisco and other cities.

M. Delacour has hunted pheasants all over the world. He found the best ones in Indo-China, which he has visited seven times. He has discovered five species previously unknown to science.

As a result of his visit, Washington's Zoo today is richer by a pair of cheer pheasants and a pair of white-crested kaleege pheasants. They are from the highlands of central Asia. Never before have their kind been on exhibition here.

So Dr. Mann, giving full vent to his enthusiasm, made yesterday "pheasant day" at the Zoo. He invited Charles F. Denley and John Mock, pheasant breeders, over to meet the Frenchmen and inspect the Zoo's collection.

Delacour said he expects to spend the remainder of this year in the United States, looking over our American birds and gathering a representative collection to take back with him. He has hundreds of fine specimens in his private zoo in Normandy.

M. Blanc, too, has his own zoo back home. He has hunted big game in Indo-China, up and down Africa and Russia. Next year he plans to go after Kodiak bears in Alaska. These are ambitious plans, indeed, because Kodiaks come very large and are very dangerous.

The French Museum contains many stuffed animals which were brought down by M. Blanc. But he brings many back alive, too. Once he returned with a live gorilla for the Paris Zoo. He sails October 29 on the homeward voyage.

"I suppose my bathroom will be filled with birds again. American ones this time," he said.

Pacelli to Pay Two-Day Visit To Washington

Cardinal Pacelli, first Papal Secretary of State ever to visit America, will arrive in Washington tomorrow afternoon for a two-day sojourn.

He will have dinner at the Apostolic Delegation House, 1811 Biltmore street northwest, and spend the night there.

A crowded program awaits the Pope's "prime minister" Thursday. In the morning he will visit Catholic University and address the faculty, student body and a distinguished gathering of clergy headed by Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore.

From Catholic University he will go to the Library of Congress and thence to the headquarters of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Will Address Correspondents.

At 1 p. m., as the luncheon guest of the National Press Club, Cardinal Pacelli will address a gathering of 400 newspaper correspondents. A noted linguist, with a command of seven languages, he is expected to give his talk in English.

During his visit to the Press Club, Cardinal Pacelli will be invited by Acting President Charles O. Gridley to write his name in the club's famous-guest book. He will find the names of two other princes of the church already inscribed therein—those of Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, and Cardinal Mercier, hero priest of war-time Belgium. A number of prime ministers have been guests of the club, including Lloyd George and Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain, and Pierre Laval, of France.

From the Press Club, Cardinal Pacelli will go to Mount Vernon, there to place wreaths on the tombs of George Washington and Martha Washington.

To Visit Georgetown.

Then he will visit historic Georgetown University, founded by the Most Rev. John Carroll, first Catholic bishop of America.

Cardinal Pacelli is expected to leave Washington Thursday night or early Friday.

Those qualified to talk say that even if Cardinal Pacelli were interested in restoring diplomatic relations he hardly would select this as the time, when the United States is in the throes of an election campaign. The cardinal, they point out, is too well trained a diplomat for that.

Cardinal Pacelli plans to see all four American Cardinals on his present good-will visit. These are Cardinals Hays, of New York; O'Connell, of Boston; Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and Mundelein, of Chicago.

He expects to pay another visit to Washington before he returns to Rome.

Dr. Dicus Reappointed.

Dr. M. Luther Dicus, optometrist, has been reappointed a member of the national legal and legislative committee of the American Optometric Association of the District. His appointment was announced by Dr. H. E. Pine, of Chicago, president of the American Optometric Association.

Roosevelt, Landon On Same Hustings Here—in Movies

For the first time since the celebrated Lincoln-Douglas debates in 1860, the two major parties will present their candidates and their campaign arguments under the same roof, the management of the Rialto Theater announced yesterday.

The official Democratic and Republican films will be shown there Thursday, and there will be ballot boxes, so that patrons may cast straw votes at the end of the performance.

P.U.C. Denies New Hearing On 1-Man Car

Citizens' Group Plans to Seek Repealing of Order in Court.

Commission Thinks Rule on Trolleys' Use Will Be Sustained.

The Public Utilities Commission late yesterday denied the petition of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the Central Labor Union and the people's counsel for a rehearing in the one-man street car case.

William McK. Clayton, attorney for the federation, said the fight would be carried on to court, as it is the mandate of the organization that every legal means be exercised to repeal the order.

No comment was made by the commission in rejecting the petition, but it was understood the regulatory body feels its order would be sustained in court.

Order Attacked as Illegal.

The petition was filed last week and charged, among other things, that the order was illegal because it was not based upon the evidence produced at the public hearing.

Under the order, already effective, the Capital Transit Co. was permitted to convert 20 of the President's conference type street cars into one-man operation and to purchase 20 Providence type used one-man cars for replacement of obsolete equipment.

The commission also scheduled a conference on the petition of the transit company to substitute bus service for street car service in the Takoma Park area beyond Fourteenth street and Colorado avenue.

Discussion Thursday.

Officers of the citizens associations in the area served will be invited to discuss the petition Thursday, according to Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman.

The majority of the civic and trade organizations in the territory are said to favor the change to bus service, but two associations are opposed. They are the Takoma Park Maryland-District Citizens Association and the Brightwood Citizens Association.

Among the groups favoring the plan are the citizens associations of Takoma, D. C.; of Manor Park, of Chillum Heights, and of Sixteenth Street Heights.

Union Charts Fight

Continuing its fight against the one-man car the Central Labor Union prepared last night to draft a resolution to be presented at the American Federation of Labor convention at Tampa, Fla., next month, which charges the Capital Traction Co., with violation of the Interstate Commerce Commission laws.

The executive council named a committee to form the resolution after a motion by W. M. Keeler, chairman of the C. L. U. public utilities committee.

Keeler explained that according to Interstate Commerce Commission regulations any utilities operating steam or electric conveyances across State lines must operate with a full crew of two men. Also, he said, all the company's cars must be so operated. The one-man cars are a violation of that law, he charged.

Frank J. Coleman, C. L. U. secretary, was nominated as a delegate to the A. F. of L. convention. He will be appointed formally at the next meeting. One delegate is allowed from a central body to a convention.

An unusual rule which requires a two-third vote before donations can be made was adopted by the union. Fifty dollars was taken from the treasury to help fight the Remington & Rand strike now in the fourth month.

Democratic Unit Holds Rally at Takoma Park

At a rally of the Takoma Park Women's Democratic Club at Takoma Library last night Mae Helm, president of the Washington Democratic Club, attacked Republican women campaign workers as "uninformed."

"They dote on generalities," she said. "They never go out with facts. The Republicans have no issues in the present campaign."

Abandoned Baby's Mother Sought Here

District Hunts Mother of Boy, 3, Left on Doorstep in Baltimore

Early in September a desperate young widow kissed her 3-year-old son, Sherman, here and told him to be brave while she went to the hospital to bring home a baby brother or sister for him.

Bravely Sherman stood on the steps of a Baltimore home adjoining the Maryland Society for the Protection of Children from Cruelty yesterday after the man who accompanied him there rang the doorbell and fled.

A single chevron gleamed on Sherman's miniature sailor coat and he smiled beguilingly when Mrs. Lena Wright opened the door. On a bundle of clothing beside the lad was a note which gave the name of his mother and told this pitiful story:

"This young lady referred to is a good-hearted soul. Please give this child a good home. The mother has gone to a Washington hospital to give birth to a baby and she asks me to befriend her for about six weeks and pay her child's board, which I did, but she called on October 8 stating she was coming back that afternoon—but she never came.

"She entered the hospital the first week in September.

"P. S. I am an innocent victim. The child is so attached to me he calls me dad. The child lost his real daddy."

The note meant nothing to Sherman. His entire interest was centered on Mrs. Wright's dog. Even bribes of candy, found in the bundle left by the mysterious stranger, failed to elicit from him any information. His case was referred to Juvenile Court authorities, who placed him in a boarding home.

They remembered the case of a frantic young woman who entered a hospital early in September and gave birth to a baby. She obviously was registered under an assumed name, but she steadfastly refused to divulge any accurate information about her past.

Suspect Seized In Washington Bond Robbery

The arrest of William J. Boyd, charged with the theft of $15,000 in bonds from the Riggs National Bank in 1929, was announced yesterday by United States Marshal John J. Murphy, in Boston, the Associated Press reported.

Boyd, who recently finished serving a two-year term in the West Middlesex Reformatory, in Massachusetts, on a larceny charge, has been described by police as "one of the slickest bond thieves in the country."

Besides facing the Washington charge, Boyd is wanted for the theft of $1,000 from Hornblower & Weeks, in Chicago, in 1930.

Police said the Riggs robbery occurred when Boyd, accompanied by a man and woman accomplice, entered the bank and engaged in a conversation with an employe who was counting bonds.

It was not until the trio had vanished that the loss was discovered. Police have been searching for him since.

Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, said last night he had not been advised officially of Boyd's arrest.

D. C. Will File Suit to Collect Old Shortage

Action Against Donovan for $3,229 Theft Is Friendly One.

The District Government today will file suit against its auditor, Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, to collect a ten-year-old shortage of $3,229.90.

The suit, which is entirely friendly and no reflection upon the auditor, is intended to clear up the fiscal aspects of a case that sent an employe of the auditor's office to prison and later induced him to commit suicide.

Similar Action.

A similar suit already has been filed against Maj. J. L. Lusby, District disbursing officer, by the United States Attorney's office.

The separate suits are necessary because Donovan's bond is payable to the District, while Lusby's is credited to the Federal Government.

The shortage occurred in 1926 and was attributed to fraudulent tax refund vouchers instigated by Joseph Frenzel, who subsequently was sent to prison and who last year took his life after gaining his freedom without completing sentence.

Measure Pigeonholed.

The District last year made an effort to adjust the matter by submitting a bill to Congress relieving Maj. Donovan of responsibility, but the measure was pigeonholed.

As the statute of limitations allows five years for the filing of a suit after making a claim against the bonding company, the District has let the matter rest.

Yesterday the Commissioners instructed Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel, to file the suit as the five-year period is near expiration.

Navy Yard Expert Out After Report Of 'Irregularities'

Refusing to divulge details, the Navy Department yesterday announced that Harry T. Morningstar, Takoma Park resident who has been master electrician at the navy yard since 1908, has been "suspended pending an investigation."

The announcement was made reluctantly and only after the department had been flooded with requests to confirm or deny reports that Morningstar and five other employes at the yard had been accused of certain irregularities.

The master electrician lives at 105 Cedar avenue, Takoma Park, Md. Well known in the East as an electrical engineer, he entered the navy yard as a machinist electrician in 1901 and was appointed master electrician seven years later. He is member of several professional societies.

For several weeks, it was learned, high Navy officials have been investigating the case in utmost secrecy. Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, last week admitted an inquiry was under way, but said no statement would be issued until it reached its climax.

The other five men involved in the investigation and all of whom, according to reports, have been disciplined are residents of Washington.

Katharine Dayton and George S. Kaufman held a mirror up to Washington in the National Theater last night. It was, to be sure, a little on the side of a Coney Island mirror that distorts the image which it reflects, but that only added to the fun.

"First Lady" is a satirical comedy that will never again encounter so perceptive, or so receptive, an audience as the one which it encounters in the National Capital, where the scene of the play is laid. Every allusion, every subtle thrust, every ridiculous exaggeration of the working of the political and social machine that is Washington life, finds a quick reaction in the risibilities of a city that is privy to the sly goings-on and able to "take it."

Washington, originally, was to have had the premiere of this hilarious commentary upon the devious devices of politics and social precedence, but that plan, for some unknown reason, fell through and the initial performances went to Wilmington and Philadelphia. That is just as well. The jockeying of two shrewd, clever and conniving women to put their men in the White House, a year ago would not have carried half the humorous weight, the timeliness or the spontaneously exciting attack on present problems that it does less than a month before the election.

The Women Go to War.

After "First Lady's" overwhelming success at the Music Box Theater in New York last season, it seems a work of supererogation at this time to reiterate that it relates the high-powered story of two ambitious Washington matrons, who set out to maneuver their husbands into the White House. One is the wife of the Secretary of State, the other the discontented spouse of a Justice of the Supreme Court. It is a war of wits that at times suggests a famous Washington feud, but beyond that, as the authors have consistently insisted, betrays no intention to photograph actual personalities.

The whole merry business has its inception on an "at home" day at the home of the Secretary of State. Here begins the spirited rivalry between two veiled enemies to see which will become the chatelaine of the White House. The manner in which the strategems of their pretty little war are evolved and put into operation, and their eventual results, provide the basis of a comedy that is written with a zest, and acted with a gusto, that never lets either the play or the audience down.

Played at high speed throughout the length of its three acts and four scenes, "First Lady" is alive with pithy, penetrating and pungent dialogue that one would be tempted to say, without the aid of a comptometer, affords the proverbial "laugh per line."

Is Played in High Key.

This sprightly collaboration of Miss Dayton and Mr. Kaufman moves with the refreshing briskness of an autumn breeze. Written in the same tempo as "The Royal Family," by Mr. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, it does for Washington drawing-room life precisely what the earlier comedy did for the tradition of a great family of the theater. It requires quick wit, deftness of speech, all of the social graces and a storehouse of energy to achieve the full potentialities of the script. All this is realized by the splendid cast headed by Jane Cowl, one of the theater's most brilliant artistes and loveliest decorations.

Miss Cowl brings to the role of Lucy Chase Wayne, the triumphant wife of the Secretary of State, a sublime beauty of feature and voice, a sparkling sense of humor and an enthusiasm that are overwhelmingly effective. In the role of her rival, Irene Hibbard, Ann Mason, succeeding Lily Cahill of the original cast, contributes a performance that is supremely catty and a perfect foil for the star's more subtle methods. It is about these two that the play revolves and to them that it is indebted for its most spirited and most delightful scenes.

Among the supporting players, Helen Brooks, as an ingenuous niece of the Wayne's from the South, who captured herself a Senator before she got through; Carrie Reynolds, no stranger to the National stage since the days when she played there in musical stock back in an earlier era, as the typically "social" Senator's wife; Diantha Pattison, as a long-suffering and extremely competent social secretary; Judson Laire, as Senator Keane, Emmy's catch; Oswald Yorke, as the Supreme Court justice; Ethel Wilson, as the jittery Mrs. Creevey, and Thomas Findlay, the Senator Hardwicke, turned in helpful and beautifully rounded performances.

Hunter Gardner, as Stephen Wayne, seemed to these eyes not quite the perfect picture of a Secretary of State, but that is sheer carping, since no member of the long cast did anything to mar the complete joy of the most hilarious evening in the theater the new season so far has afforded.

About the Showshops

"SPRING SHOWER," Irvin Shapiro's DuWorld film production, made by Paul Fejos in Hungary, which also is known by the name of "Marie," is not the florid and tempestuous bit of screen daring one might suppose from the fact that it has been banned in both New York State and Pennsylvania by the censor boards.

BELL.

The much-discussed film, to be given its American premiere in the Belasco Theater tonight at 8:30, is a slow-moving, rather old-style tragedy, dealing with the experiences of a beautiful young servant girl who falls victim to the duplicity of an admirer of her mistress'. Her life thenceforth becomes a series of misadventures that compound a crescendo of sorrow, until death before the Madonna in the little village church in which she had consecrated her baby brings the picture to a denouement that is as fantastic, but not so profound, as the celestial express scenes in "Liliom."

"Spring Shower," whatever it may lack, possesses the distinction of realizing the importance of the commonplace. It develops a story that is unenlivened, but one that has about it an intensely keen sense of life in rural Hungary. Its people are as real as the muddy streets through which they trudge to Sabbath worship, or the filthy stles in which they keep their pigs. The movement of the narrative is slowed down to a snail's pace and dialogue is so sparingly employed that one feels almost that he is watching one of the old silent pictures without the printed subtitles. At least, that was my reaction at a special Sunday midnight preview.

As a direct and pointed assault upon the hypocrisy of the human race, "Spring Shower" is an eloquent sociological document. Marie, because she is the mother of a baby born out of wedlock, is made the object of every mental cruelty—and many of the physical—man can heap upon his fellows, by the pious zealots who serve as the symbols of morality and rectitude in the story. The only ones to show her compassion, helpfulness and the boon of sympathetic kindliness are the inmates of a brothel, where she finds hospice when her baby is born.

"Spring Shower" is miles removed from the Hollywood manner. It is a sheer, grim, tragic study in realism—simple, earthy and impressive. Some, no doubt, will resent the utilization of the church as a moving factor in a picture based on this particular theme; if so, they also should have resented "The Informer."

If "Spring Shower," again, justifies the rigid taboo of the censors, then so did the late David Belasco's stage production of Edward Knoblock's sensitive and tender story of "Marie Odile". From the viewpoint of the casual layman, their motivations are practically identical.

The matter of box-office appeal is something else again. "Spring Shower" is in no sense a gay and spectacular sex story, tricked out with all of the extravagances of investiture and lighting that might make it a gaudy and much more objectionable exhibit than it is. It is, however, a subject that will intrigue the interest of every student of dramatic honesty, as opposed to theatrical flubdub.

To many, that towsle-headed youngster who plays the brief role of Jane Darwell's son in "Ramona," on the screen at Loew's Capitol—the one who sneaks the gun from over the fireplace when he and his mother begin to suspect that Ramona and Alessandro are "heathens" because they are "injuns"—had a familiar appearance when he bobbed up in the picture, unlisted in the cast of characters. That is not surprising, since the role is played by Donald Barry, the Dude Lester with Henry Hull in "Tobacco Road," when that lugubrious Jack Kirkland dramatization of the Erskine Caldwell novel played the National Theater on two occasions last year. Remember now?

The first production of the newly organized Washington Civic Theater, Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," opening tomorrow night at Wardman Park, is to be presented with a flourish and full attention to the atmospheric embellishments of which the play is capable.

Trumpets sound in the distance as Julius Caesar approaches, and a musical wind plays across the desert where Cleopatra hides on a Sphinx's paw. The trumpets and the winds and the music all will be played by Gertrude Price, of the Washington College of Music, on a Hammond organ especially installed in the theater for this production by the Arthur Jordan Co.

Miss Price will compose and improvise the atmospheric music for the play, having done the same thing in New York for Richard Boleslawski's production of "The Scarlet Letter," at the American Laboratory Theater.

If the term "Hammond organ" means nothing to you, that is what it was that supplied the wonderfully effective musical setting for Max Gordon's production of "St Helena," starring Maurice Evans, as Napoleon, at the National recently.

Among the short subjects selected as best in the October judging in connection with the 1937 Grand Shorts Awards by the Jay Manuel Publicantions, was the Vitaphone Pictorial Review, No. 1, called, "Colorful Occupations," now on view as part of the hilarious anniversary bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Another one with which Washington is familiar is the RKO-Radio March of Time, No. 1, third series, seen at RKO-Keith's.

When "The Big Broadcast of 1936" succeeds Shirley Temple in "Dimples" on the screen at Loew's Palace, five celebrities making their first appearances before the cameras will augment the stellar cast of seasoned players.

Foremost among them all, is Leopold Stokowski, known around the world as one of the foremost symphonic conductors, whose name is indelibly linked in memory with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Next would come Frank Forrest, internationally famous operatic tenor.

Then there are Benny Fields, "the minstrel man," long teamed with his wife, the ebullient Blossom Seeley; Stan Kavanaugh, Antipodean juggler, often seen on local stages and a feature of the last "Follies" on Broadway, and Don Hulbert, boy accordion artist.

Quite a supporting cast for Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Benny Goodman's Swing Orchestra and the rest of the regulars.

It has been hinted here before that the Independent Burlesque Association is keeping pace with the general upturn in all branches of the theater. That Beau Brummel of the boxing arenas and Berry Wall of the rasslin' matches, old Col. James Jeremiah Lake, is putting on shows at his Gayety Theater this season that are distinguished by better casts, smarter comedy, finer staging, a greater variety of content and more beautiful feminine stars than at any time during the past five years. All you have to do to prove it is to drop in and take a look. And as is always the case in such circumstances, business is better, too.

In Hollywood

With Jimmie Fidler

Autograph Racket.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 19.

Local newspaper and magazine-stand operators have coined a private little racket that nets them many an extra penny. Let a movie actor stop at a stand for a purchase, and the owner is likely to say, "You're my favorite star. Will you autograph your picture in a magazine for me?" The flattered actor is usually happy to oblige. Later that magazine, originally priced at a dime or quarter, pyramids in value to a dollar or two, sometimes more. A Charlie Chaplin signature in a fan magazine brought one stand-owner six dollars.

GARBO.

Each month scores of stars visit the various newsstands and few of them do not comply with requests for signatures on their photographs in fan magazines. One stand owner proudly showed me a bank book the other morning. It was marked "Autograph account," and deposits totaled more than $400. Revenue from sales of autographed magazines at fat prices.

Should you visit Hollywood, you will see no signs advertising signature magazines. Standowners realize such display would frighten away the stars. You must ask, and chances are, if the proprietor does not have the autograph you want, he will take your order and get it eventually.

Return of W. C. Fields to golf, after a prolonged illness that robbed us mashie-wielders of his amusing companionship, recalls to mind a laugh he afforded at Lakeside a few seasons back. He had just completed 18 holes and was having drinks with a gushing woman interviewer from one of the movie magazines. "Tell me," she cooed, "do you indulge in profanity on the links?" "Never, madame," cried Fields, who curses like a sailor's parrot wherever he may be, "but where I spit, grass never grows again!"

As long as I am delving into the past for stories, let me tell you an anecdote concerning Greta Garbo's first introduction to the American press. It was soon after her arrival here and a publicity agent was chosen to be toastmaster at a party in her honor. "Ladies and gentlemen," the press agent said, after a fine luncheon had been reduced to smeared plates, "this is Miss Greta Garbo, our new star from Sweden. She does not speak one word of English." "No," broke in Garbo's guttural undertone, "not vun vord!"

Is Star of Controversial Film

When "Spring Shower," otherwise known as "Marie," is accorded its American premiere on the screen of the Belasco Theater tonight at 8:30, Capital audiences will make the acquaintance of this attractive young actress in the stellar role. She is known only by the professional name of Annabella and is a popular European screen personality. She was once in Hollywood, but never had an assignment.

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

Chapter XV.

Noel was afraid, too, for Harla's safety. In the four days since Fort Northumbria he had seen much of Flood. Undisciplined, predatory, Flood was a man who took what he wanted, and he wanted Harla. On the steamer trip she had unwisely antagonized him, and her very inaccessibility had fanned his infatuation ablaze.

For himself the last four days had been lonesome and bitterly disappointing. His hunt had slowed almost to a standstill. Except for some general insight into Flood's character, he had learned nothing about the man, nothing about his business on the Three Rivers.

The ship was hushed; most of the passengers and crew were asleep below; but down near the gangway stood a little knot of dark figures, the people who were going ashore—Harla, Alice Wentworth, Flood and three others. A deck-hand with lantern and freight trundler was moving their heavy luggage close to the plank head.

"My disembarking will be simple," Noel mused. "Matter of lighting a cigarette and strolling off."

As he gazed through the queer dark at Harla, sorting out her dim figure from all the others of that little group, he felt bitter and rebellious at his whole evil luck. One thin dime in his pocket, not one dependable friend in this huge north, no hope of help from the mounted or the law, his very name in disgrace back in the city country—that was where he stood. And here was the crowning irony of it all, that Harla should so distrust and dislike him when he was fighting to avenge her brother.

He wished that he had not brought her north with him. In his growing pessimism there were times when he wished that he had never met or known her at all. What would happen between himself and her here at Manitou, only the veiled future knew.

As the steamer scrunched against the wharf and was clewed fast, he walked down amidships. Harla was talking with Alice Wentworth, at whose cabin she had arranged to stay.

May I help, may I see you and Alice to your cabin?" he offered.

"We'll get there nicely, thanks," Harla returned.

With his hand in his gun pocket Noel stepped down the plank, crossed the wharf, walked a rod or two up the grassy slope, slipped into the shadows of a fish scaffolding, and waited.

Presently Flood came past, alone. Then the H-B factor and the missionary. Then Alice and Harla.

Falling in behind the two girls, Noel silently trailed them on up toward their cabin, to make sure that Harla got safely there.

When they had entered Alice's place and he heard them fasten the door, he turned back and stole out along the slope to the little way cabin which the northern pilots maintained and which Strap had invited him to use.

Inside, he dropped the door beam into place, groped in the dark for a pair of blankets, and pegged them tightly over the two small windows. Then, and only then, he lit the candle on the rough slab table.

Tired from days and nights of alert vigilence, he munched a few crackers and a bit of cheese from the cupboard; fixed up a rattle bang contraption, with two pans and a string, so that no one could get into the cabin without waking him; and then, after snuffing the candle, he lay down on a bunk in the corner.

Despite his loneliness and the daunting memory of what those men had done to Jimmy, he felt a certain hard satisfaction—the only satisfaction he had— in knowing that step by step he was closing in upon his enemies, with the relentlessness of one not to be denied. From far away Winnipeg, where he had started with only the vaguest of vague leads, he had followed their trail across the provinces to the threshold of the north, and on and on into the north itself, till now, here at this mountain shadowed post, he had reached their rendezvous.

The rest was a matter of his keeping alive.

Early the next morning, so early that he felt positive Harla would still be asleep, Noel started up the slope for Jimmy's tenantless cabin, to make a thorough search of the place.

The morning was bright, fresh; the air had an invigorating tang; and the strange virile country around him, basking under the northeast sun, was so beautiful that he hated to turn his eyes and mind from it. In the tundra across the Mackenzie the poppy meadows stretched in broad fields of yellow and red, with the silver of lakes between.

He wished that sometime the gods of his luck—stern gods they had been, these 13 years—might give him a season of sunlit freedom in a land like this. But now he was bound to his hunt. He had to live it, breathe it, and close his eyes to everything else.

Around the H-B store and down at the wharf a number of metis and swart Loucheaux were loafing in the sun. Young Paul d'Orleans and a nondescript white man were pumping floats on the Albatross and grooming the plane for flight. At the woods' edge beyond the mission stood Flood's large silk tent, fitted with stove, mosquito door and other luxuries.

Except for looking Jimmy's cabin over, he intended to make no investigation at all here at Manitou. His best strategy now was not to expose himself by grubbing around for evidence, but to sit tight and wait.

Finding Jimmy's cabin unlocked, he stepped inside and closed the door.

As he glanced around, he was surprised at the expensive furnishings; a fine plushy rug, good draperies at the three large windows, a handsome heating stove, a radio, day bed, small mahogany desk.

Where had Jimmy got the money for all this and for that costly little Diomede? Without question, from this unknown venture of his. No wild goose chase, that venture, but a solid lucrative fact.

Everything in the cabin lay exactly as Jimmy had left it, nearly a month ago, even to a half-eaten peppermint stick on the smoking stand.

After opening a window to the fresh morning air, Noel began a swift search of the cabin.

He combed through the desk and bookcase; explored the couch and radio; scrutinized the walls for a hidden niche; stripped back the rug and examined the floor planking.

In the entire cabin there was not one clear hint to Jimmy's secret.

Disappointed, he lit a cigaret and leaned against the desk, groping for some explanation to this dark riddle. Those muddied clothes indicated that the youngster had done hard manual labor of some sort. The mud on them, a reddish glacial clay, was pretty strong evidence that Jimmy's flights had taken him westward into those ice-clad ranges.

Today's Youth Is Too Tough, Says Director

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 19.—The younger generation takes it on the chin again as James Whale, picture director, tosses up his hands and complains the current crop of 20-year-olds is too tough, too smart and too sophisticated.

Whale has just finished a week's hunt for sad young men to play returning young German soldiers in "The Road Back" sequel to Eric Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front," without a nickel's worth of success.

Wants Spiritual Types.

"I'm looking for spiritual types," mourned the director, "and what do I get? A lot of guys trying to look like Jimmy Cagney, Bob Montgomery or Adolphe Menjou.

"I haven't anything against Cagney, Montgomery or Menjou, but if we wanted their types we'd cast the originals. What I want, and can't get, is boys who look like themselves . . . spiritual . . . intellectual . . . natural.

What's become of them all? Now, when I was a boy—never mind when Whale was a boy."

Turns to Colleges.

The director says he's exhausted possibilities of casting agencies and ordinary sources of talent, and his idea now is to turn to the colleges.

Next week will probably find him invading campuses of U. C. L. A., University of Southern California, California Tech and such.

Our guess is he'll do lot better there. Unless times have changed in the last ten years, he'll find a lot of guys trying to look like halfbacks, Noel Coward and the young Byron.

Minnesota Voted Leading Eleven in Poll of Nation's Experts

Hubbell Most Valuable in League

'Dizzy' Dean Is Ranked Second, Herman 3d in N. L. Poll.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 19.—Carl Hubbell, sensational left-handed pitcher whose baffling "screw ball" won 26 campaign victories and the 1936 pennant for the New York Giants, was unanimously chosen today as the year's most valuable National League player by a committee representing the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The sinewy hurler won the same recognition in 1933.

Hubbell received 60 votes, with six of the eight committeemen naming the lanky southpaw as their first choice. Two members of the committee, composed of one scribe from each city in the circuit, did not vote. Each committeeman cast 10 votes for first place, 9 for second, and so on.

Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, ace of the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff, was given second place with 53 votes. He was listed second by five committeemen and third by the sixth.

Herman Stands Third.

Billy Herman, flashy Chicago Cubs second baseman, who turned in a .335 batting average for the season's work, was third with 37 points. Three committeemen ranked Herman in this position.

Joe (Ducky) Medwick, Cardinal outfielder and his club's top flight sticker, his 220 hits accounting for 139 Cardinal markers, was fourth. One committeeman listed him second.

Charles (Gabby) Hartnett, Chicago Cubs' catcher, who was named "most valuable player" in 1935, was thirteenth on the 1936 list with 3 votes.

Named "most valuable player" in 1935, was thirteenth on the 1936 list with six votes.

Hubbell, a 33-year-old six-footer, almost frail in appearance, finished the 1936 season with a brilliant record of .813. Against his 26 triumphs were only six defeats.

Had Only 3 Shut-outs.

The Oklahoman pitched 294 innings in 43 games. He allowed 265 hits, walked 59 men and struck out 125. He added three shut-outs to his already impressive record.

Hubbell's startling 6-to-1 victory over the New York Yankees in the initial contest of the recent World Series is history. George Selkirk's third inning home run prevented the slender portsider from registering a shut-out.

It was "Hub's" third consecutive championship victory, since he twice downed the Washington Senators in the 1933 series. The win increased to 17 his consecutive 1936 triumphs.

Raymond Defeats Furr on Points

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 19.—Winning seven of the ten rounds with a body attack, Lew Raymond, 141¾, defeated Phil Furr, 146½, of Washington, in the main bout of tonight's fight card at Carlin's Park. Raymond, forcing the fight in practically every round, won a unanimous decision of the referee and judges.

Dizzy Meets Bee; Bee Comes Out Victorious

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 19 (AP).—Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean, the St. Louis Cardinals' ace pitcher, charged himself with an error today through loss of control.

But he laid the blame on a bee.

En route to Florida with his wife, Dean ran his automobile into a highway guard rail near here while battling a bee which flew in a window. Neither of the Deans was hurt but the car was laid up several hours for repairs to the fenders.

East Squads Prepare for Next Battles

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—Fordham's football squad had only settin-up exercises and signl drill today as the beginning of serious preparation for Saturday's game with St. Mary's awaited the return of Chief Scout Earl Walsh from California with his report on the Gaels. Only minor bruises were reported resulting from last week's victory over Waynesburg.

New York—Coach Mol Stevens, of New York University, was not discouraged over his team's 1-point loss to North Carolina, but indicated the Violets would be more air minded in Saturday's clash with Georgetown. Several forward-lateral pass combinations were included in the new plays he outlined.

West Point, N. Y.—The Army squad had a day off from practice because Coach Gar Davidson said they needed it "to dry out" after the drenching they received while whipping Harvard. Several players are suffering from colds as a result of the downpour.

Philadelphia—Pennsylvania's players saw themselves in action against Princeton on a movie screen. They had a day off from practice, but Coach Harvey Harman displayed the mistakes they had made against the Tigers.

Cambridge, Mass.—Three sophomores, Bob Green, Ken Booth and Phil Brooks, were promoted to the Harvard varsity on their showings against Army while Don Daughters, another soph, yielded his right end birth to Phil Staples. The players who worked against the Cadets were excused after signal drill and a session with the tackling dummy.

New York.—The Columbia varsity walked through its assignments on new plays designed to crack the Michigan defense while the Reserves scrimmaged against the Manhattan subs. Hubert Schultz, star punter, who was hurt in the V. M. I. game, was in uniform but his injured ankle is expected to keep him out of heavy work this week.

Pitt Hopes to Organize For Notre Dame Battle

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Pitt Panthers emerged today from their crushing defeat by Duquesne Saturday battered physically as well as mentally.

Coach Jock Sutherland said Bill Daddio, left end, was the most serious casualty, but hoped he would recover for Saturday's game with Notre Dame. He suffered an arm injury. Sutherland said after Saturday's exhibition he's uncertain what to do about a quarterback. He used four against Duquesne.

Jock McAvoy in Trouble.

Preston, England, Oct. 19 (AP).—Jock McAvoy, the British prize fighter, who returned recenty from America, was fined £15 today. He was convicted of dangerous driving, refusing to give his name and carrying a pistol without a license. He will not be permitted to drive a car for six months.

Jadick Loses To Leto in Dull Bout

1,500 Watch at Arena, Decision Unanimous; Both Overweight.

Ingram Is Winner in Semifinal; Williams Downs Marshall.

By Bill McCormick.

Last night was blue Monday night at Turner's Arena as Jimmy Leto, an out-of-condition welterweight, won a unanimous decision from washed-up Johnny Jadick in an alleged boxing feature of 10 rounds.

A crowd of 1,500 emitted great gobs of gloom as the two 147-pounders gave their all which, under the circumstances, was far too little.

Weighing seven pounds more than when he defeated Phil Furr recently, Leto—at 145 pounds—clearly showed the lack of condition occasioned by his inability to train for the bout because of a sore foot. Jadick was unable to look better than he did because he simply has nothing left.

The rapid-like Jadick left jab has became a feeble paw. The sturdy legs which once moved Johnny about the ring like mercury on a glass-topped table could do no more than send him over the canvas in grotesque hops last night. The remarkable reactions which once carried Jadick out of danger were gone and Johnny was an almost stationary target for many "sucker" punches that would not have come within inches of his person in the good old days.

Slow and sluggish, Jadick delivered his most effective punishment at close quarters. At long range he often swung wildly and he seemed to lack the stamina to follow up advantages which might have earned him a knockout victory and saved the customers many weary minutes of watchful waiting and hoping.

Ingram Gets Decision.

Ray Ingram and Billy Bullock, a brace of local lightweights, battled six hard-fought and entertaining rounds in a semifinal, with Ingram emerging the victor by a split vote of the official arbiters.

In another bout, slated to go six rounds, Chester Ruby scored a third-round technical knockout over Al Dintamin, of Washington. The Baltimore bantam battered Dintamin's midsection so relentlessly that Al became too sick to finish the fight.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 19.—Coach Francis A. Schmidt of Ohio State's football team is about convinced there is something to this "13" jinx.

The three times Ohio has scored exactly 13 points in a ball game under Schmidt's regime, the Bucks have lost. Illinois won, 14-13, in 1934; Notre Dame, 18-13, in 1935, and Northwestern, 14-13, in 1936.

And in the four games the Bucks have dropped since Schmidt took over the reins, the opposition has scored just 13 more points than the Bucks.

Mike Kabealo, flashy halfback, leads the Bucks in scoring with 13 points, far below the total Joe Williams had at the same time a year ago. Williams, wearer of No. 13 jersey, has scored 12 points this season, as against 36 for the same period in 1935.

New York Is Overfed On Grid, Colleges Fear

Last Saturday four top games in New York drew only 70,000 spectators, one of the smallest turnouts in years for so many attractions in Greater New York. It was a rainy day, but 60,000 watched one game in Philadelphia—the Pennsylvania-Princeton classic.

Kick by Kelley Accidental, He Declares

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 19.—Larry Kelley, Yale's brilliant end, found himself in the spotlight today as the author of a football play that promises to be discussed for many weeks to come—but neither the Elis' captain or Head Coach Ducky Pond wanted any credit for it.

Both, Kelley and Pond, insisted the "soccer" play on a fumble ball which led to Yale's 12-to-7 victory over Navy Saturday, was "absolutely accidental."

"There is absolutely no question about that play, it was absolutely accidental."

Both Surprised.

Both expressed surprise over the arguments which have risen out of the play and pointed out it "would be one of the hardest to time."

The play occurred midway in the field period of the contest. With Navy leading, 7 to 6, Sneed Schmidt, Middie back, fumbled a Yale kick on his 25-yard line. Kelley, running for the loose ball, forcefully kicked it 22 yards, scooping it up on the 3-yard line where officials ruled it downed in Yale's possession.

Not Excited.

Pond was quite serious, however. He said:

"Kelley accidentally kicked the ball. He told me it was an accident and there isn't the slightest doubt about it so far as the Navy and Yale are concerned.

"As I recall the play, Kelley and Bill John, one of the tackles, were right on the play. Seeing the fumble, both went for the free ball, and Kelley, reaching for it, accidentally kicked it."

Cavalcade Retired To Breeding Farm

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade, 3-year-old champion of the turf two years ago, will leave this week to join his owner's Brookmeade breeding farm near Upperville, Va.

Bob Smith, trainer of Mrs. Sloane's horses, made several attempts to bring the 5-year-old son of Lancegaye back to the races after he broke down late in his 3-year-old career, but gave up hopes after Cavalcade failed to show his old-time dash last month at Narragansett Park.

Pitt's Loss No Upset, Says Duquesne Pilot

Police Guard Pitt's Campus; Duquesne Students on Loose

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (AP).—Some 1,300 students of "Little Dequesne University celebrated noisily today the upset 7-0 football victory of the Dukes over the Powerful Pitt Panthers.

Braddock Enters High School Sports

Champion to Scrimmage With Arkansas Team.

The fisticuffer is going versatile in his athletics—if he can be fitted to a High school player's suit.

Braddock, here for treatment of an arthritic hand, talked with Coach Merving Perry of the Hot Springs Trojans, contenders for the Arkansas High School championship. The big battler confided that he can sock a line as well as a punching bag and in addition is no novice at punting and passing.

Dettweiler's 92 Qualifies at Ft. Worth

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Miss Dettweiler had nine-hole scores of 45 and 47. The medalist was Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, who returned to familiar scenes to score a 41-37—78. Scores of 99 made the title flight.

Miss Dettweiler has been the guest of Miss Didrikson in Fort Worth. They motored to Texas together from Washington. It was in this city that Miss Didrikson started her golf career three years ago.

Cuba to Stage Grid Battle January 1

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—The Republic of Cuba today announced a gigantic international sports festival to begin December 26 and end on New Year's Day with a football game between two leading American college elevens.

The tilt will be known as the "Havana Invitation Football Game," and will come as a climax to "Semana Deportiva Festival" (Week of Sports Festival) in which an international basketball tourney, international amateur boxing tournament and an international invitation track meet between stars from United States, Mexico, Panama and Cuba, are scheduled.

Teams under consideration by the selection committee now are: South—Duke, Tulane, Alabama, Louisiana State, Texas Christian and Southern Methodist. North—Fordham, Army, Yale, Pitt, Holy Cross, Michigan State, Penn and Notre Dame.

Duke Second, Army Third In Voting

Upsets Fail to Disturb Opinions; Irish Have Toughest Schedule.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—By a landslide vote, Minnesota's Gophers, who now enjoy the longest string of victories in major college football circles, were elected to hold the No. 1 spot in the consensus national ranking list compiled today by the Associated Press.

All except 3 among 35 newspaper sports experts representing the key points of observation from coast to coast, put Minnesota at the head of the class, pending further returns in a campaign that is just beginning to get warmed up. On points, the Gophers accumulated 345 out of a maximum of 350.

Duke and Army, rated second and third this week in the consensus, each received one first-place vote. The other went to Southern California, despite the Trojan tie last Saturday with Washington State.

Top Ten Rankings.

Here's the top ten, based upon points scored on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis for each list submitted:

1.	Minnesota	345
2.	Duke	187
3.	Army	178
4.	Northwestern	145
5.	Purdue	120
6.	Southern California	114
7.	Notre Dame	93
8.	U. of Washington	90
9.	Pittsburgh	76
10.	Yale	61

The "second ten," with points, follows: 11. Duquesne, 55; 12. St. Mary's, 52; 13. Louisiana State, 43; 14. Texas, A. & M., 42; 15. Nebraska, 36; 16. Fordham, 34; 17. Holy Cross, 29; 18. Tulane, 27; 19. Southern Methodist, 26; 20. Marquette, 21.

Lou Gehrig Is Sought For Movies' Tarzan

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 19.—The motion picture business tonight fixed an all-seeing eye on Mr. Columbia Lou Gehrig, durable first baseman of the New York Yankees, as the next movie edition of the great white beast, "Tarzan of the Apes."

Gehrig may as well give in without arguing about it, because what the motion picture business fixes its all-seeing eye upon, it usually gets.

Sol Lesser, producer for Principle Productions, a one-armed movie factory releasing through Twentieth Century-Fox, announced he has bought world rights for Tarzan of the Apes, and wants to buy world rights to Gehrig. He indicated he will perpetuate all the Tarzan pictures hereafter, having bought permission from Edgar Rice Burroughs, novelist, who wrote the Tarzan books.

Gehrig, if he passes screen tests, would be the first nonaquatic Tarzna of the talkie era. Johnny Weismuller, one-time world champion swimmer and Clarence (Buster) Crabbe, former Olympic 400-meter titleholder, have been impersonating the jungle man in recent years.

"He has the chest for it," a studio official explained. "It's one of the best chests we've ever seen. Also his legs are the right type. Tarzans have got to be slightly bow-legged to give the Simian touch."

Lesser will send scouts, hunters and trappers back to New York where they will try to flush Gehrig from cover, cage him and shoot a few test pictures. They also want his measurements as to chest expansion, biceps, legs and voice culture.

"We have not seen Mr. Gehrig without his baseball pants," a studio official explained. "It might turn he was knob-kneed or something like that."

8,000 See Bootless, Odds-On Favorite, Win Laurel Feature

Infantry 2d; Porphyry Pays $148

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 19.—In the role of an odds-on favorite, Bootless bore the white and green of the E. R. Bradley Stable to victory in the Crisfield Purse, wash-day feature at this turf plant. The son of Black Toney was guided the shortest way over the mile-and-70-yard course. At the finish he had a length and a half margin over the Millsdale Stable hope, Infantry, with Bulwark, half of the Denemark entry, third and six lengths away.

Jockey Johnny Renick rode a heady race on Bootless. He refused to have any traffic with the pace battle which involved Ampersand, Genie Palatine and Infantry. Instead he saved ground along the rail with "an armful of horse." Swinging for the stretch he asked Bootless for speed and the colt responded with a rush that carried him to the front of Infantry and the race was over except for the $3.20 pay-off.

Bootless stepped the distance in 1:43 3-5. Ideal racing weather, both aground and overhead, prevailed, with 8,000 in attendance.

The longest mutuel of the Maryland fall season, $148, developed in the sixth race when Porphyry, a 9-year-old, came through with a half-length victory over Tambov in a mile and a furlong test for cheap platers. Ridden by Jockey L. Balaski, Porphyry came from far back to be up in the final 20 yards. Credulous, one that ran out at the stretch turn, was third while carrying the majority of the wagers. Manual also lost all chance by swinging far out at the final bend. Porphyry was clocked in 1:55 3-5.

Favorite Wins.

The favorite players were off on the right foot as Millie M., property of Leo J. Marks, galloped off with the opening event. The Cohort filly, ridden by Apprentice Le Blanc, had an advantage of three lengths on Phlox at the end of the 5½-furlong dash. Third money went to Warrior Queen. Millie M. had a little trouble shaking off Phlox but, once in the stretch, drew out steadily. She stepped the route in 1:05 3-5 and paid a $5.60 mutuel.

J. S. Archer's Titian Kiddie sprinted to victory in a bulky field of 14 platers in the second race. The Light Brigade filly went to the front before reaching the first turn and took a three-length decision from E. Carver's Square Play. More Trouble, a paddock tip, was third. Titian Kiddie, handled by Apprentice E. Tucker, ran the three-quarters in 1:14 and returned a $5.30 mutuel while in the favorite role.

Seven Star Victor.

The third straight favorite of the day scored in the third race when the Foxcatcher Farms' Seven Star made a show of his field, winning handily by six lengths over the mile and a sixteenth course. Chambersburger, hard ridden, salvaged second money with Canpra third in the field of eight. Jockey M. Peters rode the winner and moved to the front when he chose. Seven Star paid a $4.60 mutuel and completed an $11.50 daily double. He was clocked in 1:47 1-5.

H. E. Simpson's Harry's Dream was an easy winner of the fourth race, contested by a group of eight at a mile and 70 yards. Carrying only 100 pounds and handled by Apprentice R. Morris, Harry's Dream ran Toothpick off her legs to take the lead leaving the backstretch and had a margin of six lengths over Uvalde of the favored Mohr entry at the finish. Justa Gal was a distant third. The winner broke the rule of the favorites and paid a $27 mutuel while running the route in 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MILLIE M., $5.80, $3.80, $2.30; PHLOX, $7.40, $3.50; WARRIOR QUEEN, $2.40.

MILLIE M. ran head and head with PHLOX to the stretch and gradually drew out to be running easily at the end while opening a gap. PHLOX was hard ridden throughout and tired slightly in the closing stages. WARRIOR QUEEN went evenly and had no excuses. MARY KEEN was held safe throughout. INDIANA showed early speed. STARAWAY had no mishaps.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:06½. Off at 2:09. Winner, J. S. Archer's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TITIAN KIDDIE, $5.30, $3.30, $2.70; SQUARE PLAY, $8.00, $5.90; MORE TROUBLE, $4.60.

TITIAN KIDDIE rushed to the front in the opening furlong, was rated to the stretch and drew out when put to a drive. SQUARE PLAY gained steadily to the stretch and closed with excellent courage under energetic handling. MORE TROUBLE broke poorly, came between horses and closed willingly. HANDLEY saved ground and showed a good effort. ADAMS EVE raced wide most of the way and came with good speed at the end while under pressure. ZINNIA dropped out of it after showing early speed. DRESSMAKER was through early. STEELTOES was lame and was pulled up.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:36½. Off at 2:39. Winner, Foxcatcher Farm's b. g. (3), by Messenger—Fair Star. Trained by R. E. Handlen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEVEN STAR, $4.60, $3.00, $2.50; CHAMBERSBURGER, $4.60, $3.10; CANPRA, $4.60.

SEVEN STAR, allowed to race on own courage to the backstretch, went up on the outside to reach contention, disposed of CHAMBERSBURGER without effort and was being taken in hand at the end. CHAMBERSBURGER was hard ridden and tired in the closing eighth. CANPRA, slow to get away, circled his horses entering the stretch and closed with good speed. OUT OF FIRE showed a good effort. RUDENIA squeezed back while running between SYLVIA G. and CHAMBERSBURGER swinging for the backstretch. SYLVIA G. quit from setting the pace under hustling tactics.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $11.50.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:06½. Off at 3:10. Winner, H. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARRY'S DREAM, $27.00, $8.10, $4.30; UVALDE (entry), $2.70, $2.30; JUSTA GAL, $6.00.

HARRY'S DREAM ran TOOTHPICK into submission to take command leaving the backstretch and easily held sway thereafter to be taken in hand in the final stages. UVALDE was in tight quarters to the backstretch and rallied only mildly. JUSTA GAL was bumped by ROLLICKER at the first turn and saved ground entering the stretch. IDLE LADY dropped back after the opening furlong. TOOTHPICK faltered badly after setting the pace for a half.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Crisfield. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:37. Winner, E. R. †Mrs. E. Denemark entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOTLESS, $3.20, $2.60, $2.30; INFANTRY, $5.00, $3.10; BULWARK, entry, $2.80.

BOOTLESS, saving ground while being rated within striking distance of the leaders, came with a rush when put to a drive approaching the stretch turn and wore down INFANTRY. The latter come up on the outside to take command along the backstretch and continued gamely, but could not resist the winner. BULWARK, outrun for a half, gained sharply nearing the stretch, but hung thereafter. AMPERSAND was close up for a quarter and tired gradually. GENIE PALATINE raced wide and close to the pace for a half and dropped out of it. GALMICA had a flash of early speed. ALBANIA quit badly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:08½. Off at 4:11. Winner, L. Siegert's ch. g. (9), by Rockminster—Trappold. Trained by W. O. Siegert. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41 1-5, 1:55 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PORPHYRY, $148.00, $57.10; $16.70; TAMBOV, $6.70, $3.90; CREDULOUS, $2.90.

PORPHYRY, allowed to settle into best stride and showing much improvement, came with a belated rush when put to a drive and won going away. TAMBOV, tiptoed to the front, was rated along and closed willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. CREDULOUS was taken back off the pacemakers, ran out at the stretch turn, and closed gamely on the outside of the track. MANUAL pressed the pace and raced wide entering the stretch. PILLNITA closed well. WITTEKIND made a mild threat in the early stretch and faltered.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:43. Winner, Mrs. A. J. Abel's ch. g. (4), by Monk's Way—Pleasure. Trained by A. J. Abel. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 4-5, 1:40 1-5, 1:53 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBUQUERQUE, $17.10, $9.20, $4.90; WISE ADVOCATE, $6.20, $3.80; FOGARTY, $2.90.

ALBUQUERQUE, sent to the front at once, was rated along while opening a gap leaving the backstretch and held sway to the end under a drive. WISE ADVOCATE went to contention with a rush swinging for the stretch, but hung in the final drive. FOGARTY closed a gap and was going with good courage at the end. MAD FRUMP came through on the rail entering the stretch, but could not threaten. OUR SHIP was held safe. PRECIOUS KING tired from pressing the pace. LEE LAFFOON was outrun.

G. W. and Wake Forest in Week-End Grid Spotlight Here

G. U. and C. U. Grid Squads To Travel

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Washington's two-man scouting party to Wake Forest, "Man-Mountain" Sexton, arrived home from the Carolinas yesterday, full of beefsteaks, b'ar stories and respect for the Deacons, who will be the visiting attraction at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

Briefly, Sexton summarized the foe as one of those tough and not-so-little neighborhood teams that can make a nuisance of themselves in the best of company and at the most embarrassing times. He opined as how the downtown sschool has another of those games on its hands where it has nothing to gain by winning and everything to lose—and a good chance of losing.

Wake Forest, according to Sexton, can play in the rain and mud as well as on a dry field, as it demonstrated last week in defeating Clemson. It proved its ability to go on a dry field against Wofford and North Carolina State, teams it defeated, and against North Carolina, which won a 14-7 decision on a last-period rally.

Deacons' Chief Threat.

In "Hobo" Raleigh, 190-pound fullback, the Deacons have a lad rated as one of the South's finest backs and punter extraordinary. His best effort to date is a puny 70-yard kick made against Clemson, but the boy is improving and should be at his best Friday night.

Raleigh has plenty of support in a crew of mates who will match George Washington pound for pound and in speed, Walter Kitchen, son of the school's president, is the spearhead of the passing attack and also rated on par with the best in Dixie. It was one of Kitchen's passes that paved the way for his team's 7-6 surprise victory over the Colonials last year.

There was a nautical twang in the air at Georgetown where the old salt, Admiral Jack Hagerty, made use of a bit of time-tested Navy strategy and put his landlubbers (and land-loving) Hoyas through their paces, shielded from public curiosity by great stretches of canvas.

Hoyas Drill in Secret.

The admiral distributed new maneuvers to his men for use against New York University this coming Saturday at Yankee Stadium, and figured that the best way to keep them private until the N. Y. U. meeting was to drill in secrecy. Practice will be conducted privately throughout Thursday, and Friday's workout will be just as secret but will be staged at Yankee Stadium, New York.

The Hilltoppers are going to New York determined to keep their goal-line inviolate and their winning streak intact. Hagerty is depending on the line to accomplish the former, and his brilliant array of backs, notably Tommy Keating, to do the latter. Keating, incidentally, is headed for recognition in a big way if he continues at his present pace, which shows total gains of 360 yards in 41 trips with the ball, averaging close to 10 yards.

C. U. Starts Work.

Preparations for Catholic University's invasion of the Southland got under way yesterday with the Cards having a peek at Ole Miss formations in dummy scrimmage. The victory-starved Rebels figure to be at their best for Mons. Bergman's boys and this may be the game that spoils the District team's heretofore unsullied record.

The only local game Saturday will be staged at Kendal Green between Gallaudet and William and Mary (Norfolk Branch). The Blue emerged from its opening game with Bridgewater with an 18-0 blemish on their record, but hope to get back in winning stride this week-end.

Maryland started work for the Syracuse game pleased with the knowledge that Bill Guckeyson will be available for heavy duty throughout the remainder of the season and that its blocking has improved 50 per cent. Guckeyson supplied the spark that touched off Maryland's attack against Virginia and sent the score soaring from 7 to 21. He did everything in accustomed style and Coach Frank Dobson feels reassured that his star back will be in the starting line-up in all future games.

Allen Sultan to Play In D. C. Workers Golf

Commissioners George Allen and Dan Sultan will be among the participants in the District Employes gold tournament October 26-27 at Indian Spring Country Club.

All employes of the District Government are eligible, and the casting system will be used to determine the prize winners, Richard S. (Dick) Tennyson, committee chairman, announced yesterday.

Entries should be sent to any of the following: Tennyson, Ed Brooke, Doug Brinkley, John Meaney or Miss Dorothy Kelso, Room 313, District Building.

There will be prizes in four flights.

Oysters Bow, 68-0.

U. S. Hurdling Hope in Inter-American Horse Show

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Quite breath-taking is the published announcement by young Mr. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt that he is inviting suggestions from the racing public for the improvement of conditions at the Pimlico track.

Hitherto, the only invitation extended racegoers by the Maryland tracks, generally, was the invitation to come in and risk their money, and at Pimlico even that invitation was none too cordial. In fact, at Pimlico there was always serious doubt whether the customer was invited or merely tolerated.

POVICH.

So, when young Mr. Vanderbilt, who has recently bought into the Pimlico track, extended the hand of friendship to the racegoer it's no less than a new deal at Pimlico. For years the folks whose ancestors were not a part of the Mayflower crew could not even buy their way into the Pimlico clubhouse, which was habitated mostly by folks long on pedigree and short on cash.

But as long as Vanderbilt is asking for 'em, there are a few suggestions that might make Pimlico a more friendly place to risk your dough. It does ease the grief a bit when you're losing if you get a fair shake for your money, but losing it in the cold, stiffly formal atmosphere of the old Pimlico is tantamount to having it rubbed in.

If young Vanderbilt is, indeed, serious about consulting the racing public with an eye to contributing to the comfort of the racing public then he should take heed at the No. 1 beef Pimlico racegoers have been raising for years. That is the inexcusable presence of the small mountain in the Pimlico infield which shuts off the fans' view of the horses in the backstretch.

Unless you're occupying one of the very exclusive clubhouse boxes or are fortunate enough to have a seat high in the grandstand you can't even follow a race at Pimlico. The field fades from the view of the fans on the lawn and the common folks on the rail almost after it enters the backstretch. They don't see a good half of the race. It couldn't be worse if darkness settled over the scene.

And those Cossacks who watch the gates at Pimlico are no gentle souls, either. Anybody who doesn't wear the proper tweeds or a stock collar is apt to get shoved around unmercifully, Mr. Vanderbilt. Even trainers who aren't dressed to the minute have been given the bum's rush by the track gate-keeping stooges, and many a one has withdrawn his horses for that reason.

Pimlico may be okay for the colonel's lady, but Judy O'Grady is outa luck if she expects any genteel treatment from Pimlico people. Some folks wouldn't know where to hire a lorgnette if they wanted to stoop to using one.

And another thing, Mr. Vanderbilt. It never has occurred to the Pimlico people, apparently, that 90 per cent of the fans don't carry binoculars or are not chart makers. Even if they could see through that mountain in the infield, they couldn't follow their particular horses. Every other Maryland track has its loud-speaker announcing system or an electric board to trace the progress of the race, but at Pimlico the fan can only imagine that his horse is in the running—and hope. Huh?

In Short—

Pimlico, in recent years, is finding its $6,000-a-day tax assessment by the city of Baltimore for the operating privilege a tremendous burden . . . which may account for the sudden interest in the comfort of the fans . . . who have been staying away in great numbers, except on Preakness day . . . old-time turf fans still remember one of the greatest killings ever made at the New Orleans track . . . the horse Magic Light was the medium of play . . . at the post in a mile-and-furlong race, Magic Light ran away before the start, circled the mile track twice, leaped a fence and dashed to its barn nearby . . . the race was delayed until they brought the nag back to the barrier and laughing bookmakers then offered 30-to-1 odds against the horse which had been quoted at 3 to 1 . . . Magic Light beat the barrier, led all the way and won the race by eight lengths . . . at Laurel several years ago the horse Donaghee, owned by George Goodacre, Washington restaurateur, ran away before the start, galloped a mile and a half, was brought back to the post and won the race at odds-on . . . and at Memphis many years ago, Clara Meader, a 60-to-1 shot, won on Friday the thirteenth . . . and was disqualified.

Washington Pros Hosts To Richmond Arrows

Hot on the heels of the pace-making Richmond Arrows, the Washington Pros have high hopes of gaining on the leaders Sunday when they stack up against the Portsmouth Cubs in a Dixie League game. It will be played at Griffith Satdium at 3 o'clock. Starting time has been moved back a half-hour. The same admission price of 55 cents for adults and 25 cents for children will prevail.

Washington, by virtue of its 7-0 victory over Alexandria last Sunday, has an excellent chance of winning the first league pennant. Alexandria, on the other hand, is just about out of the race unless the two leaders encounter unexpected opposition.

Gonzaga Grid Players Honored Scholastically

That brains as well as brawn are a quality of the modern football player was again emphasized yesterday, when four first-string players on the Gonzaga High eleven were honored for scholastic excellence.

Joe McDonald, end and Bill Gardner, back, each received the highly coveted "first honors" rating and Louis de Filipo, guard, and Jim O'Brien, back, each received "second honors." The ratings were accorded by Father Lawrence Kelly, rector of the school. Father Manager Ralph Patton also was awarded "first honors." Considered one of the most difficult prep schools in the Capital area scholastically, Gonzaga puts a high premium on scholastic proficiency.

Burton's 460 Sets Record In Federal

Wally Burton, Government Printing Office ace, featured a night of record-breaking bowling last night in the Federal League at Arcadia, establishing an all-time league record set of 460 with brilliant games of 150, 153 and 157. The score supercedes the 440 set mark held by Monk Walker.

Burton's big set paved the way for the G. P. O.'s three-game victory over the champion National Capital Parks team with the Printers putting together games of 638, 614 and 640 for a new league pinfall of 1,892.

Investigation continued to coast along in first place by swamping Civil Service with Veterans' Administration right on their heels after taking a three-game forfeit from the District Building five. Although taking the short end of its match with Labor, PWA managed to cling to third place. Mike Gorman kept PWA in the running with a 386 score.

Senate, in fourth place, bowed twice to I. B. E. W., and Carroll Daley and Vic Ontrich, each shooting sets of 352, enabled Navy to gain an odd-game decision over War.

Hydrographic, led by Tom Gallagher's 151 game, hung up two season record scores in the Navy Department League, spilling the maples for a 618 game and 1,699 set.

With Spud Topley showing the way, Operations annexed both individual and team honors in the Southern Railway Clerks League. Topley shot 148 and 359 for top game and set to boost his team's totals to 550 and 1,601.

Hockey Loop Absorbs Franchise of Americans

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The National Hockey League today took over the franchise of the New York Americans because of the club's failure to comply with "a formal demand for payment of its indebtedness to the league."

The club wil be operated during the coming season under the direction of Frank Calder, National League president.

By John R. Vosburgh.

It will be a pair of much-beaten teams gunning for a victory today when Western High and Roosevelt High meet in Western Stadium at 3:30 p. m. for the first inter-high series football game of the season. Between the two of them they have won one game in six starts, a 7-0 victory by Western over St. John's.

The game will mark the start of the forty-second inter-high grid series. The competition was started in 1892, but no series was held in 1901 and 1918. It will be the fortieth game between Western and Roosevelt or Old Business, Western not entering a team in 1896 and Business not entering in 1906.

A radically changed lineup will take the field for Western. Only five of the men who started against Petersburg High, Saturday, will be in the starting cast. Somewhat irritated at the 27-0 defeat absorbed by his team, Coach Dan Ahern has performed a hasty house cleaning which brushed six men to the sidelines.

Three new faces will be seen in the starting backfield. Morris Snead, a second-team all high choice last year, has recovered sufficiently from an early season injury to take over the quarterback post held by Blackie Brewer last week. Don Niklason and Leonard Weinstein are replacing George Smith and Dickie Lynham respectively.

Three Changes in Line.

Three changes have also been made in the line. Tom Ward is replacing Bryan Morse at center, Jim McCracken has taken over an end post, allowing Biff Oliphant to go to guard in place of Chubby Nye and Joe Biehman has ousted Jack Stonestreet at right tackle. Jim Farquarson at end, Phil Crabbe at tackle, Frank Donohoe at guard and Emory Prince at left half managed to hold their starting assignments.

Both teams are comparatively light. Western will be outweighed in the line an average of 8 pounds per man. Roosevelt's forward wall averages 168 to the Red team's 160, while its backfield averages 156 to 158 for Western.

The Rough Riders will be attempting to break a long string of defeats suffered at the hands of "the boys across the creek." In 1933, Western won, 32-0, but for the past two years has barely squeezed out a pair of 13-6 victories.

Ineligibility and injury have served to change the Roosevelt lineup considerably, the biggest loss being Ray Frederick, outstanding ground gainer.

Reserves—(Roosevelt) Beck (1), MacDonald (5), Smith (7), Moore (8), Miller (12), Bateman (14), Campbell (16), Mackall (18), Chaconas (21), Brennan (23), Rich (24) Fine (26), Dixon (28). (Western) Lynham (24) Murriel (25), Middleton (26), Brewer (27), Emerick (28), Ritt (29), Morse (35), Stonestreet (42), G. Smith (43), Iglesias (45), Stone (61), Krause (63), Broadbrent (66), Wilson (71), J. McCracken (72), Smith (76), Nye (80), Hanlon (82), Pappodeas (83). Referee—Paul Magoffin (Michigan). Umpire—Harry O'Meara (Gonzaga). Linesman—Bernard Eberts (Catholic U.).

D. C. Women Golfers In 'Field Day' Today

The anual "Field Day" program for members of the first, second and third teams of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, will be held today.

First and second teams will compete at Congressional Country Club, third teams at Chevy Chase. All third team players have been requested to come to Congressional at the conclusion of their program at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, first team captain, will be in charge of the events.

135-Pounders Note.

Gen. Keefer, 65, Aids Spencer in Golf Win

By Dave Herman.

Golfing friends of Gen. Frank Royer Keefer will be showering him with congratulations, for yesterday the general and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam's sharpshooting professional, won the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-senior championship at Chevy Chase's course.

With the senior talent furnished by Chevy Chase, the stately 65-year-old retired Army officer and his lanky partner drilled out a combined net of 148 with true military precision.

Gen. Keefer contributed a 95—22—73, and Spencer a gross of 75 as they led Indian Spring's George Diffenbaugh and Senior George Elliott by 3 strokes, and outstripped a fine field of some 15 teams.

General Leaves Early.

During his 30-odd years of golfing Gen. Keefer has never figured in an important championship. As a matter of fact, even after posting his score along with that of Spencer's, the general didn't think much of his team's chances of winning.

Among the early starters, he left for home shortly after completing his round, informing Mrs. Keefer, an ardent golfer herself, that he "played with a grand professional today, and I didn't break 90."

The general will learn about his victory when he turns to the sports pages this morning.

With Elliott and Diffenbaugh posting 89—11—78—73—151 for second prize, three other teams tied for third at 152. They were D. D. L. McGrew, 84—14—70, and Glenn Spencer, Baltimore pro, 82; Percival S. Risdale, 88-10—78, and Leo Walper, driving range professor, 74, and Admiral C. B. McVay, 94—14—80, and Bob Barnett, host pro 72.

McGrew's Score Lowest.

McGrew had the lowest gross score and lowest net among the seniors, his 84 being only two shots above partner Spencer's score, which really made the old chap very happy.

Had Glenn Spencer been in form, the McGrew-Spencer combination would have walked away with honors.

Barnett, with a brace of 36s, which included 15 pars—no birdies—won the individual pro prize. Diffenbaugh and Congressional's Roland Mackenzie tied for second, with 73, each.

'Gophers' Ranked On Top by Experts

regarded teams from the ranks of the unbeaten or untied, did not move many of the experts to discard the victims of form reversals. Thus Pitt, in the consensus, outranks the team to which it dropped a 7-0 decision, Duquesne. Southern California ranks No. 6 despite being tied by Washington State, which finished No. 22 in the voting, with 17 points. Santa Clara was one point higher than Cougars.

Princeton's defeat by Pennsylvania, however, dropped the Tigers almost out of sight, even though most Eastern observers expect Fritz Crisler's band to stage a comeback. The Tigers polled only 14 points, one less than this week's opponent, Navy.

Minnesota and Notre Dame, on the basis of current ratings, are playing two of the toughest schedules in the country. Two Gopher victims, Washington and Nebraska, are within the top 15. Two others, Purdue and Northwestern, who tackle Minnesota this week and next, are rated in the first five.

Pittsburgh, Army, Northwestern and Southern California, all to be played by Notre Dame, enjoy top ten ratings for the time being.

Duke, supported on most ballots as the South's standout team so far, may be challenged later by the two powerhouses of the Bayou area, Louisiana State and Tulane. The sensational comeback of Tulane under "Red" Dawson so far is one of the campaign's most conspicuous developments.

Gevinson in Final Bout as Amateur

Making his last amateur start when he puts up his hands against Sailor Mike Koerner, of Norfolk, Lou Gevinson will fight in the feature bout on the boxing card to be staged as a farewell gesture to him by his National Guard teammates, November 4, at Turner's arena.

In the semiwindup, Bob Mathias, local welter, will meet Bingo Evans, of Norfolk.

The suporting card will feature the return of such local stars as Steve Thompson, former District middleweight champ; Willie Feary, 1934 lightweight titleholder, and Steve Mamakos, who took the runner-up medals in the 1936 Golden Gloves and A. A. U. competitions.

The Guard boxers plan invasions of Richmond, October 29, and Norfolk, October 30.

On the Air Today

No feature of a variety program in many a day has entertained me more than the appearance of the characters from the "Mickey Mouse" animated cartoons in a recent "Hollywood Hotel" hour. Tonight Mickey and Minnie Mouse and Donald Duck, with Walt Disney, too, are highlighted in Fred Astaire's program at 9:30, WRC.

The persons who play Donald Duck, the hen and Mickey Mouse did a Disney interpretation of a bit of opera (the quartet from Rigoletto, I believe it was, despite the fact there were only three of them) show—and it almost laid me on the floor.

Disney has worked out a special musical sketch with Astaire for tonight, and I believe it will be worth your attention.

Mabelle Jennings finally begins that woman-in-the street series today for WJSV and a string of stations along the East Coast. She has the distinction of originating one of the few network programs from Washington in many years. The time is 1:15 and the location the corner of Thirteenth and F streets. Although men will be interviewed, the purpose is to inquire into what is on milady's mind. As one old asker-in-the-streeter to another—the very best of luck, Mabelle.

Other features today:

Stephen Vincent Benet—American poet participates in "American School of the Air," WJSV, at 2:15. Others: Whit Burnett, publisher; Lew Sarett, interpreter of Indian poetry and Harold S. Iatham, publisher.

Eddie Cantor—Addresses convention of Women's Zionist Organization, assembled at Philadelphia, WJSV, at 4.

Home Festival Night—For Radio Joe and Gang, WMAL, at 7:30.

Harry Richman—Makes another appearance with Ken Murray, WJSV, at 8:30.

Fred Waring—Honors his alma mater by playing the musical score of University of Pennsylvania's "Mask and Wig" production, WJSV, at 9.

Who Should Spank Junior—Father or mother? "Husbands and Wives" takes up this problem, WMAL, at 9:30.

Clark Gable—Deviates from his usual roles to portray George Washington in dramatization of Anderson's "Valley Forge," in "Caravan," WJSV, at 9:30. Philip Merivale played the role on the stage.

Here and there: Clark Gable fulfills an ambition when he plays the role of Washington tonight. He is said to have expressed such a desire to the movie moguls on one occasion and was squelched with "What, no love interest?" . . . Al Jolson's new show is set for a premiere on December 22. Producers of the program are trying to get a spot immediately preceding or following the Ken Murray half-hour . . . Rudy Vallee celebrates the opening of his eighth year in radio for the same sponsor Thursday night. He'll have Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence as his guest stars . . . Which calls to mind the item on England's short wave schedule for tomorrow night at 10:25—none other than Noel Coward. How Coward can be with Vallee Thursday night and at the Daventry station Wednesday night is a question the listener can chew on.

Gordon Hittenmark and the young gentlemen of the Naval Academy at Annapolis are in a deadlock. Gordon starts his "timekeeping" period at 6:30 a. m., with "The Daybreak Express"—hot music by Duke Ellington's orchestra. The cadets have written in asking for less "Express" and more music by Garber, Fields and Morgan. Gordon insists he needs the Ellington type music to get properly waked up. The academy accordingly, so it is said, has elected a "program manager" to bring pressure on Hittenmark to shorten the time required for the "Express." Heigh-ho, such goings-on!

Bad Lies Will Bear Watching on Arctic Links

By the Associated Press.

Barrow, Alaska, Oct. 19.—A nine-hole all-ice Arctic Ocean golf course, with polar bears and icebergs for hazards and illuminated by the northern lights, has captured the imagination of hardy sourdoughs who once jibed at golf club activities in the United States.

The envisioned new course—just over the ice from the North Pole—has supplanted the weather as the meat of conversation during endless nights of card playing at America's northernmost settlement.

Dr. R. W. Maurer, Government physician here and one of the eight whites in the Point Barrow area, is a golf enthusiast whose enthusiasm knows no bounds. He said he "looked over" the Arctic Ocean and found the nice icy place to lay out the golf course—right in the middle of the playground for polar bears where golf balls will be painted red and penalties will be severe.

No sand traps.

If your ball lands atop an iceberg, tee up another and penalize yourself one stroke.

If your ball rolls in front of a polar bear, you're disqualified if you play it. Otherwise tee up another.

If your ball rolls across longitude 158 or 158, it's out of bounds.

Contrary to the usual winter recreation of the whites, bridge has been ruled out. Pinochle will be played and Charles D. Brower, Artic trader, has built a pool table, the only one within the Arctic Circle.

Master Sergt. Stanley R. Morgan, Government radio operator who flashed the news of the Post-Rogers tragedy, will fiddle around with his "skinmobile," the "Roaring Boring Alice," which is built with skiis on the front wheels and oversized balloon tires with chains in the rear.

But the golf course will be the main sports attraction—or so they say.

Wheat Slumps With Decline At Winnipeg

Selling by European Houses Contributes to Downtown.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Setbacks of around 2 cents a bushel at Winnipeg did much to weaken the Chicago wheat market today. From a top of $1.16⅜, December wheat contracts here suffered a fall to $1.14¼. It was currently reported that to a large extent the Winnipeg wheat price reaction resulted from selling by European continental houses, and from dearth of any aggressive new export demand.

Chicago wheat futures closed unsteady ½@1½ cents under Saturday's finish; December, 114½@114⅝; May, 113¼@113⅝; July, 98½@98⅝; corn, ¾@1⅜ down; December, 93¼@93⅜; May, 88¾@89; July, 85¾@85⅞; oats, ¼@½ off; December, 40⅜; and rye at ½ decline to ⅛ advance, December, 82. Provisions results ranged from 15 cents lower to a gain of 2 cents.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Are Irregular, With Oils Favored, in Moderately Active Trading.

New York, Oct. 19.—Stocks resumed their irregular advance in a turnover of nearly 2,000,000 shares. Opening sales were large and trading unusually active for a half hour, but the accumulations of the week-end soon disappeared. Bonds were steady. December wheat dropped 1¼ of a cent to 114⅝ cents a bushel.

Stocks were not able to keep up their brisk opening pace, but early gains were stowed away for the most part and were not given up with the decline in trading activity in the afternoon. Closing prices were generally higher for nearly all groups. Only a sprinkling of advances of 2 and 3 points were to be found, and most of them among the preferred issues or other stocks with rather thin markets.

New High Level.

Brokers reported only a modest business done with Europe and buyers were more numerous on balance. Oil shares drew more speculative attention. Their activity and strength was a feature of the dealings. Metals continued to hold favor. The Sun's compilation of average prices for industrial stocks reached its highest level since the spring of 1931. Railroad shares moved slightly under their best prices of last Friday. Light profit taking in some of the recently strong stocks accounted for fractional recessions.

Foreign exchanges were interesting mainly to those who like to see control funds at work. Most of the important currencies, sterling, francs and guilders, continued on the offering side today and worked lower. The decline in guilders was considerable and probably reflected selling by commercial interests which had noticed the apparent intervention by the Dutch central bank last week to stop the guilder's rise. The market saw indications that the Bank of France was continuing to buy large quantities of sterling and dollars, which eventually will be turned into gold.

State of Trade.

The new week has begun with the balance of trade news still weighted on the side of the bulls, principally because of the making of the corporation earnings tide for third quarter, the nearer approach of heavier dividend distributions, the accumulating evidence of a good autumn and winter retail trade, the shading into the background of fears over foreign currency maneuvers and, perhaps, the robustness of the stock market. As usual enough is on the other side of the balance to provide argument.

This week's estimate of the steel industry's operating rate, made by the American Iron & Steel Institute, places the rate at 74.2 per cent of capacity, against 75.9 per cent last week, which set a new high record since the depression. Operations still are about on a level with a month ago and compare with 51.8 per cent a year ago. A further fall in the operating rate between now and the end of the year, not anticipated by the experts to be great, would still be seasonal and not indicative of a setback in general business.

Fallacy of NRA.

Taking a long-term view, a new element is now entering business which must affect calculations. That is the problem of rising costs. If the rise be slow, and if it be accompanied by an all around increase in production—i. e., consumer purchasing power—corporation earnings might hold or even increase. Unfortunately, at least some of the rising costs in prospect are promised not as a result of expanding demand for goods but rather because of political and other pressure exerted for higher wages, and because of the rising tax level.

In this connection it is to be regretted that the national Administration seems not to have learned the lesson taught it by business experience with the NRA, and so ably driven home by the Supreme Court. The NRA, it is now generally admitted, for all the good things that might be said about it by social reformers, was quite unsound economically, which means that its long-term effects were bound to be bad all through. It did much, it can now be seen, to hold back business recovery, as it lifted costs without compensation. It is eminently true that the real recovery in trade set in with the death of NRA, which incidentally occurred from natural causes a little in advance of the funeral oration delivered by the Supreme Court.

Purchasing Power.

Those who would restore NRA and who defend it stick to the old fallacy that, by shortening working hours and lifting wages, more people would be employed and the purchasing power of the county would be lifted. That overlooks the fact that, to pay more wages and thereby raise its costs, industry must have higher selling prices. Its profits on the whole are still low, calculated on the basis of return of capital investment. The public should not be misled by newspaper headlines recounting extra dividends by a few prosperous concerns.

Whether the higher costs could be passed on to the consuming public is a problem and certainly the NRA would nullify all efforts to stimulate our foreign trade, for other countries could not be made to buy American goods at rising prices. In any event, the fundamental lesson in economics that the public should learn is that, assuming the individual worker will receive higher wages and that as many or more of him will be employed as formerly, the most that an NRA system could do would be to lift that worker's purchasing power.

Peter and Paul.

That is far different from lifting the country's purchasing power, for the man who buys is compelled to contribute an extra slice of his purchasing power to the men who produces. No new dollars (increased purchasing power means increased production) are turned out. Purchasing power is not raised in the aggregate; it is merely shifted. More than likely, re-establishment of an NRA system would lower purchasing power, as wage beneficiaries also would have to give up much of their own increases to meet higher prices. Other objections, such as the freezing of invested capital, stifling of small competition, fostering of monopoly and the upbuilding further of bureaucracy to control every form of business activity, must also be considered.

Santa Claus.

The high rate of spending at the retail stores all summer, the heavy stocking up reported by wholesalers for the holiday trade, and the swing into the autumn with the public in a mood to dispense freely have led to predictions that this year the Christmas spending would break a few records. More people will have more election money to disburse at the holiday season than ever before, and a hint as to the spending that can be expected from more legitimate sources is given by the size of the funds in the Christmas Clubs. These savings accounts at the banks will, according to The Sun's survey, amount to 10 or 15 per cent higher than a year ago. Tips have gone the rounds on most of the listed stocks of department stores.

Clarendon, Va. Trust Company Doubles Space

Work Started on Addition to Expand Lobby and Offices.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A growth of more than 100 per cent in business in the last three years has necessitated an addition to the building of the Clarendon Trust Co., which will practically double the banking offices of the institution. Work is already in progress on the foundation of the new addition to the building, which will be constructed of brick on an Indiana limestone base matching the architectural appearance of the existing structure, according to T. E. Sebrell, jr., vice president, secretary and treasurer of the institution.

The enlarged quarters will provide a public lobby that is double the size of the present lobby, with additional offices for officials of the institution, and a new director's room. A feature of the remodeled and enlarged banking quarters will be the coupon booths, which will enable depositors and customers of the bank to transact personal business with a maximum of convenience and privacy.

Established in 1921, the company has been a landmark in the business district of Clarendon, Va., the building facing the public square, at the intersection of Wilson and Washington boulevards. The institution has paid dividends continuously since 1923, 18 months after it was inaugurated. In 1922, surplus and undivided profits totaled approximately $16,000. They now total $55,000. Assets totaling approximately $500,000 in 1933 have shown the unusual growth to almost a million and a quarter in the three-year period, thus reflecting the rapid growth of Clarendon and Arlington County as a whole in the same period.

Officers of Clarendon Trust Co.

Officers and directors of the company comprise Conrad C. Smith, president; Ashton C. Jones, vice president; T. E. Sebrell, vice president, secretary treasurer and trust officer; E. H. Piggott, assistant treasurer; Charles T. Jesse, general counsel, and W. A. Coates, T. J. Crack and C. C. Lamond, directors.

A. E. SPARKS.

T. C. Cook, general agent for the National Life Insurance Co., of Vermont, announces appointment of A. Edwin Sparks as production manager for the Washington agency. Mr. Sparks brings to his new work a splendid insurance background. For the last seven years he has been engaged in the business as an underwriter and assistant manager for another company.

Prior to entering the insurance business in 1929, he was engaged in the automobile tire business and opened the first Meisel Tire Store in Washington at 1601 Fourteenth street northwest. Mr. Sparks attended the University of Tennessee, the United States Naval Academy and the National Law School in Washington. He is a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity. His new offices are located at 917 Fifteenth street northwest.

W. C. Wilder, who with Maj. Gen. Richmond P. Davis, U. S. A., retired, has been co-manager of the local office of Fenner & Beane, has taken charge of that office, Maj. Gen. Davis having become associated with Harriman & Keech.

Mr. Wilder has been connected with Fenner & Beane's local office since January and has been with the firm for 15 years, ten of which were spent as manager of the firm's office at Charlotte, N. C., and five, prior to that, at Columbia, S. C. Mr. Wilder is a native of Georgia.

Members of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association visited the vaults of the American Security & Trust Co. recently. The visit, arranged by the section's executive council, gave its members an opportunity of inspecting the large vaults and discussing safe deposit service with equipment at hand. Members were accompanied by bank officials responsible for operation of its safe deposit departments. The unusually interesting session had a record attendance.

John E. O'Brien, chairman, bulletin committee, District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, announces its regular monthly meeting tomorrow afternoon at 12:15 o'clock in the small ballroom, Willard Hotel. The speaker is announced as Dr. Henry W. Cook, medical director, Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

$500,000,000 Action Against General Motors

Stockholder Charges Bonuses Were Paid Illegally to Officers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—Harry Jacobson, a Chicago holder of 100 common shares of General Motors stock, filed suit today to recover stock bonuses totaling more than $500,000,000 which he charged were paid illegally to officers and directors of the General Motors Corporation. The suit was filed in the United States District Court.

The General Motors Corporation, the Managers Securities Co., the General Motors Management Corporation, the General Motors Securities Co., the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., and officials of the companies were named defendants.

Jacobson, through his counsel, demanded restitution and cancellation of bonuses dating as far back as 1918; an injunction to prevent payment of bonuses; recovery from individual defendants for the value of stock received by them; the appointment of receivers for General Motors Management Corporation and General Motors Securities Co., and the establishment of a trust fund in which reimbursement may be deposited.

Du Pont Net $2.04 In Third Quarter

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. in a preliminary report today for the quarter ended September 30 showed net income equal to $2.04 a common share, including dividends from General Motors investment equal to $1.09 a share on Du Pont common.

This compares with $2.06 a share, including $1.11 from General Motors, in the preceding quarter and $1.48, including 68 cents from General Motors in the third period of 1935.

For the nine months ended September 30 earnings totaled $5.31, of which $2.65 was from the motors investment, compared with $3.22, including $1.13 from General Motors, a year ago.

Potato Futures Soar To All-Time High

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP).—Potato futures established new peaks for the year, with March delivery contracts at an all-time high price, in an active session in which gains ranged from 10 to 20 cents a hundredweight, today March potatoes soared 20 points to $3.10; October closed at $2.35, and January at $2.90 a hundred. The skyrocketing of the futures was attributed by traders to predictions of freezing temperatures tonight in Northwest areas, moderate receipts and a good demand for Western stock here.

Cotton Futures React After Rise

New York Oct. 19 (AP).—Cotton declined from moderate early advances today under hedge selling and liquidation. January sold off from 12.03 to 11.90 and closed at 11.92, with final prices 7 points net lower to 1 higher.

Future Price Range.

	High	Low	Last
January	12.03	11.90	11.92
March	12.11	12.00	12.01-02
May	12.13	12.04	12.07-08
July	12.12	12.02	12.04-05
October	11.61	11.56	11.57-58

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easier today under increased hedging in March and May and Western selling, promoted by the reaction in lard and easiness of hogs and corn.

Final prices were 9 to 11 points net lower. Sales, 51 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; October closed 9.88; December, 9.86; January, 10.05; March, 10.11; May, 10.18.

Naval Stores Firm.

Savannah, Oct. 19 (AP).—Turpentine firm, 36; sales, 20; receipts, 306; shipments, 208; stock, 36,167; rosin, firm; sales, 213; receipts, 2,221; shipments, 663; stock, 94,439. Quote: B, D, E, F, and G, 6.00; H, I, K, and M, 6.05; N and WG, 6.07½; WW and X, 6.85.

THE PROTECTION of Your Estate

• Size of the Estate has no bearing upon the measure of care, fidelity and safety with which it is administered by this 122-year-old bank.

• The cost of services is very moderate . . . easily within the reach of everyone having funds, property or insurance.

• The Trust Business, now handled by "The Metropolitan," aggregates over $36,000,000.00.

BE SURE
Your Executor Can Answer "YES"

"Have you acted as Executor before?

"Are you experienced in investment—mortgage—real estate—accounting?

"Are you familiar with inheritance taxes, transfer taxes, and the other death duties which so complicate the business of estate settlement and management today?

"Can you spare the time from your own affairs without embarrassment?

"Can you guarantee that illness or absence will not interfere with the performance of your duties as Executor?

"Will you live to complete the execution of my estate?"

To these and other important questions American Security can answer "YES." Today we are handling Trust Business valued at over $120,000,000—the largest in the District. Our experience, integrity and responsibility have been fully demonstrated. Ask for new booklet, "The Trust Company in Operation," or talk with our trust officer about your estate.

PHILIPPINE
TOTALLY TAX FREE*

TODAY, during a period of record low interest rates, when high-grade, long-term tax-exempt bonds sell close to a 2.00% basis and second-grade issues, formerly in default, afford yields of as low as 3.25%, Philippine obligations continue to be available at prices yielding approximately 3.85%. These yields on Philippine bonds prevail in spite of a unique debt record, the strongest financial position in the history of the Philippine Government and the relationship of the United States Government to the bonds.

ESTATE
15 MINUTES FROM DOWNTOWN.
A HOME BUILT FOR A CONSERVATIVE AND CULTURED MIND.
In its ingenious and unusual features it exhibits a determination to place the elements in their proper positions on the site, bringing an esthetic satisfaction. The architect has produced harmony. Dignity and richness are noteworthy, manifesting a fine appreciation of good material. Much of the charm is due to open passages connecting various room groups and other features which furthered the owner's expressed ends. Elevation and a beautiful view determine the situation of the large living room and front porch. The entire estate will stand up under critical inspection, located in a wooded section where large trees cast a perfect shadow on the entire landscape. The home alone is worth the price. Four beautiful bedrooms with space for two more to be added. Full basement, oil heat, wine cellar. Estate built 11 years ago. For further particulars, call Mr. Hines or Mr. Cook.

10-20
NED, YOU WALKED INTO THAT TACKLERS ARMS JUST AS IF IT WERE A CASE OF LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT—GET GOING!
ALL RIGHT, SHEKELS—GET IN AT LEFT IN PLACE OF BRANT!
YOU—SAY! WHAT IS THIS ANYWAY?

APPLE MARY — By Martha Orr

I DON'T THINK YOU HAD ANYTHING TO DO WITH SETTING FIRE TO THAT STORE, MARY, BUT YOU WERE SEEN AROUND THERE LAST NIGHT SO YOU'LL HAVE TO EXPLAIN.
OF COURSE, OFFICER, AND I THINK I CAN TELL YOU WHO DID START THE FIRE, BUT HE ISN'T THE FELLOW YOU'RE AFTER—HUH, YOU BET YOUR LIFE HE IS.
I TELL YOU HE'S JUST A TOOL FOR SOMEONE ELSE.
GOOD GRIEF, WHAT'S HAPPENING? WHAT'S COMING?
WELL, COME ON, LET'S HAVE HIS NAME.
HELP! MURDER HEL-UP!

Graves of Two Heroes of 1776 Will be Marked

Two Revolutionary War heroes—father and son—will be honored Saturday when their half-forgotten graves in Greenbelt, the Federal building project in nearby, Maryland, are marked during ceremonies sponsored by the Prince Georges County Chapter of the D. A. R.

Down through the years, these graves have remained unmarked and few county residents know of their existence. The soldiers were Lieut. Isaac Walker, who died in 1807 and his son, Nathan, who died in 1842.

Their graves are on a tract of land granted to the Walker family by Lord Baltimore in 1754. Four other members of the family also are buried on the site.

When the Resettlement Administration took over the land to develop Greenbelt, it was feared the bodies would have to be moved. Arrangements were made, however, to leave the gr...es intact and members of the D. A. R. completed plans to erect markers.

Following Saturday's ceremonies at 3 p. m., resettlement officials will conduct visitors on a tour of the Greenbelt project.

Japanese Plotter Commits Suicide

Tokyo, Oct. 19 (AP).—Capt. Wataru Tanaka, of the Japanese army general staff, killed himself today because of his participation in the military uprising against the Tokyo government last February.

Army officials declared he had participated in the uprising, in which three elder Japanese statesmen were assassinated, because he was convinced the rule of the privileged classes in Japan should be halted.

Capt. Tanaka's connection with the revolt was investigated by a military court which condemned 17 other participants to death and sent numerous others to prison.

Portuguese Crown Stolen From Crypt

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 19 (AP).—The bejeweled crown once worn by the Kings of Portugal was stolen in broad daylight yesterday from the Pantheon, historic burial place of several monarchs.

Two men and a woman, frequent visitors to the Pantheon, were seen to kneel in prayer at the tomb of King Carlos and then at the crypt of Crown Prince Louis Philippe.

At closing time it was discovered that the doors to the glass reliquary containing the collection of crown jewels were open. The gold, gem-studded crown was gone.

Mrs. Atwell, Husband Ordered Out of Town

Westport, Conn., Oct. 19 (AP).—Judge Frank McMahon gave the former Mrs. Roy Atwell and Cyril Tolley, her new husband, one week "to get out of town—or else" today in town court after finding them giulty on charges of breach of peace and intoxication.

The "or else" was to serve a total of 60 days each in jail, 30 days on each count.

The crowded courtroom heard Paul R. Connery, of Norwalk, counsel for the slim, blonde Mrs. Tolley, and Tolley, a golf professional related to the English golfer of the same name, enter pleas of innocence for his clients.

Judge McMahon said the pair, married more than a week ago, had brought "undue publicity to Westport and it's got to stop." The former Mrs. Atwell is the divorced wife of the radio comedian.

Torso of Woman Reported Sighted

Quincy, Mass., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—State police investigating the mysterious murder of Mrs. Grayce Asquith, whose burlap-wrapped legs were found in Boston Harbor a fortnight ago, said they received a report late today that a woman's head and torso were seen floating a half-mile off Hough's Neck.

Mrs. Asquith's head and torso have been sought since her hacked-off legs were washed ashore two weeks ago today. The 41-year-old former shoe model was slain at her East Weymouth cottage. Date of her murder was fixed at September 19.

Nineteen-year-old Victor Davidson, of Hough's Neck, near here, reported he was gathering driftwood a half-mile off shore when he sighted part of a woman's body floating a foot beneath the surface. He was so frightened, he said, that he rowed to shore immediately and told his story to Charles Kelty, also of Hough's Neck, who reported the incident to State police.

Catholic Women Urged To Wage Fight on Reds

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 19 (AP).—Delegates to the sixteenth convention of the National Council of Catholic Women were warned today by the Most Rev. John F. Noll, bishop of Fort Wayne, Ind., to wage a determined campaign in opposition to communism.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Ciocognani, apostoic delegate to the United State, and Right Rev. John J. Burke general secretary of the Catholic Welfare conference, addressed the convention by radio from Washington.
